Seek UN Help To Stop Indo-China Invasion

A PRE-CONCERT TRYOUT is given St. Paul's Presbyterian Church organ by Richard Ellsasser, renowned American organist who is presenting a concert on this organ tonight. This is Mr. Ellsasser's first visit to Peterborough, but not to Canada. He has given concerts in Toronto, Hamilton, Brantford, Woodstock and Kitchener.

2 Canadians List 40 More PoWs

Smuggle Out Book With Names Of Other Captives

TOKYO—(CP)—Two freed Canadian soldiers today disclosed a smuggled prisoner-of-war list containing the names of 40 Americans, Canadian and French soldiers they said were in good health in North Korean prison camps.

L. Cpl. Paul Dugal of Quebec City and Pte. Arthur J. Baker of Montreal, released by the Reds in the disabled prisoner exchange, said that the men listed in two small books had asked them to notify their wives and parents of their condition.

It was Dugal who April 20 revealed a list of 16 Canadian prisoners to Canadian Press correspondent Bill Boss shortly after his release by the Reds at Panmunjom. They had been listed as missing and believed killed in action. Baker was included in the list as the only Canadian hospital case and he was released a couple of days after Dugal.

Baker read the names and addresses of 14 prisoners from a diary he smuggled from North Korea. The other names were in a tiny address book made of pages of cigarette paper which Dugal smuggled back. The French-Canadian said the Reds took a larger book away from him, so he gave up smoking for a while to save rationed cigarette paper for writing.

SOME PUBLISHED

Today's list contained the names of six Canadian prisoners, but all but one of the names had been made public last week. The exception was an unidentified soldier.

However, Dugal and Baker had the next-of-kin listed—Mrs. A. Gewer of New Waterford, N. S. The soldiers said she is the mother of the unidentified soldier.

"I know a lot of people are worrying a lot," Baker said. "They will be glad to know their sons and husbands are safe."

"We don't know yet when we're leaving for Canada. We're mighty anxious, though."

Dugal and Baker were flown to Kure with other Commonwealth troops after their repatriation. They now are at Tokyo hospital. Both were wounded but they now are well enough to walk.

Both said the Reds treated them fairly well.

GET FIRST WORD

The smuggled list brought at least eight U. S. families the first definite word that their sons are still reported alive in Korea.

One name was that of Pte William McCartney, 22-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. John McCartney of Pittsburgh. His parents said he had been officially listed as killed in action last year.

When informed by the Associated Press that her son was reported alive, Mrs. McCartney cried:

"Oh, I just can hardly believe it. But praise the lord, it must be true. I have been praying and praying that the report Billy was killed was wrong."

"Oh thank you, thank you," she said. "He's the only one I have left. His father died in January this year. I've been ill ever since

Fights Secret Orders

OTTAWA (CP)—Notice of a move to try to rule out any more secret orders-in-council passed by cabinet was given the Commons today by Stanley Knowles (CCF-Winnipeg North Centre). He placed on the order paper notice of a private bill which would, in effect, end the cabinet's current right to pass orders under the Emergency Powers Act and keep them secret.

Bulganin Insists West Show Peaceful Deeds

MOSCOW (CP)—The Soviet Union's defence minister, Marshal Nikolai Bulganin, called on leaders of the Western world today to back up their recent peaceful statements with peaceful actions.

The head of Russia's armed forces obviously had President Eisenhower and Prime Minister Churchill in mind.

But until the West acts on its expressed desire for peace, Bulganin declared in a short May Day address in Moscow's Red Square, Russia will continue to "show due care for ensuring the defence and security of our country."

The defence minister demanded substantial evidence — particularly a reduction of armaments in lands near the Soviet Union—as a sign that other countries seek a peaceful solution of the world's problems.

"The Soviet government will welcome any steps on the part of other governments genuinely aimed at the easing of tension in the international situation and would like to see peaceful statements made by the leaders of these governments supported by deeds," he said.

MAY DAY HIGHLIGHHT

The speech was a highlight of Moscow's May Day celebration which also included a short military review and a longer workers' parade.

Bulganin said the Soviet Union believes that with "goodwill and a sensible approach, all international differences can be solved by peaceful means."

Just before speaking, he inspected troops drawn up in Red Square and nearby streets. The Square was decorated with portraits of Lenin and Stalin, coats of arms of the 16 Soviet republics and party slogans.

Bulganin's statement came as

Britain Begins Atomic Station

LONDON (AP)—Britain announced today that work will begin at once on what British scientists expect to be the first atomic electric power station in the world.

The project will be located in the Calder Hill area in Cumberland near a plant where plutonium, the atomic explosive, is made.

Although no details of the plant have been announced, it is believed the plant will have a capacity of around 50 megawatts, a sufficient amount of electricity to supply the needs of a small town.

Britain thus far has used atomic power to provide central heating for a number of office blocks at her Harwell atomic station.

The Calder Hill project will represent an attempt to build a somewhat conventional electricity generating station that will be powered by atomic energy.

Reds Poised For Vital Blow In Laos

Report U. S. Planning Additional Aid As Emergency Grows

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The United States has assured France it will strongly support an appeal to the United Nations for help in resisting the Communist invasion of the Indo-Chinese state of Laos.

American diplomats and French officials have been consulting in Paris on the dangerous Indo-Chinese crisis.

The appeal to the United Nations, as understood here, would cover two main points:

1. A denunciation of the Communist invasion which is considered here to have the direct material support of Red China and to be part of the Kremlin's master pattern for conquest in southeast Asia.

2. A call on member nations to aid French and native Indo-Chinese forces in resisting the aggressors.

ADDITIONAL AID

Reports from congressional meetings this week said State Secretary John Foster Dulles had disclosed the United States is planning additional emergency aid to Indo-China to strengthen the anti-Communist forces in Laos. The nature of this aid has not been disclosed.

French and native forces have received a steady stream of American supplies, as well as training in use of American weapons, for years. But these forces have been fighting throughout the period of the Indo-China war in the state of Viet-Nam, neighboring Laos.

DECIDED SOON

HANOI, Indo-China (AP)—The battle deciding the fate of the ancient mountain kingdom of Laos—besieged by the Vietminh legions of Moscow-trained Ho Chi Minh—may be under way within 48 hours.

By then the bare-footed invaders from neighboring Viet Nam, who have engulfed over one-third of the interior Indo-Chinese state in less than three weeks, are expected to attack King Sisavang Vong's royal seat of Luangprabang.

If the Vietminh win there, it may be only a short time until they reach the borders of Burma and Thailand, each of which has a sizable Communist element. The Vietminh now are only 80 miles from Thailand and 160 miles from Burma.

Four to five Vietminh divisions have poured into Laos since the first Red attack there April 12.

GETTING CLOSE

Today the invaders were reported within 12 miles of Luangprabang, on the north and east. The French have promised a last-

Pair Sentenced To Die For Jeweler's Murder

BUFFALO, N. Y. (AP)—Maurice (Digger) O'Dell, 27, and Walter F. Griffin, 26, were sentenced today to die in the electric chair at Sing Sing prison for the murder of a Buffalo jeweler.

Justice William H. Munson ordered the two Canadians executed the week of June 7 "in the manner prescibed by the law." Both are from Hamilton, Ont.

They were convicted April 17 of first-degree murder in the killing of Donald F. Hurd, 45, during a daylight holdup of Hurd's store in downtown Buffalo last Dec. 9.

First-degree murder convictions in New York are automatically reviewed by the state Court of Appeals.

UN Demands Reds Release At Least 375 More PoWs

PANMUNJOM—(AP)—The Allies warned the Reds bluntly today that failure to hand over 375 more disabled Allied soldiers "we know you are holding" leaves "no choice but to question your sincerity" in full truce talks. As liaison officers accused the Communists of a holdout in the sick and wounded exchange, truce negotiators got nowhere in trying to choose a neutral country as caretaker for some 48,000 able-bodied Red captives who refuse to go home.

The UN command today suggested Sweden. The Reds again refused to name any country, despite Allied prodding. The Communists already had rejected Switzerland, previously nominated by the UN.

In the liaison meeting, the Reds denied the holdout accusation, calling it "groundless" and "wilful slander" not worth refuting. They admit holding some sick and wounded Allies, but said these are too ill to send home.

STILL IN STOCKADES

Many of the 684 Allied captives released last week told of disabled comrades still in stockades of North Korea.

The UN command used these figures to pinpoint at least 234 non-Koreans and 141 Koreans left behind in "only a part of your announced . . . camps." The Allies obviously were convinced the Reds hold even more than the 375.

After returning 684 Allied disabled, the Reds said April 26 that was all. They originally promised 605.

Rear-Admiral John Daniel, chief liaison officer, told the Reds the Allies are returning all eligible Communists, and the Allies expect the Communists to do the same.

The UN command said it would make its last delivery of Red prisoners Sunday, bringing the total of Reds returned to nearly 7,000. The exchange began April 20. The Allies originally pledged 5,800.

The Allies did not say how many Reds would be handed over Sunday but they reportedly will include some women.

Daniel said the UN is using the "most liberal criteria" in deciding which Red captives are eligible, adding:

"We anticipate that additional sick and injured personnel may be found eligible to return to your side in the future."

Brawls Erupt In Tokyo After Parade

By JIM BECKER

TOKYO (AP)—Jeering mobs of May Day marchers clashed with steel-helmeted police in downtown Tokyo late today, ending a relatively quiet celebration of the traditional Communist holiday.

Ugly brawls erupted when bands of diehard young leftists refused to disperse as columns of May Day marchers wound up a parade through downtown streets.

About 10,000 jeering, shouting youths—many brandishing staves and clubs—tangled with 1,500 helmeted police.

The clashes occurred about half a mile from the Imperial Palace plaza, scene of last year's bloody, anti-American May Day riots.

HALT TRAFFIC

Some of the young leftists linked arms and marched 12-abreast through the streets, halting traffic and occasionally jostling a foreigner.

AP correspondents Forrest Edwards and George McArthur reported the youths were in an angry mood and were being egged on by many bystanders.

Edwards was knocked down in one scuffle, but said the marchers were "very careful" not to trample on him. He was not hurt.

As tension mounted the mobs abandoned banners and flags bearing such perennial slogans as "go home Yankees." Hundreds of such banners with slogans in Japanese and English were carried in the parade.

All traffic was halted for four blocks on one of Tokyo's busiest downtown streets. Twice police cleared the street, but the mob surged back.

Some police were struck by clubs.

The brawls broke out after most of 500,000 laborers who took part in the day's parades had headed for home. There had been no violence as the marchers paraded—under the watchful eyes of the police.

Criminal Code Bill Postponed

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister St. Laurent, faced with prospects of an extended debate, indicated today that the huge bill to amend the Criminal Code won't be proceeded with at this session of Parliament.

Opposition parties left no doubt that they proposed to make extensive remarks on the 26-page report of a special committee which studied the first full-fledged revision of the code in years.

Mr. St. Laurent said that in view of this, in view of the fact many members would shortly be leaving for the Coronation and that there wouldn't be a post-Coronation sitting, it would not be in the public interest to proceed with the bill at this time.

George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, earlier had suggested that if the bill was to be debated the House should cancel its current special three-sittings-a-day schedule and go back to regular hours.

The House is aiming for an end to its sittings in a week's time.

Snow Blankets Prairie Areas

EDMONTON (CP)—Heavy, wet snow fell overnight in scattered Prairie areas as cool, wet weather continued. The weather office said that type of weather will continue over most of the Prairies tomorrow and probably Sunday.

Hardest hit was southwestern Saskatchewan where Swift Current reported four inches of snow. The snowbelt extended into the Medicine Hat area of southeastern Alberta.

Snow was reported from Edmonton, Red Deer and Rocky Mountain House in central Alberta, Coronation in the east-central region and Grande Prairie in the northwest.

Elsewhere on the Prairies, rain was falling. Temperatures ranged 15 to 20 degrees below the seasonal normal of 60, the weather office said.

Talking Horse's Tip Gives Mother Hope

GUELPH, Ont. (CP)—A tip from a talking horse has given a grey-haired mother new hope of finding her daughter who vanished three years ago.

Mrs. Sheldon Crumback said Thursday night the horse indicated her 22-year-old daughter, Mabel, is in Maine Mrs. Grumback recently sent photographs and information about the girl to Maine newspapers which published them.

She has since received letters from Maine, but nothing yet to lead her to the attractive girl who disappeared from her home in a Toronto suburb one night while her parents were attending a wedding in Detroit.

IN NEWS

Lady Wonder was in the news four months ago when police credited the animal with helping them find the body of Danny Matson, 4, missing two years from his home in Quincy, Mass.

About that time reporter Dorothy Howarth of the Toronto Telegram went to see the horse. One of the questions she asked Lady Wonder was "where is Mabel Crumback?" The reply was "in Maine."

Willing to try out any possibility of finding the girl, Mrs. Crumback wrote to the newspapers in Maine.

"My reasons for thinking Mabel may be in Maine will likely sound foolish to you," she wrote. "They would have to me, three years ago. Now, I am not so sure."

She said the talking horse "has been proven right in several things, so why not on Mabel?"

A Maine resident wrote Mrs. Crumback about seeing a dark girl who had a decided French accent.

"I don't think she was Mabel," Mrs. Crumback said. "Mabel grew up around Toronto and hadn't any accent."

A Portland taxi driver wrote her that he had helped a mysterious woman into a cab. He thought the woman might be Mabel.

"But I'm sure she wasn't the right one," said Mrs. Crumback.

Bomb Explosions Shake Buenos Aires

BUENOS AIRES (Reuters)—A series of bomb explosions shook this jittery capital overnight and May Day dawned with police under tightened orders to watch for trouble.

One of the bombs—there were at least six and possibly seven—exploded 100 yards from the presidential palace.

President Peron is due to address a May Day rally. Political turmoil has kept the city tense for three weeks now since Peron denounced an anti-government plot.

Today's rally will be held in the central Plaza de Mayo—where two bombs killed six persons and set off city-wide rioting and arson outbreaks during an address by the president two weeks ago.

Today's bombs caused some damage but no casualties were reported.

Given 2,000 Organ Concerts Noted Organist Is In City

"There is a tremendous future in organ today," Richard Ellsasser, renowned American organist said during an interview today. Mr. Ellsasser is in Peterborough to present an organ concert at St. Paul's Presbyterian Church tonight. This organist, who at 27 years of age has already gained fame as a concert artist and composer, expressed great optimism for the opportunities open to today's organ student.

"There were more organs than pianos sold in the United States last year," Mr. Ellsasser explained. "In fact the development in the electric organ field is threatening to push pianos out of the home. This opens up tremendous possibilities for organ teachers."

Another interesting viewpoint Mr. Ellsasser expressed was the importance for an aspiring musician to have a good academic education.

"This is of great importance," he said. "There are too many musicians around who know only music."

HIS OWN POLICY

Mr. Ellsasser is one person who has practised what he preaches. He graduated from Baldwin-Wallace University, Berea, Ohio, with his Bachelor of Arts degree when he was 17. He received his Master of Arts degree at the university of New York and later he took post graduate work in theology at Harvard and Boston Universities and the University of California.

"I majored mostly in psychology in my art courses, but I was planning to enter the ministry. I gave up that idea because I had too many concerts."

Tonight's audience may be surprised at the youthful appearance of this organist. His appearance belies his 27 years. And even more surprising is that at this early age, when many musicians are just nicely getting started in a professional career, Mr. Ellsasser has between 1,500 and 2,000 concerts behind him—concerts in United States, Canada, Latin America, England and France.

"I started early," Mr. Ellsasser explained," I started studying piano at three and gave my first concert in my native city, Cleveland, Ohio, when I was six. When I was seven I played a Mozart Concerto with the New York Philharmonic. I became interested in organ when I was nine and gave my first organ concert when I was 10 in Cleveland."

In addition to attending university and going on concert tours,

Believe PoWs In Secret Camp

TOKYO (AP)—A secret Communist prison camp, hidden deep in North Korea, may hold some Allied fighting men known to be Red prisoners but who never have been seen by other Allied captives, a young navy flier said today.

He reported one was a U. S. marine officer and atomic energy expert.

"There was one camp we have very little information on," Lieut. Marvin S. Broomhead said in an interview at Tokyo army hospital. He was repatriated in last week's exchange of disabled war prisoners.

"No one knows exactly where it is. It was rumored that this camp was used for 'special purposes.'

"There were people who were captured whom no one ever saw. These people were being sent somewhere. We deduced they were being sent to this other camp."

Broomhead, 26, of Salt Lake City, said the Communists sometimes broke down prisoners and forced them to "confess" things they had not done. He said other prisoners believed these men also were sent to the mysterious camp.

The flier said one of the prisoners never seen by other PoWs was a marine lieutenant-colonel with a background of experience with the atomic energy commission. That officer was shot down over North Korea some months ago.

Double-Decker Bus Plunges Into Store

LONDON (AP)—A huge double-decker bus plunged into a shop today, killing two persons and injuring 13 others.

Lunchtime passers-by scattered frantically as the bus skidded in a rainy drizzle and plowed its way through guard railings lining the sidewalk.

The two dead persons—one a woman—were trapped as the bus mounted the sidewalk and crashed through the shop's plate-glass window.

U.K. Woman Refused Entry Instructions From Canada

LONDON (CP)—A spokesman for the Canadian immigration department here said today Mrs. Monica Felton was refused permission to enter Canada "on instructions from Canada." The spokesman declined to elaborate.

In Ottawa Thursday night, a representative of the left-wing Canadian Peace Congress asked Immigration Minister Walter Harris why Mrs. Felton had not been admitted. Harris said he would ask for a report from immigration authorities in London.

Mrs. Felton, 46, was to have left Saturday for a coast-to-coast tour of Canada.

Mrs. Felton sprang into prominence here after her visit to North Korea in 1951. In a pamphlet written on her return, she claimed the United Nations forces were guilty of atrocities. "The total picture," she wrote, "is one of horror on a scale that can be compared only with the behaviour of the Nazis in occupied Europe."

Mrs. Felton, who does not speak Korean, Chinese or Russian, referred throughout the pamphlet to being "told" of atrocities. She was later dismissed as chairman of the Stevenage Development Corporation, an organization responsible for developing one of Britain's "new tons."

She is chairman of the National Assembly of Women, proscribed by the Labor party and described in the House of Commons as a "Soviet-inspired" organization.

Take 32,000 PoWs India Says

SEATTLE (AP)—India is willing and equipped to receive 32,000 Allied held Korean-war prisoners who do not want to go home, Dr. Shri Shridhara Nehru said here Thursday.

The retired Indian judge, a cousin of India's prime minister, said his country "is eager to perform whatever service it can to bring about a truce in Korea." The Allies have told the Communists to name a non-Asian country as ward of the prisoners. Dr. Nehru, here on a speaking tour, told an interviewer his country is "better situated geographically to receive the prisoners than Switzerland, Mexico or any other neutral nation which has been suggested."

Dive Bombers Blast Big Radio Station

SEOUL (AP)—Fifty F-86 Sabre jets flying as dive bombers today blasted a big radio station and a military headquarters building near the north Korean capital, Pyongyang.

The 5th air force reported the attack shortly after announcing that the 8th fighter-bomber wing is flying F-86s, giving the UN command four complete Sabre wings in Korea.

The number of Sabres in combat has been doubled in the last few months.

Other Allied fighter-bombers have cratered at least seven Communist airfields in North Korea in the last week to keep them out of operation, an air force officer said.

Tornado Like Atomic Blast

13 Killed, 300 Hurt In Georgia Cyclone

WARNER ROBINS, Ga. (AP)—A tornado blasted the Warner Robins area with atomic blast fury Thursday, killing 13 persons, injuring an estimated 250 to 300 others and causing millions of dollars worth of property damage.

Twelve bodies were pulled from destroyed houses in the town of Warner Robins, 15 miles southeast of Macon.

The 13th victim was a four-year-old child, killed in a highway accident in flight from the storm. More bodies may be buried under widespread rubble in the town itself and in wreckage littering the Robins air force base, which serves as a supply and maintenance depot and service headquarters for the 14th air force.

Property damage to the installation was unofficially estimated at more than $1,000,000. Several large structures on the base were flattened.

SMASHES APARTMENTS

After smashing 30 two-unit apartments in a housing project near the base, the storm entered the base itself, tore down the guard house and whirled giddily over the area. Some structures were levelled, some unroofed, and others were left untouched.

About 60 civilian workers in the payroll office left their jobs only 15 minutes before the storm demolished the building. An automobile parked near the structure was tossed onto the collapsed roof.

TORN APART

Brick buildings in the town and on the base were torn apart as if made of plywood.

A branch of the First National Bank of Macon on the base was blown apart as if by a dynamite blast.

Wind gusts in the Warner Robins area were estimated at 100 miles an hour. Heavy rain and hailstones—some as large as golf balls—fell in the Macon area.

Four-year-old Charles Barrentine died when his father's car was hurled nearly 75 yards from the highway.

Chevrier Offers Two Suggestions To Officials In U.S.

WASHINGTON—(CP)—The Canadian government has put a two-way squeeze on the United States for fast action on the St. Lawrence seaway. Transport Minister Lionel Chevrier, long weary of U.S. inaction on the project, flew back to Ottawa from a two-day Washington visit today after dropping these suggestions here:

(1) If the U.S. insists on having a hand in the waterway — a factor that is making some contribution to delays — why not have each country build its own navigation works on its side of the St. Lawrence?

2. If U.S. delays persist, Canada "could" go ahead on her own with more than half of the $300,000,000 works involved in the undertaking.

PUT ON HEAT

The Canadian views, seen by observers here as tending to put some heat on U.S. authorities for a seaway start, were made public by the transport minister in an address and a press conference Thursday night.

He also held a number of meetings Thursday, with U.S. officials and with those of the Canadian embassy, but it was not known whether any new approaches had been made to U.S. authorities directly.

In each of Chevrier's two suggestions, it was the first time it had been made public as Canadian thinking, and the timing of the two statements here underlined the Canadian administration's gathering insistence on some U.S. action to shake up slow-moving processes on the seaway.

Chevrier's speech was made at the annual dinner of the pro-seaway Great Lakes-St. Lawrence Association attended by some key members of congress including Senator Robert Taft of Ohio, Republican leader in the Senate.

CHANGES MIND

Once an opponent of the seaway, Taft said Thursday night he now favors it strongly and will do all he can to expedite passage of a Senate bill calling for U S participation in the navigation end of the $750,000,000 hydro-shipping project.

Taft said he is "very optimistic" that the bill will be passed at this session of Congress. He looked for "substantial" support from the Republican majority in the Senate.

Canadian authorities have not been enthusiastic about this particular measure—the Wiley-Dondero bill—which would call for the U.S. to build the navigation works in the international section of the river. It was sponsored by Senator Alexander Wiley (Rep Wis.) and George Dondero (Rep. Mich.).

The Canadian and Ontario governments now are operating on the basis of a 1951 agreement between Prime Minister St. Laurent and President Truman under which Canada would build the $300,000,000 navigation works alone once the Ontario government and an agency to be named by the U. S. get a go-ahead to construct the concurrent $400,000,000 hydro development in the international rapids section upriver from Cornwall, Ont.

With Canada's federal and Ontario governments awaiting the naming of the U. S. agency to break the jam, a number of developments here have clouded the picture since the Eisenhower administration came in.

MANY BILLS

First, there has been a whole hopper-full of bills brought into both Houses of Congress calling for varying degrees of U. S. participation in navigation. These could, conceivably, hold things up indefinitely.

Secondly U.S. coal and railway interests are threatening to carry a delaying fight into the courts on an expected early decision of the federal power commission to name the New York state power authority as the agency to co-operate with Ontario on the hydro end.

It was in the light of this background that Chevrier advanced his two suggestions.

Talking publicly to the seaway group, he indicated his proposal for a two-seaway plan was aimed at meeting claims by some U. S. quarters that the U. S. should take precautions against a futurely-unfriendly Canada controlling the inland ditch.

"If it is felt," Chevrier said, "that U. S. interests would be safeguarded by the construction of a canal on your side of the international section, why not go ahead and build and let us do likewise on our side."

GOVERNMENT POLICY

While the minister's two-seaway plan was tossed in briefly and without elaboration near the end of a general seaway speech, it was understood to be Canadian government policy—studied for sometime and aimed at letting the seaway get started.

It would involve no additional expense for Canada, which is committed to building $300,000,000 worth of navigation works The U. S. could go ahead separately with the works involved in the Wiley-Dondero bill, which calls for spending about $88,000,000 on the U. S. side of the international rapids.

In either case, Ontario and New York would develop the 12,600,000,000 kilowatt hours a year from the Long Sault rapids.

Though there is no suggestion of Canada going ahead with the navigation job without power, it could start on the lower-river works at Lachine and Beauharnois in Quebec—both in Canadian territory—without a U. S. okay.

UNDERLINES POINT

It was this point that the minister underlined in his press conference, suggesting that Canada could start working upriver on the 27-foot canals and by the time it got through Lachine and Beauharnois, the international rapids project might be under way. The $122,000,000 Lachine job would take about five years and the $47,000,000 Beauharnois development about three, by which time Canadian advocates hope to see the upriver undertakings well under way.

Asked by newspaper men how far the government has gone towards making an independent start on Lachine and Beauharnois, Chevrier said it is still in the thinking stage and no decision has been reached.

Near-Red Party Wins Election

GEORGETOWN, British Guiana (Reuters) — The near-Communist People's Progressive party won a landslide victory in British Guiana's first election under its new constitution.

Results today showed that the PPP won 18 of the 24 seats in the House of Assembly. The National Democratic party won one seat, three went to independents and two seats are still undecided.

The PPP is headed by an East Indian dentist, Dr. Cheddi Jagan, who openly preaches communism. Other party leaders are also outspokenly Communist.

Under British Guiana's new checks-and - balances constitution, the British-appointed governor-general has the power of veto and holds special reserve powers. British officials also hold the key ministries of foreign affairs and defence, finance and police.

The governor-general also nominates the nine members of the upper house, which is intended to act as a brake on the House of Assembly. It has power to delay finance bills for three years and other measures for 12 months.

But Jagan's party will have two of the nominated upper house seats. The PPP also has a big enough majority in the House of Assembly to enforce policy decisions taken by the cabinet. PPP men will hold the six native-run ministries.

Despite the nature of the party, the PPP election manifesto was comparatively moderately worded. Legislation is expected to include land reform, labor laws, and further independence for the territory.

Give Box Score On Food Stockpile

OTTAWA (CP)—The House of Commons Thursday night got the latest box-score on the government's stockpile of agricultural products. It included a chunky 19,000,000-pound load of last year's butter.

Reviewing the government's holdings at April 25, Agriculture Minister Gardiner also listed 71,168,000 pounds of canned pork; 20,700,000 pounds of beef; 4,379,000 pounds of dried skim milk; 39 live cattle and 14 calves.

These were products purchased by the government under its price-support program. They would be valued at many millions of dollars—if they are sold.

Mr. Gardiner said there also was the matter of 39,000 cases of eggs which the government purchased at the end of last year. But these were sold, he hastened to say—at a loss of $53,000.

Property Owners Against Paving

Property owners on sections of Aylmer and Stewart Sts. have notified the council that they object to inclusion in this season's street paving program.

The Aylmer St. strip on the list is from Townsend to Perry St., and the section of Stewart St. is from Parkhill Road to Reid St.

"My information," said Ald. T. D. Miller at the board of works meeting Monday, "is that some of the residents are not opposed to paving, providing the frontage charge to property was more favorably adjusted. It is generally recognized that Aylmer St. is now a main artery."

City Engineer Chalmers recalled to the board that when he was appointed the city paid 40 per cent of the cost of paving and abutting property 60 per cent. Since then the percentage had been changed to 55 per cent of the cost paid by the city and 45 per cent by the property on such streets.

The board received the two notices, and also decided to obtain information about the financing of street paving in other cities. City Clerk Outram said there had been quite a wide divergence in policy elsewhere from frontage bearing the whole cost, on the one hand, and the city assuming it, on the other.

ditch defence of the sun-baked little town of 6,000 Laotians. A desperate-paced airlift has poured French Union troops and American-supplied war materials into the town.

The Vietminh progress—they may have hoped to capture Luangprabang by May Day—has been slowed somewhat by the tenacious resistance of mountain posts manned by French and Laotians, and by hammerings from French fighters and bombers.

But the Red-led legions have slashed their way through dense jungle, waded swift streams and trekked over tiny mountain trails for more than 200 miles from their chief supply bases on the Black and Upper Red rivers of north Viet Nam. Now they are almost within shooting distance of the royal town.

Some of them already may be encamped in the mountains overlooking the town.

The belief was widespread that the Vietminh assault from the north and east may come early Sunday morning. The Sabbath is a favorite day for Vietminh attacks.

$500,000 Warehouse Fire Damages 7 Houses; 10 Firefighters Overcome

TORONTO—(CP)—A hardware warehouse fire which raged uncontrolled for almost three hours in north-central Toronto Thursday damaged seven houses and caused loss estimated at more than $500,000. The blaze, confined to the top two floors of the three-storey building, was checked by fire-fighters before it reached three tons of ammunition, stored on the first floor. A few rounds of shotgun and rifle ammunition exploded but did no damage.

The warehouse, used as an office and storage for paints, varnishes and general hardware, required the attention of 16 fire engines. Several women wept when flames threatened their small homes near the warehouse and their husbands used garden hoses to spray roofs and walls in an attempt to ward off fresh flames.

10 FIREMEN OVERCOME

Ten firemen were overcome by smoke and needed inhalator treatment. One required six stitches to close a deep cut on his hand

The blaze, of undetermined origin, started with an explosion in the top floor of the building on Yonge street, a few blocks south of St. Clair avenue. All 250 employees escaped unhurt.

Despite the strong wind, the dense pall of thick black smoke rose hundreds of feet and could be seen all over the city. Firemen and spectators were choked by smoke at times and on a few occasions the smoke was so thick, it was impossible to see across the street.

WANTS TO WRITE

She asked for the names of the two Canadian soldiers.

"I want to write them. I'll go up there to talk to them if I can find out any more about my son."

The two Canadians said they met the men whose names they smuggled out in prison camp No. 3 on the Yalu river and at various hospitals in North Korea.

At Fort Johnson, N. Y., Mrs. John A. Jacobs was called to the telephone by a neighbor to learn that the Canadian soldiers had reported her son John Jr., was in good health in North Korea.

Mrs. Jacobs could hardly speak. She kept repeating over and over: "Thank God. Thank God."

Mrs. Jacobs said she believed her son was dead. He was reported missing in action March 23, 1952.

Commitments Not Changed For Canada

OTTAWA (CP)—Defence Minister Claxton said today Canada's commitments of military forces in Europe have not been changed but that Parliament will be asked to vote more money for other defence expenditures there.

The recent meeting of the pact council in Paris agreed, he told J. H. Macdonnell (PC—Greenwood), to a three-year program for construction of airfields, fuel lines and other things and Canada's share of this would be 7.13 per cent.

WILL VOTE FUNDS

Mr. Macdonnell said misunderstanding could arise when it is said that Canada's military commitments have not been increased and yet the government has agreed to this new expense. Mr. Claxton said Parliament will be asked, in the usual way, to vote the necessary funds. If Parliament didn't then Canada couldn't help carry out this particular program.

The commitments of military forces, of an army brigade, of an air force division and navy ships, stood as they had stood for some time.

The other costs were separate. They were not something Canada did on her own but something which she did as part of a general NATO effort.

Pravda, the Soviet Communist party's newspaper, called for an armistice "in the cold war which is ruining all people."

Outside the Iron Curtain, workers of the free world also marked the holiday with rallies, speeches, parades. There was some fighting, however.

BIG OBSERVANCE

One of the biggest May Day observances was in Berlin, where east and west staged rival shows less than a mile apart under a broiling sun and a cloudless sky. In the Soviet sector workers marched for hours past a reviewing stand of top Communist government chiefs and Russian officials. West Berliners massed in front of the ruined Reichstag to hear their anti-Red leaders defy Communist encroachment.

In troubled Iran, the military governor of Tehran banned all demonstrations by workers and students in the capital after rumors that the outlawed but active Communist Tudeh party planned a big rally. Such affairs in the past have often wound up in bloody street fights.

New York police also banned the annual march there, asserting it had become a communistic affair. A meeting in downtown Union Sqquare—okayed by the police in the interest of free speech and assembly—was scheduled instead.

Find Body In Harbor

MONTREAL (CP)—Robert Laplante, 35, and Guy Fiset, 19, were found criminally responsible by a coroner's jury today for the death of Andre Leon Lorge, 46-year-old taxi-driver.

Lorge's body was found early Tuesday at downtown Wellington and McGill streets. A shot had been fired into his body. Police said robbery appeared the motive and the holdup men got only $8.

DOGGY DOG HOUSE—Looking like someone's mansion, this impressive structure is actually a dog house. The exterior is an exact replica of the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Schields near Goodland, Kansas, and cost them $1,000 to build. The occupant is a shepherd dog named "Lady" who is currently mothering her seven new pups.

this young concert organist has also found time to compose music. His score to the ballet Greenwich Village, won the Levitt Award and he has completed the score for another ballet, which is expected to go into production within the next year. Until recently he also held the post of Minister of Music at the Wilshire Methodist, Los Angeles—a church with five choirs and which has concerts every Sunday.

'I had to give it up because of concert tours," Mr. Ellsasser said. "Last year I was only able to be there for 21 Sundays."

Other aspects of this artist's career have been appearances in Hollywood productions, on television and radio programs and the making of extensive recordings.

Already this season he has given 112 concerts and after a two-month summer holiday—the first in eight years—he will leave again for another concert tour in Europe.

2 Singers Score Perfect Mark Lindsay Festival

LINDSAY— (ENS) — A perfect score in the sacred duet class of the Lindsay Kiwanis Music Festival featured Thursday night's final evening session, when members and other Lindsay singers made almost a clean sweep of the final adult classes in the vocal section.

Adjucator D'Alton McLaughlin, of Toronto, gave baritone Francis Taylor and Bass John Moore a 100 score for their "thrilling" rendition of "God is Our Refuge and Strength." The two members of the Maple Leaf Quartette, he said, had given an impressive performance of a difficult musical piece.

In other classes, the members of the quartette also placed well. Robert Trotter, tenor, won the opera solo class, placing with 88 marks for his singing of the "Flower Song" from "Carmen." Francis Taylor on singing "In Diesen Seil'gen Hallen," and John Moore, with "Eri Tu" tied for second with 86 marks each, and Donna Hopkins soprano, who has worked with the quartette, placed third with 84 marks in a fine display of singing by all the eight entrants.

Miss June Wadell, young Lindsay mezzo-soprano, who won a scholarship at the Toronto Kiwanis Festival this year, was the only entrant in her class and received 90 marks for her singing of "Beloved It is Morn." A surprising feature of the secular duet came with the first placing of Shirley and Beverley Moore, two young girls who placed third in the sacred duet section. They were placed ahead of Mr. Taylor and Miss Waddell because of the more perfect duet blending of their voices, according to the adjudicator.

The large class of the long session, sacred solo, was won by two of the sopranos, Miss Jean Dunn, of Lindsay, and Mrs. Grace Coburn, of Minden, each with 87 marks. Other classes heard Thursday night resulted as follows:

Tenor solo (under 21)—1, Bill French; 2, Bill Vanentine. Piano solo (under 17)— Janet Martin, 85; Baritone solo (21 and under) Francis Taylor, 88; Martin Valentine 83; Norman Watson 81.

Baritone solo — Ronald Swain, 86; Ronald Bullock, 84; James Trotter 83, Male quartette, Maple Leaf quartette 86. Piano solos under 21), John Stoddart, 84. Baritone solo Norman Watson, 82; Martin Valentine, 80; Keith Lee, 75. Church choir rural, Minden church choir, 81.

The festival windsup today with morning and afternoon classes and the winners concert will be held next week.

Cover Loads Says Bylaw, A Few Obey

Probably nobody expected the council or the police to enfore that last "cover the trucks" resolution of several weeks ago. Herb McCannan could tell the present chairman of the property committee, Ald. Stan Longhurst, that he tried to put the same tidying regulation in effect years ago, and that it was one of his few major disappointments in life.

Ink was hardly dry on this latest frowning on the trucks when an ash collecting crew went along Hunter St and turned up George St., tossing ashes and some soot into their wagon and also into the air. One of the merchants in the block between the two banks, Toronto and Commerce, replied: "Surely not another."

This bylaw requiring the covering of trucks to prevent ashes, paper and other contents from being blown about the streets and into people's eyes and onto their clothing, appeared to be never honored in observance, only in the breach. That incident one of those windy days last week on Hunter St. was merely more flagrant than usual because the wind was more blustery.

This morning, a factory truck that wasn't just crawling down Monaghan Road spewing white dust and some papers in the direction of Peterborough Lumber and Johnston Motors provided example of the no-tarpaulin-cover practice.

However, the council does it part, and has been doing that for a long time—passes bylaws requiring debris to be covered in the course of collection as well as on the way to the dump. But in the irony of performance, the sanitation trucks loaded with garbage, etc., packed in cardboard containers, apparently try to comply with the bylaw, use a tarpaulin over part of their load. And, the contents are so well packed and tucked away in the truck that there is hardly anything which could blow off into the street.

At any rate, the Jaycees are taking "Clean Up Week" seriously, and are going to put brooms to work on the pavement May 9, requesting that the block of George St. be roped off for that act. To sum it all up, if there has ever been any effect from these "covering" bylaws it is not often noticed down town.

Ti Coq Awarded Two Film Prizes

MONTREAL (CP)—Gratien Gelinas' " 'Ti Coq," which, as a play, had prolonged runs in both English and French in Canada and a brief run on Broadway, Thursday night was awarded two first prizes as a motion picture at the Canadian film awards festival.

" 'Ti Coq" was named the film of the year and also topped the theatrical feature length division. The film was produced and directed by Gratien Gelinas, popularly known as Fridolin, in Montreal, who also starred in the title role.

The national film board took three first prizes. "Shyness" was tops in the non-theatrical, government-sponsored group. "Antogee," a story of an Eskimo boy from infancy to childhood, was first in the non-theatrical open class and "L'Homme aux Oiseaux" was first in the theatrical shorts class.

With his heavily bandaged wife sitting in a nearby room, Harry Jones of the Lakefield Road was charged with assault occasioning bodily harm in Magistrate's Court this morning.

Mrs. Jones was treated for a severe cut in the forehead at Civic Hospital Thursday night. She had incurred several minor cuts on her face when an axe was thrown at her through a closed window.

Police were called to investigate a disturbance at Marge's Cabins Thursday night. When they arrived they found Mrs. Jones literally covered with blood as the result of a gash at the hairline above her right eye. Her face had been cut in several other places by broken glass.

While Patrol Sergeant Andre Dalton rushed the bleeding woman to the hospital, PC Victor McConnell stayed at the cabin to watch the Jones' children. Meanwhile Jones returned to the scene and was arrested by the officer.

In Magistrate's Court this morning Jones was charged with on the assault count and consuming liquor while on the interdicted list. When he had been picked up Thursday night, he had been drinking.

The assault charge was referred to Family Court this afternoon. Pleading guilty to the drinking charge and admitting two prior convictions, Jones was sentenced to four months definite and one month indefinite in the Ontario reformatory.

Country-Wide Chain Of Radar Stations

BELLEVILLE—The production of a country-wide chain of radar stations has been going on for two years, officials of the Northern Electric Company have announced.

A number of the radar systems have already been delivered and are in the process of being installed. Though the project is still classified as top secret, some data has been released on it.

The manufacture of the radar equipment is one of the largest projects undertaken by a Canadian electronics firm during peace time. The system will assist in the protection of Canada's borders by a pattern of radar stations strategically located across the country.

Each station consists of an operations building, containing electronic and communication units. Erected on top of the buildings, are antennas and other electronic apparatus. These various units are protected by a pressurized envelope, called a radome.

The biggest problem engineers working on the job have encountered, was the task of converting American designs and putting them into production in Canada. For no two shops tool up the same way, hence the difficulty of taking their designs and putting them to work.

Convict Rancher Of Slaying

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP)—Joe S. Chavez, 45-year-old rancher, Thursday night was convicted of murder for killing a woman he claimed had practised witchcraft.

Chavez will be sentenced May 6. He faces a penalty of 10 years to life in prison.

Chavez was accused of shooting Mrs. Maria Estrella Miranda, 41, in her home near the tiny Yaqui Indian village of Guadalupe, south of Phoenix, last Sept. 12.

The trial brought out a strange tale of belief in witchcraft by many of Mrs. Miranda's neighbors, and equally strong denials from a few friends.

A confession Chavez purportedly signed five days after Mrs. Miranda's riddled body was found in her blood-spattered living room, was introduced by the prosecution.

It quoted Chavez as saying he had shot the woman because she placed a curse on his wife and caused her to go blind.

2 Soldiers To Die For Killing Girl

HONG KONG (Reuters)—Two British soldiers were sentenced to death in the Supreme Court here today for the murder of a pretty young Chinese canteen girl.

The soldiers are L. Cpl. George Douthwaite, 24, and Tpr. Douglas Dalton, 19.

Cobourg Rotary Holds Second Trade Fair

COBOURG (ENS). — Cobourg Rotary Club is repeating this month the trade fair which it held about four years ago. The trade fair at that time was held in the recreational centre but it was too late in the season to draw a large crowd, on account of the cold. Proceeds are for the social welfare work of the club.

Start New Hours

COBOURG — (ENS)—Streamlining their business hours to the trend of the times, Cobourg merchants this evening will remain open until nine o'clock and Saturday will close at six p.m. For some of the old timers who like to come "down town" on Saturday night to visit around and chat, particularly those from the nearby rural sections, the change is going to be a bit jarring but sales help will welcome the chance to get away comparatively early on Saturday night. For some years grocers have been closing at six on Saturday evening, as compared to the old days when they were open until eleven.

Oshawa Workers Vote To Go On Strike

OSHAWA (CP)—One thousand members of Local 1817, United Steelworkers of America (CIO-CCL), Thursday night voted to go on strike at the Fittings Ltd. plant one of Oshawa's largest industries.

Workers want a wage boost which would establish basic labor rates of $1.50 an hour. Basic rate now is $1.22 for the machinery division and $1.28 for foundry workers.

The union said it would call the employees out "whenever we deem it necessary." The 1952 working agreement expired Thursday.

Ottawa Has Made No Change In Policy For Seaway

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister St. Laurent said today in the Commons that the government has made no change in its St. Lawrence seaway policy.

He was replying to Stanley Knowles (CCF—Winnipeg North Centre) and J. M. Macdonnell (PC —Toronto Greenwood), who asked whether possible construction of two canals—one in Canada and one in the United States—was a policy change.

Mr. St. Laurent said the government still intends to go ahead with the project alone if an arrangement for a joint undertaking with the U. S. can't be worked out.

No thought at first had been given to possible construction of a second canal but he had been told by experts two canals might be necessary to handle traffic. If new arrangements were made with the U. S., they would be submitted to Parliament.

Rodney Adamson (PC — York West) asked if there were any limit to the government's patience in arriving at an agreement with the U. S.

Mr. St. Laurent said the government wants to see the job done as soon as possible. But it did need American co-operation for construction of its part of the required dam. Nothing prevented start of construction except designation of a U. S. agency to carry out the American share.

Gestation Of A New Dominion

A plan has been signed in London for the federation of five of Britain's West Indian colonies: Barbados, Trinidad, Jamaica, the Windward Islands and the Leeward Islands. Two other Caribbean British possession have not so far agreed to federate: British Honduras and British Guiana. These are on the mainland; the others are islands. Thus has begun a long process leading first to federation, next to the independence of a Dominion. The new federated states will stretch 1,700 miles, have an area of about 7,700 square miles, and a population of two and a half millions, mostly coloured people. We have written on this subject before, and already voiced our pleasure at the prospect of another American Dominion within the Commonwealth.

* * *

We note that Grenada, not Trinidad, has been provisionally selected as the Capital. Grenada, in the Windward Islands, is the most southern of the Caribbean chain, the most British of the Islands and the most beautiful of all the British Antilles. Eighteen miles long, seven wide, its lofty volcanic craters rise high above fertile, well-watered valleys. Among them lies an exquisite lake two miles in circumference, at an altitude of 3,200 feet. The capital of Grenada is St. George, on a good harbour, with schools, churches and pleasant houses. The population of the island is less than a hundred thousand, four-fifths of it being negro peasants. One of the pleasures of Canada's contact with the new Federation will be visits to Grenada.

Ridiculous Objections

There have been reports that the U.N.-U.S.A. negotiators at Panmunjom have rejected any Asiatic country as a proper neutral to attend to prisoners of war in Korea about whose disposal neither side can agree. Whether the report is true or not, we are heartily glad that Canada's Minister of External Affairs has immediately denied support for this rejection. To support it would be to connive at folly.

If there is to be an armistice in Korea, the question of the disposal of prisoners who do not want or are said not to want repatriation, is paramount. It is urgent. It is the only apparent obstacle now to an armistice. The Chinese have suggested that these prisoners be sent to, or put in charge of, a neutral country. The U.S.A. (and therefore UN command) has accepted this in principle. Now there must be agreement on the neutral. Switzerland has been suggested, Switzerland the traditional neutral. The tradition is all right, but the country is far away, is European and itself has no great weight of influence. The Reds have indicated that Switzerland would not be acceptable. There is a proposal in the air that India be the designated neutral. Why not?

The rumour or report that the U.S. would not accept any Asiatic nation as the neutral gives this reason: "that they are located very close to countries dominated by Communists and might therefore be subjected to Communist military, economic or political influence". What a pack of nonsense, if India is considered as the neutral.

India is a large, important, powerful country, politically independent, and internationally independent in view. India has often demonstrated its aversion for Communism within its own borders. If the U.S. should reject India on the grounds stated above, how much more reason has China to reject Switzerland: very close to countries dominated by western capitalism, and which is indeed subjected to Western military, economic or political influence.

If for some reason or another the U.S. does not want an armistice in Korea except by inflicting the most one-sided humiliating conditions on China, let the U.S. say so. Let there be no pretense that the Reds are obstructive and preventing peace because they will not accept a small country in the middle of capitalistic, western Europe as the neutral.

Most of the prisoners are Asiatic. It is supposed to be an Asian war to protect (on one side) Korea from Communist domination or (on the other side) Korea from western capitalistic domination. Of all possible neutrals, India is the best. Moreover, India has already demonstrated her interest in peace in Korea; her peace plan of last year was much similar to the present Red proposals.

If the U.S. does not like the notion of India as the neutral is it because India might be too unbiased, too independent of American influence?

Riches At The Bottom Of The Sea

One of President Eisenhower's campaign pledges was to support "state rights" to the valuable oil deposits under the sea adjacent to their coasts. Implementing this, the Republican leadership prepared a bill and tried to get it through the U.S. Senate last week. It gives the States title to the undersea oil up to their "historic" boundaries and the Federal Government title beyond these boundaries. The word "historic" is important, for Louisiana, Florida and Texas—the three states seeking the oil rights—became part of the United States in the early nineteenth century, by treaties with Spain and France. In the case of Texas and Louisiana it means three "leagues" or ten-and-a-half miles offshore; in the case of Florida three miles.

The bill has had a rough time. There is a lot of money involved in this issue, for the continental shelf contains rich oil deposits which will considerably benefit whoever owns them, in royalties and leases. The Republicans were committed to the bill and the Southern Democrats were in favour of it. A majority of the northern and western Democratic senators, most of them liberals and supporters of Mr. Truman's 'fair deal' and a strong Federal Government, felt the bill to be an abuse of power and a gift to one section of the country of assets which properly belong to the country as a whole. So a heavy "filibuster" has been waged. Twenty liberal Democrats using every device of debate to delay the passage of the Bill kept the Senate engaged twelve hours a day. No other business could be transacted. At this time of writing the Bill still has not been passed. One of the speeches lasted three days.

There is no closure rule in the American Senate, and the filibuster is a traditional way for a large and aroused minority to delay if not foil the majority. Little can be said to justify it. If the majority or the party in power does not see the injustice or folly of a bill which it supports determinedly, a filibuster will not change its mind. A filibuster only delays other and important legislative business.

The New York Times condemns both the filibuster and the bill which the filibuster is delaying, a good example of being on both sides of the fence at once, and properly so. The seas around a country belong to the whole country, are defended by it, are indeed its bulwark and boundary. It would be ridiculous in Canada if, for instance, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia were to lay claim to the Bay of Fundy and what is at the bottom of the Bay of Fundy, as Texas and Louisiana and Florida are laying claim to the Gulf of Mexico.

To state the issue in Canadian terms is not as fanciful as it seems. We doubt that there are rich oil deposits under the Bay of Fundy or in the Gulf of St. Lawrence. But undersea divers, using new equipment and techniques (as described in Cousteau's remarkable book, "The Silent World," are discovering new territories under the seas, and new riches. These may be sunken galleons, valuable fish, or minerals. Jurisdiction of coastal waters and what is under them has been, and must remain, with the Federal Government.

May Day

This morning at dawn boy choristers climbed to the top of Magdalen College tower in Oxford and carolled to the sunrise. May Day is spring day. Today Communists in Moscow and wherever else the hammer and sickle flies, paraded and made a show of their Marxist blood and Mother Russia strength. May Day is Red day. In Socialist circles workmen of the world proclaimed solidarity. May Day is Labour day. In Montreal half the tenants in the city moved into each other's flats. May Day is moving day.

In Peterborough the sun rose at 5:48 a.m. (D.S.T.). People ate breakfast, went to work, were a little disappointed that more of the sun was not visible but thought the showers might bring the flowers and grass along, and otherwise did nothing in particular. But they rejoiced that the date if not the day meant the return of Spring, with Summer not far behind. They remark the lengthening day: the sun will not set until eight minutes after eight this evening in Peterborough.

Dandelions are spunkishly bright on the churchyard grass. Buds on the trees seem ready to burst—do you notice the first faint tinges of new colour along the branches? Chores in the garden should be done, if the rain and cold would allow. Fall wheat fields are a thrilling and tender green, and lambs bleat on the hillsides. In the dank woods, lo! the first hepaticas are rearing their starry heads.

May Day has come and the 24th is not far behind; in fact, as soon as the 18th.

Notes And Queries

By ALPHA

Questions are solicited for this column particularly those relating to local lore and tradition.

SIR: Why are there no chestnut trees in Canada? I mean the kind bearing edible chestnuts, not the horse-chestnut.

ANSWER: Your question touches a sad tale. The chestnut is a tree of the past in Canada. You rightly reject horse-chestnut trees. The horse-chestnut (Aesculus hippocastanum) is not a true chestnut. Nor is to native to Canada, though it is widely planted as an ornamental trees, especially in southern Ontario and eastern Canada.

About 45 years ago the chestnut was attacked by the chestnut blight, a fungous disease introduced into North America from Asia (sounds like a reverse germ warfare, of the kind the Chinese Reds accuse the West of having used; o. a wartime story such as the Germans concocted).

All commercial stands of chestnut have been destroyed in Canada. The only survivors are a very few old trees and the numerous sprouts which spring up from the rotting stumps.

THE CHESTNUT was a large tree 75 to 80 feet in height, and 2 to 3 feet in trunk diameter. It sometimes reached a height of a hundred feet. The trunk had little taper except when grown in the open, where it divided into a few heavy branches not far from the ground, and formed a broad, rounded crown.

It was found naturally in Canada only in southern Ontario, from the Niagara River and Lake Ontario westward to the Detroit River and Lake St. Clair. Here it grew on soils favourable to other hardwoods. The tree was easily distinguished from any other native species by its spiny burs which contained one or more shiny brown nuts. The sweet chestnut's Latin name is Castanea dentata. About ten species of chestnut are known, five native to North America, only the one I have mentioned being native to Canada.

Very little chestnut lumber was ever produced in this country.

The source of my information is the excellent, illustrated, paper-bound book produced by the Forestry Branch of the Federal Department of Resources and Development. It is called "Native Trees of Canada." It can be had from the Queen's Printer, Ottawa, for $1.50.

DEAR ALPHA: Are suckers good to eat? A boy was around trying to sell me some. I didn't like the look of them. Those awful, thick, oval, tubular lips!

ANSWER: Take a good close look at a turkey cock's face some time and see if you like the look of that. But you eat turkey, don't you? The flesh of suckers at this time of year is wholesome and tasty. Most people do not like to serve or eat suckers because they have so many bones. Old-time farmers in this district formerly — some still do — put down a barrel or two of suckers in brine. After a few months the brine had softened the bones to the consistency of bones in canned salmon.

Despite their appearance, suckers are clean fish. They are vegetarians. If they were not so plentiful, easy to catch and cheap, people might think more highly of them. Their name of course is against them. If they were called Spring Catostomus (their Latin name) they might seem more appetizing.

DEAR ALPHA: When a woman has met a man in a business way, say over the counter in a store, or as a client of a lawyer or real estate dealer, is she expected to speak to him when passing on the street? She does not know him in a social way, she has never been introduced to him, yet she does not wish to appear high-hat if he expects her to speak or nod. On the other hand she does not wish to appear forward, taking advantage of such a slight acquaintance.

ANSWER: Ask Dorothy Dix. I might whisper in your ear that if you have your eye on the man and his has not yet come to rest on you, the discreet use of the eye can do much to fix his attention . . . In general, casual meetings in a business way are merely part of business and do not constitute an acquaintanceship.

TALKING OF DEER HUNTING (who is, at this season?) here is a record to stack against next season's count. Samuel Strickland, founder of Lakefield, wrote in his book "Twenty-seven Years in Canada West" that the deer were (1853 — a century ago) not nearly so numerous as they formerly were. "To give my readers some idea how plentiful these wild denizens of the forest were some years since, I need only mention that a trapper with whom I was acquainted, and four of his companions, passed my house on a small raft on which lay the carcasses of thirty-two deer — the trophies of a fortnight's chase near Stony Lake. The greater number of these were fine bucks."

"I once had seventeen deer hanging up in my barn at one time — the produce of three days' sport out of which I had the good fortune to kill seven. Parties are now made yearly every October to Stony Lake, Deer Bay or the River Trent. I do not know anything more pleasant than these excursions, especially if you have agreeable companions, a warm camp, and plenty to eat and drink."

❖ ❖ ❖

COUNTRY NOTE: It must have been the sun that brought them along. The last two prospective mothers lambed this week at Bellee Acres. So my second family is now complete: three little ones aged two days to ten days, and five big ones (eating grain and grass like horses, but they still whinny for their mother's milk) aged up to three months. No twins in the second batch, worse luck; Gamma feels we could have kept twins, born at this time of year, instead of losing them as we did in the winter. But why fret about the non-birth or non-existent lambs? Here it is May Day, the ewe cupboard is at last bare, there are eight frolicking young uns and eight solicitous mamas and the meadow is showing green. Hurrah!

WORRIES

Two soldiers were discussing the chances of coming out of battle with a whole skin. The first said: "You see, Charlie, I look at it this way. Every bullet and piece of shell has on it the name of the man it's goin' to hit. If it's yours, your time's up."

"That may be all right," said the second, "but what worries men is those bullets that's got written on them. "To whom it may concern."

The First Hepatica

A little while and thou wert fast asleep
Couched in the hollow of the woodland here;
For all thy kind, when winter snows lie deep,

Then Nature murmured low, as is her use,
Crooning o'er her still-cradled young: hard by
The tinkling lilt of rivulet let loose
From icy clasp, the enduring pine's soft sigh,
Both bade thee rise, for thy dream-love was nigh.

Even in this quiet dell, where no winds blow
But all day warm airs brood, thou art alone:
Thy fellows all are laid in slumber low,
And on thy sunward slope—dead leaves are strown,
Dry brackens trail, with draggled tresses brown.

Thou votary of Spring! with upward gaze
Wide-eyed thy face is lifted now, as there
Thou did outpour thy soul in song of praise
Not the less clear and sweet that we despair
To catch with our dull ear its cadence rare.

Tobacco For Coffee

(BRANTFORD EXPOSITOR)

TOBACCO GROWERS in Southwestern Ontario are looking for overseas markets woud do well to explore the suggestion of J. W. Murphy, M.P., that Portugal is a possible customer. They might find that prospects there are better than they thought, and that there is a simple way to overcome Portugal's dollar shortage.

Last year Portugal bought tobacco worth $3,816,000. The U.S. supplied three quarters of this amount, the rest coming from Greece and from Portugal's overseas possessions. American growers, therefore, garnered $2,862,000 from the Portuguese market.

Like Britain, Portugal has foreign exchange difficulties that severely limit overseas purchases of tobacco and other goods. So she is unlikely to be able to buy Canadian tobacco on a straight cash basis. But she does have one commodity that Canada can take in exchange. That is coffee.

The Portuguese West African colony of Angola is growing coffee that is cheaper than and far superior to coffee from almost anywhere else in the world except Kenya. One result is that a visitor to Lisbon can enjoy the best cup of coffee in Europe, and one that makes him wonder what sort of stuff is sometimes served to him at home under the name of coffee.

Why not, then, investigate the possibility of swapping Canadian tobacco for Portuguese coffee? Better trade by barter than none at all. This does not mean that Ontario tobacco growers must go into the coffee selling business. All they need to do is get orders for tobacco from Portugal, take payment in coffee and let some Canadian coffee importer sell it for them, remitting to them in dollars their share of the proceeds.

It is highly probable that the Portuguese would welcome the chance to get more good tobacco such as Canada can supply. The American leaf they now import has to be so far spun out with inferior tobacco from elsewhere that the cigarettes now produced in Portugal are barely smokable by our standards of taste.

As for the coffee, it would offer to the Canadian housewife an escape from the exorbitant prices now being exacted by Brazilian growers.

Bible Message

(From the Authorized Version)

Now Peter and John went up together into the temple at the hour of prayer, being the ninth hour.

And a certain man lame from his mother's womb was carried, whom they laid daily at the gate of the temple which is called Beautiful, to ask alms of them that entered into the temple; who seeing Peter and John about to go into the temple asked an alms . . .

Then Peter said, Silver and gold have I none; but such as I have give I thee: In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk. And he took him by the right hand, and lifted him up: and immediately his feet and ankle bones received strength. And he leaping up stood, and walked, and entered with them into the temple, walking, and leaping, and praising God.

And all the people saw him walking and praising God: and they knew that it was he which sat for alms at the Beautiful gate of the temple: and they were filled with wonder and amazement at that which had happened unto him. (Acts 3: 1-3, 6-10).

Have mercy upon me, O God, according to thy lovingkindness: according unto the multitude of thy tender mercies blot out my transgressions. Wash me thoroughly from mine transgressions: and my sin is ever before me . . . Behold, thou desirest truth in the inward parts: and in the hidden part thou shalt make me to know wisdom. Purge me with hyssop, and I shall be clean: wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow. (Ps. 51: 1-3, 6, 7.)

Search me, O. God, and know my heart: try me, and know my thoughts: and see if there be any wicked way in me, and lead me in the way everlasting. (Ps. 139: 23, 24.)

St. Boniface Feels All Not Lost Yet

By AL VICKERY

WINNIPEG (CP) — There's a sort of tense quietness across the Red river in St. Boniface.

The one question being asked everywhere—the corner store, the barber shop, around the city hall—is:

"What's happening to our Canadiens in that third period?"

Most of the time, those to whom the question is directed just shrug their shoulders. There simply doesn't seem to be any answer.

In the first two games of the best-of-seven Memorial Cup final, St. Boniface Canadiens have blown leads to Barrie Flyers as play advanced in the third period.

With the game count 2-0 against them, the Montreal-sponsored team goes against the same Flyers tonight in the third contest, and the Habs' supporters are wondering if it will be the same old story.

STILL HAVE CHANCE

The staunchest still are convinced Canadiens have a chance if they go all out for 60 minutes.

But some of the more impartial fans are saying:

"This Barrie club is too smart for the Canadiens. They score when they want to." Or "the Flyers let the Canucks set the pace and burn themselves out, then they step out and make St. Boniface look silly."

It's hard to make the ardent St. Boniface fan swallow that one, for all season long the Habs have been strong finishers. Even in earlier playoff games against the Thunder Bay and Western Junior Hockey League champions, Canadiens never slowed up in the final 20 minutes.

If coach Bryan Hextall can find the answer, his Canadiens may break the East's four-year-old stranglehold on the Canadian junior hockey championship. But the guy who's out to make the fast buck is convinced Canadiens haven't got it, and he's going as far as to lay 3-to-1 and 4-to-1 odds Barrie will take it in four straight, which means the series would end in Winnipeg Monday night.

Hextall is going to ride along with the same line-up that took a 6-3 bouncing in the second game at Brandon Wednesday night.

Native Dancer Favorite For Derby Race

By ORLO ROBERTSON

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP)—Unbeaten Native Dancer places one of turf history's most enviable records on the line Saturday at 5:30 p.m. EDT in the 79th Kentucky Derby. And 11 other three-year-olds are expected to challenge his right to be acclaimed one of racing's greatest.

Not since Man O' War was almost a household word more than 30 years ago has a horse caught the fancy of racing experts and laymen like this smooth striding blue-grey son of Polynesian from the stable of millionaire Alfred Vanderbilt. And that goes for such famous Derby winners as Citation, Count Fleet and Whirlaway

1922 COMPARABLE

One must go back to 1922 when Morvich won the 1¼-mile classic at Churchill Downs to find a Derby horse with a record comparable to that of the Dancer. Morvich was undefeated in 11 two-year-old starts and made the Derby his 12th consecutive win. After that he never won another race.

Bimelech also came up to the 1940 Derby with a perfect record in eight two-year-old races and two as a three-year-old. But he bowed to Gallahadion in the run for the roses.

Against these records, the Dancer can show nine victories in 1951 and two this spring as a three-year-old. However, he has a long way to go to match the consecutive win record of 19 established by Hindoo, the 1881 Derby winner.

Athletics Clip Syracuse In 7-5 Tilt

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Ottawa Athletics Thursday night downed Syracuse Chiefs 7-5 in the only game scheduled in the International Baseball League to make their record read two wins and two losses for a .500 average and fourth place in league standings.

The Athletics didn't do well on the road, but seemingly play well for the hometown fans—only 2,000 turned out Thursday night because of cold, windy weather—having won both their home games to date.

The Athletics take on the sixth-place Chiefs again tonight; the league-leading Montreal Royals meet seventh-place Rochester; second-place Toronto plays host to cellar-dwelling Springfield; and fifth-place Baltimore plays third-place Buffalo at Buffalo.

TIED GAME

In Thursday night's single offering, the Chiefs tied the game 4-4 in the seventh only to be beaten in the bottom half of the same inning.

Lou Limmer singled in Walt Rogers who had walked; Dick Greco singled in another and came home on an error to add the clinchers.

Jim Bell, who took over for starter Vince Gohl in the seventh, got credit for his first win of the new season and Syracuse's second pitcher, Art Hartley, was tabbed with the loss.

SCRIBES VS MP'S

OTTAWA (CP)—A small, slight pitcher with a vice-regal curve will take the mound next Tuesday night to get Parliament Hill's annual athletic travesty on its creaking way.

Once Rt. Hon. Vincent Massey, governor-general, has completed the brief and entirely honorary function of throwing the first ball, anything will go in this revival of the yearly struggle between members of Parliament and members of the Parliamentary Press Gallery. It always has.

Technically it is classed as a softball match, mainly because the equipment in use is softball equipment. The history of these engagements indicates that further comparisons between what happens and what should happen in orthodox softball are useless.

It is a matter of record that the Parliamentarians have slaughtered the scribes with more or less monotonous regularity but this is entirely the fault of voters who have no more sense than to populate the House of Commons with such former greats of the sports world as Bucko MacDonald, Lionel Conacher and Howie Meeker.

Behind the plate to handle the governor-general's offerings will be speaker Ross Macdonald, while Production Minister Howe will stand in the batter's box.

The Rev. McIvor, Liberal member for Fort William, will manage the Parliamentarians while Foster Barclay, Canadian Press news editor, will attempt to juggle a couple of dozen newspaper men to outsmart the politicians.

MAY QUIT HOCKEY

HAMILTON (CP)—Herb Dickenson, 21-year-old forward with the National Hockey League New York Rangers last year, says he may be through with hockey. He was hit in the eye by a puck in Toronto last November and although doctors still have hopes that the eye will improve, Dickenson doesn't give it much chance. He said at a police minor hockey dinner Wednesday night "everything is still pretty much a blur."

RESULTS FROM THE FINEST GRAPES

By JACK SULLIVAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP) — Twenty-five years ago next Monday Ted Reeve joined the Toronto Telegram as sports columnist on a look-see basis "See how it goes and if it's no good we'll fire you," his publisher said.

Since that day—May 4, 1928—the Moaner and his "Sporting Extras," have been a must to thousands of readers, some of whom wouldn't know a squeeze play from a screen pass, an oar from a lacrosse stick. And he's one of the most authoritative sports columnists in North America.

The self-educated 51-year-old Ted with the rumpled black hair, big beak, black moustache, jutting jaw and perpetual slouch amiably mixes sports with doggerel, jazz and Dickens, his dog, cat and home and any subject that strikes his fancy. His long, narrow face peering mournfully out over his column is as well-known as any personality in the country.

VERSATILE WRITER

He can be as serious as a college professor, as light-hearted as a school kid and as folksy as a homespun philosopher-humorist.

One woman, who never sees a sports event, has been reading the Moaner for 20 years to enjoy such cracks as the one he pulled about the marathon swimmer at the Canadian National Exhibition in Toronto who was in the water from 8 a.m. and finished at 10:01 p.m. —"just too late to go through the buildings."

"TV note: They are not making the Tom Collins's as strong as they used to."

He has written millions of words and thousands have been written about him—his playing and coaching days in football and lacrosse, his dead-pan humor, shaggy-dog appearance, broken arches and bones and the everlasting wonder that such a "crock" could get into the Canadian Army as a gunner in the Second World War.

TYPICAL DOGGEREL

His well-metered doggerel provides many belly laughs. One verse, or "spasm" as he called it, from his "Day After Christmas Carol," has been widely quoted. It goes like this:

The otchskay, ingay, umray's gone and so is all the money;
We hope we had a real good time (we seemed to be quite funny),
But writing sport remarks today is much to much a job-a,
So we will borrow thirty cents and get us some catawba.

The Moaner parks his size-13 shoes under his paper-littered desk daily between 8:30 and 9 a.m. in the stuffy Telegram sports department, whacks out 1,000 or so words and calls it a day before 10 a.m. He seldom ponders over a sentence. He simply "listens a moment to the whirrings in his brain" and lets go, a fellow-writer once said of him.

From there he ambles to a downtown cafe for a bull session with 20 or so cronies—cab drivers, bookmakers, sportsmen and business men—and the Moaner keeps the joint jumping with his ad-lib dead-pan cracks. He has brought the place local fame by references in his columns to the Bowlis A.C.

VIVID IMAGINATION

And his imagination has brought fame to other places and characters.

There is Squawg Hollow, otherwise known as the east-end Beach district where Ted was born Jan. 6, 1902 and where he lives with his wife, the former Alvern Florence Donaldson of Neepawa, Man. and his 13-year-old son Joe and five-year-old daughter, Susan.

He is Squawg Hollow's leading citizen and his book-cluttered living room is port-of-call for his friends, fellow newspaper men, old-time football and lacrosse players and others. It is here also that Ted browses amongst the classics—Dickens, Shakespeare, Thackeray and the Encyclopaedia Britannica and other books that he has been reading since he was a 13-year-old munitions worker.

Then there is Moaner McGruffey, a character he created in his column to typify the legion of chronic sports possimists. The tag bounced back on Ted, probably because he looks like a moaner.

There also is Alice Snippersnapper who came into being at about the time women began writing on sports. This character is a mouthpiece for items slanted toward the distaff side.

The Moaner will talk and write about football at the drop of a hint, quote Shakespeare or Thackeray or Nat Fleischer's annual ring listings and the Baseball Record with equal authority. He has a prodigious memory for detail and can drop a gag to fit any situation.

WORKER AT 13

Reeve's father died when Ted was two and the Moaner went to work in a munitions factory at 13 to help out his mother who operated a little stationery store in the Beach district On the shelves were such boys' books as the "Gem," "Nugget," "Chums" and "Boys' Own Annual" and newspapers with their sports pages and by-lined columnists.

Ted read them all, graduated to Dickens, Robert Louis Stevenson and other classics and these books were the basis of his education.

He played lacrosse and football with the Balmy Beach club when he was in his teens and gave up his active playing career in 1931 From that year until 1940 he coached football, six years at Queen's University where he won three intercollegiate championships; one season at Montreal in the Interprovincial Football Union; three with Beaches in two of which he won the Ontario Rugby Football Union title.

He was a great middle wing with Beaches and his specialty was blocking kicks—a manoeuvre that invited bashed-in beaks, dislocated collar bones and other sundry injuries. In all, he has had nearly 50 broken bones.

He is said to be the worst-dressed sports columnist in the country, and he looks the part. He buys good, conservative suits but somehow or other when he gets his six-foot-one-inch 200-pound frame into them they take on that well-worn look.

Penticton Plays 'Worst Game' Bows 8-3 To Kitchener Dutchmen

KITCHENER (CP)—Coach Bill Carse herded a disconsolate band of Penticton V's back to their hotel room Thursday night following an 8-3 defeat at the hands of Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen in the second game of the Allan Cup finals. Carse was bent on getting a good rest for himself and the players in the hope that the V's can get rolling Saturday.

"The Dutchmen outshone us at every turn, tonight," Carse said. "We blew our chances early in the game and later in the second period when we had the Dutchmen on the run we couldn't produce around the net."

The team morale seemed shaky but several of the players ventured the opinion that they could come from behind and win the series.

"We've done it before," they chorused weakly, "and we can do it again."

WORST OF SEASON

"That was the worst game we've played this season," declared Grant (Knobby) Warwick.

Penticton captain Willie (Scrap Iron) Schmidt agreed. "We just can't seem to get rolling. This club isn't skating, but we'll be tougher Saturday," he said.

Meanwhile the scene in the Dutchmen dressing room was a happy one, although the Dutchies refrained from being overconfident.

Coach Bob Rafferty had a big smile but he pointed out that the Dutchmen have played better games than they did Thursday night.

"But we'll be tough to beat if we keep driving," he added.

Club president Bobby Bauer was also elated, but he spoke in the same vein as the coach. Neither would predict openly that the series would end in four games, but unless the V's sharpen up the championship hunt could end here Monday.

Neither club suffered any serious injuries, although the Penticton goalie is playing with a badly bruised right hand. The Dutchies' Bobby Schnurr got a stiff jolt from V's bulky defenceman Eddie Brown near the end of the game, but he figures he'll be fit for the third game Saturday.

Although their team isn't doing too well between games Penticton supporters are finding plenty to keep them occupied.

Under the direction of the Kitchener and Waterloo Chambers of Commerce a daily special "Penticton Hockey Bulletin" is being issued for the convenience of the visitors.

It contains information on the district and news of events which the fans might like to take in. Tours through local industries have been arranged. There is a regular morning coffee meeting in a local department store restaurant where B.C. fans and players meet with local folks.

SPORTS SHOW WINDOW

By CEC. PERDUE, Sports Editor

Frank Gnup comes here Saturday to discuss the coaching job for our grid Orfuns. He'll talk things over with club prexy Dr. Don. Aitken, but no decision will be made till a meeting May 13, as Tony Kotowski and Jack Wedley have also applied for this job. Without being told this by anyone, we had the impression that Gnup — who had first chance at the job here a year ago — could coach Orfuns this coming season if he wanted to do so, provided he didn't ask too high a salary. However, Frank had been hoping to get on as football coach at Queen's, and wouldn't commit himself. The time has come to say yes or no.

* * * * * *

We phoned Mike Rodden at Kingston yesterday and asked if Frank Tindall would be back at Queen's. He resigned but has been reconsidering, since the powers that be there have asked Tindall to return. He might, too, on a fairly lengthy contract, because he knows Queen's are unlikely to set the football world afire this year. Gnup is not a college coach, but a first-rate man for Big Four, senior or intermediate ORFU. Mike thinks Tindall will take the Queen's job again, leaving Gnup free to make other contacts. Rodden, a former Big Four coach himself at Hamilton, remarked that Peterborough boys like Jack Sisson and Don Griffin were among the better Queen's players the past few years, having arrived there with an excellent knowledge of grid fundamentals. Speaks well for Bev Goulding, eh?

Lacrosse In Oshawa?

A gutted-stick item from Oshawa: "All young men of Oshawa and district interested in playing lacrosse should attend a workout tonight at the arena. Chuck Barron, former Oshawa star, is behind the move to revive lacrosse in Oshawa. They intend to round up an intermediate team and will play home games in the arena. Barron, Kelly DeGray, Ken Saunders and a few other former local senior players will be on hand for regular workouts, to see how much material is available." Hm, it's nice to see some interest again in the Motor City in this lively summer sport. Years ago, the Petes used to play intermediate lacrosse against Oshawa, among other teams, including Belleville. It might be a start back for Oshawa.

* * * * * *

Don Ashbee will be on deck next week to take over his job as head coach of the PMLA. He'll play for the Petes, of course, but will spend his days and some evenings each week with the minors, a job held last year by Harry Wipper and before that by Jerry Fitzgerald and Jack Foote. It means a lot to the sport to have a top senior lacrosser on full-time duty instructing the kids in the game. Ashbee began lacrosse play back in '46 as a junior, with Weston, going senior two years later. Played for Owen Sound after. A solid hockey player in the AHL, also. Don is a real rugged and hustling athlete. He starred every game for Timbermen last fall in Mann Cup finals. Played hockey last winter for Syracuse.

Aha, Action At Last!

The rumor that the city council may purchase a piece of property west of Dominion Woollens as the Memorial Community Centre site sounds good to us. Indicating definite action at last. With the city slated to grow rapidly northward, following the Smith annexation, that would be a fairly central and roomy spot for the auditorium. Personally, we don't think they'd ever get into Morrow Park, due to all the legal angles involved. Even if they did, this city-owned Centre would then be located on property not owned by the city — a rather intolerable situation. No, we hope the Centre committee and the city council proceed with plans toward getting other property for the project.

Local junior ball prospects have open drills in Riverside at 6.30 tonight and at two tomorrow aft, weather permitting. Howie Dalton will be picking his squad Saturday, with no open workouts after that. League play begins in two weeks. Oshawa's entry in the Lakeshore League promises to be a strong one with such players practising there as Ted Stone, Billy McTavish, Ab Gilbert, Jack Durston, Cec. Hall, George Brabin, Bill Cook, John Jozkoski, Fred Etcher, Jerry Robinson and possibly Bunny Maeson and Fred Bidgood. Others probably will be out, too, but Bowmanville may lay claim to pitcher Cec. Hall, who lives in the Motor City but twirled for the Roses last semester.

Carter Defends Title Against Araujo In June

NEW YORK (AP)—Jimmy Carter, world lightweight champion, will defend his title against George Araujo of Providence, R.I., in Madison Square Garden Friday, June 12, Jim Norris, president of the International Boxing Club, said Thursday.

Carter floored Tommy Collins of Boston 10 times in less than four rounds last Friday in retaining the crown.

Norris said that Carter would receive 42½ per cent of the gate receipts and Araujo 17½. Negotiations now are under way regarding television and radio casts of the fight.

FIRST TIME—Joe Adcock, Milwaukee Braves' first baseman, hits the first home run ever to land in the bleachers at the New York Giants' home field, the Polo Grounds. Cross and dotted line show the path of the walloped ball and where it landed, 475 feet from home plae. Milwaukee won the game, 3-2.

ANYBODY FOR BASEBALL? — This free-for-all between the New York Yankees and St. Louis Browns rages in St. Louis at Busch Stadium after Clint Courtney of the Browns slid into second base and spiked Yankee shortstop Phil Rizzuto. Game action, delayed 17 minutes, saw both teams storm the field and fans litter the field with debris and bottles. The Yankees won the baseball game part of the night's entertainment, 7-6.

Dutchmen Hold 2-0 Lead In Cup Finals

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP)—Penticton V's admitted Thursday night that the second game of the Allan Cup finals was a pretty bad show on their part.

The V's were defeated 8-3 by Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen, who now hold a 2-0 lead in games in the best-of-seven series. The Dutchmen won the Tuesday opener 5-2.

"The worst game we've played this season," said Penticton forward Grant (Knobby) Warwick.

But the team was still optimistic. "We've done it before and we can do it again," the players chorused in the near-silent dressing room.

They have their chance Saturday night in the third game of the series.

Kitchener Coach Bob Rafferty said his team will be tough to beat if they keep driving, but neither he nor club president Bobby Bauer would say they would take the series in four straight.

ALL-EAST EFFORT

With the exception of the last 10 minutes of the second period when the Dutchmen relaxed after picking up a 5-1 lead, the game belonged to the eastern representatives.

The Dutchies led 2-0 at the end of the first and 5-3 at the second before adding three more in the final.

Harry Psutka opened the scoring in the first period with a 50-foot screened shot on a pass from Bob Schnurr. Art Hurst angled a shot in for Dutchies' second goal.

In the second period, Charlie Brooker climaxed a three-way play at 1:20. Angelo Defelice opened the scoring for the V's with a long shot, but Kitchener got that one back when Paul Oliver sank another Schnurr pass. Don Rope made it 5-1 then Penticton's second goal came when Don Berry connected with Ernie Rucks' pass.

A two-way play gave Penticton its third goal when Frank Warwick finished off brother Bill's pass.

Clare Martin replied for the Dutchies in the third period. Doug Verity added No. 7 and then Greig Hicks ended the scoring.

Found Guilty Of Poor Conduct

BALTIMORE (AP)—Larry MacPhail was found guilty Thursday of conduct detrimental to horse racing during a short and stormy career as president of the Bowie track

The Maryland racing commission made its decisions after MacPhail failed to appear at a second hearing on the charge. His lawyer, William D. MacMillan, said he was unable to offer any defence because he hadn't been able to locate MacPhail.

The commission ruled its April 14 order banning MacPhail from entering Bowie would be continued until after the spring meeting ending Saturday. The punishment amounts to a 17-day suspension.

MacPhail was removed by the Bowie directors as president three days after the commission originally suspended him. The 63-year-old former baseball magnate still faces police charges of drunk and disorderly conduct and assaulting a state trooper.

Both sets of charges arose from MacPhail's actions at Bowie Saturday, April 11.

DO YOU OWN A CAR?

When the man who developed Bardahl Rad Conditioner brought his car to a garage for repairs, the garage owner phoned to ask him what on earth had he put in his radiator. He said that when they drained his radiator the water was so thick with dirt it would hardly pour. The Bardahl Rad Conditioner had removed rust, scale and dirt untouched by a popular brand chemical cleaner. The garage owner immediately placed an order for their own use. Since then hundreds of thousands of car owners in Canada and the United States have used Bardahl Rad Conditioner. If you own a car you should try it too . . . If your car is new it will keep your radiator in permanently new condition . . . If you have been running your car for a few years you'll be amazed at the dirt, rust and scale it will remove. Bardahl Rad Conditioner keeps radiators clean . . . eliminates rust formation which can insulate a motor, causing harmful overheating . . and it also lubricates and stops squeaky water pumps. Bardahl Rad Conditioner costs only 89c. Ask for it at your Service Station.

Dodgers Trim Cincinnati As Giants Snap Losing Streak, Win 1-0

By BEN PHLEGAR, Associated Press Sports Writer

Philadelphia Phillies are finding the going tougher after their eight-game winning spree in the first weeks of the new baseball season. Today the Phillies clutch a half-game lead in the National League, all the remains of the 2½-game bulge they proudly owned when the Cardinals flew in from St. Louis three nights ago. The Cards got two victories and a tie in their first three meetings of the season with the league leaders. St. Louis clipped one game off the Phils Tuesday with a 7-6 edge over Jim Konstanty and his successors. Wednesday night the Cards beat Curt Simmons 1-0 in 11 innings.

Thursday night they battled Robin Roberts to a 1-1 tie until rain ended the game after five innings. Ray Jablonski homered in the second inning to put St. Louis in front, but the Phils came back for one in their half of the second on a pair of singles and an infield out. The teams will have to start all over later in the season.

ONE OF FOUR HITS

Brooklyn Dodgers won their fourth straight during the afternoon as they trimmed Cincinnati Redlegs 7-4. New York Giants snapped a three-game losing streak with a 1-0 squeaker over Milwaukee and Pittsburgh edged Chicago 4-2 in other National League action.

In the American League New York Yankees whipped Chicago White Sox 6-1 and St. Louis Browns defeated Washington 3-1. Philadelphia's game at Detroit was rained out. Boston and Cleveland weren't scheduled.

The Yankees, who got soaked $450 in fines for their part in the melee in St. Louis Tuesday night, found themselves involved in another small ruckus in Chicago.

LOT OF DOUBTS

Mickey Mantle has been hitting his home runs so far that they've left no doubt, but at Comiskey Park in the fourth inning, he belted one about which the White Sox had a lot of doubts. The ball bounced back on to the field after a boy with more desire than talent made an unsuccessful stab at catching it. Umpire Jim Duffy waved Mantle around and, when Chicago manager Paul Richards beefed too long about the decision, Duffy waved him out of the park.

Hitting star of the contest was young Bill Renna, up from Kansas City. He homered, tripled and singled in four trips. The husky righthander was playing left field for Gene Woodling, who was benched with inflamed eyes.

Bob Elliott took over the runs-batted-in lead in the American League Thursday night with a three-run home run, all the runs the Browns needed to beat Washington.

BREAKS UP DUEL

The drive broke up a pitching duel between Chuck Stobbs and Virgil Trucks, who gave up only three hits to the Senators.

Brooklyn spotted Cincinnati two runs in the first inning and then caught up fast as Duke Snider homered in the Dodger half of the first with Peewee Reese on base. Brooklyn went ahead to stay in the second inning with four more runs.

At Pittsburgh, rookie Frank Thomas broke up a 2-2 tie in the last of the ninth when he homered with Ralph Kiner on base to end the game.

At New York, Bobby Thomson, who became a permanent Giant favorite when he won the deciding game of the 1951 playoff series against Brooklyn with a ninth-inning home run, provided a considerably shorter duplicate to break up the game with Milwaukee.

Thomson's blow, only the fifth hit off Vern Bickford, hit the top of the short left field wall and bounced into the stands. Sal Maglie pitched his first complete game of the season in picking up his second victory. He's lost one.

Anglican Student Ministers To Study At Millbrook For Second Year

MILLBROOK (ENS)—For the second successive year, the rural training school for Anglican theological students will be held in the parish of Cavan.

The purpose of the school is to acquaint theological students, the majority of them with city backgrounds, with the life and problems of people in rural communities.

The Rev. A. A. Chote, B.A., L.Th., who until early this year was rector of the parish of Cavan, wil be dean of the school. Mr. Chote is now rector of St. Mary's, Richmond Hill.

The school will begin on Sunday, May 3, when registration and billeting will take place. For the nine days of the school the students will live in farm homes of the parish. From Sunday to Wednesday evening, the school will meet in St. Thomas' Church, Millbrook, moving to Christ Church, Bailieboro, for Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

The final days of the school, Monday and Tuesday, will be held in St. John's, Ida Among the speakers will be the Rev. Allan Read, of Mono Mills, in whose parish the school originated the year before it was moved to Cavan parish. Mr. Read will lecture in Rural Sociology each morning of the school.

OTHER SPEAKERS

Other speakers will be Dr. O. E. A. Stephens, of Agincourt, speaking on "Practical Christianity"; Mr. A. L. Lark, of the Gestetner Company on "The Parish Bulletin"; A. E. Summers, Agricultural Representative of Durham County, on "The Relationship of the Agricultural Representative to the Rural Church"; Weston Bannister, of Campbellcroft, whose subject will be "The Relationship of the Federation of Agriculture to the Rural Church"; Dr. M. E. Hobbs, speaking on "Co-operation Between the Country Doctor and the Rural Clergy"; Miss Louise Colley, director of recreation for Barrie and district, will conduct recreation periods.

Noon prayers and evensong will be taken by the Rev. T. A. Nind, of Port Hope.

The school will be formally opened by the Rev. Leonard Hatfield, field secretary for the Council of Social Service, on Monday evening, May 4. The Rev. Major John Foote, MPP, will be present at the opening which the public of the parish is invited to attend.

There will be two free afternoons during the school for the students to spend on the farm. There will be visits to rural schools. Time for study periods and discussion sessions will also be set aside.

One afternoon of the school will be reserved for the Ganaraska field trip led by Mack Kirk, of Lindsay.

CAS To Mark 60th Anniversary

Foster Parents Given Free Hand In Early Days Of Children's Aid

The Children's Aid Society in Peterborough, which is this year celebrating its 60th anniversary, in its early years had little funds with which to carry on its work. When the Children's Protection Act was passed, it anticipated a home for children involving expense and the Act provided that the municipalities would contribute $1.00 per week for this home. The first financial report that can be found was in 1900 when the county grant was $100.00, town grant $300.00, and subscriptions $159.00. The expenses of the children in the Shelter were $250, the agent's salary $100.00, rent $50.00, sundry $159.00.

One is impressed by the amount of volunteer work done. The interest and enthusiasm of the citizens in providing relief, particularly clothing, was commendable. There was no welfare organization to dispense relief. "The charitably disposed are many and it only remains to investigate carefully before calling on the charitable for food and clothing."

Physical abuse and poverty seem to have been the outstanding problems, although juvenile deliquency is mentioned as early as 1899. In that year out of the 89 cases, "41 were in juvenile court." There is no explanation about the juvenile court but it may mean that 41 juveniles were in court.

As early the 1898 the Society recognized the value of a child's own home. The secretary, in reporting to the annual meeting, said:

"It becomes increasingly difficult each year to measure the progress any good work is making solely by the standard of statistics. The whole spirit of the Society is to conserve and purify home life."

PLACED IN FREE HOMES

Lack of funds made it impossible to place children from the Shelter in any but free homes.

Older children were placed more readily as they were wanted for work. Many annual reports refer to abuses of this idea, such as children working too hard and being kept out of school to work.

In the placement of children in foster homes, the feelings and wishes of the foster parents got full consideration, with little reference to the needs of the individual children. An extract from the annual meeting of 1903 is as follows:

"There are several children in the Shelter for whom we will be glad to receive applications. Our members should endeavour to make known as widely as possible the terms and conditions upon which the children are sent out. They are the simplest in the world and are contained in the following sentence: A foster parent may return a child at any time. Surely under conditions as broad as these no one need hesitate to make the harmless experiment of giving a home to a homeless child."

In 1906 reference is made to replacing the child from one home to another and again emphasis is placed on the rights of the foster parents.

"We would like to impress upon foster parents, that if they are not suited with the child first given them, they may at any time exchange it for another."

ILLEGITIMATE CHILDREN

About 1901, the ladies of the Society appointed for the purpose of investigating the question of illegitimacy formally requested the secretary to take over no more illegitimate children. The government had refused to make any provision for them as a class. "What then is to be done with them?" was asked, but not answered. However, in 1905 the secretary reported that "although it is against the rule of the Society to take as wards infant children, we were obliged in defiance of our own rule to take two infant children."

In this year, too, reference was made in the annual report to Bill: "This boy gave us a lot of trouble and finally escaped from our Shelter. He was too big a boy for our methods which are only to be relied upon with the smaller children."

The recognition of the limitations of the service that could be given was of great importance.

In 1908 the Society, which had been giving relief baskets, decided that these would be given by the relief officer to prevent overlapping.

The presidents of the boards during this period were: Jas. A. Hall, J. J. McBain, J. H. Burnham, T. F. Mathews, R. W. Travers. The secretaries: R. M. Dennistoun, E. L. Goodwill. The agents (now called superintendents) were: Chief Roszel, George Cochrane.

It was in 1911 that Mrs. W. G. Gibbs, now an honorary member, became a member of the board of directors.

Dorsey Brothers Team Up For New Band

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The news that Jimmy and Tommy Dorsey are forming a band together caused a stir in musical circles. Folks are wondering if the boys have mellowed enough to get along on the same bandstand.

The Dorseys spent most of the first 40 years of their lives fighting with each other. A fight in 1935 broke up their first band together. But perhaps Jimmy and Tommy, 49 and 47 respectively, can play in harmony now.

Music fans hope so, particularly those who recall the great Dorsey bands of the '30s and '40s. The two Shenandoah, Penn., boys have added much to the legend and legacy of popular music.

James Francis Dorsey was born in a coal mining family two years before Thomas Francis Dorsey. But as they grew up, Tommy was the one who started the fights. He was excitable and aggressive. Jimmy was shy, but had enough Irish in him to fight back.

FATHER AMBITIOUS

Their father earned $10.20 a week in the mines, but he had ambitions for his sons. A musician, he instructed them in the cornet when they were five and seven.

Jimmy quit high school after one year and became a blacksmith's helper. In 1922 they joined some friends in leaving town to try their luck in the music world.

Their first job paid $285 a week for the whole band in a Baltimore park. The Dorseys' luck improved in New York, where they played with the Paul Whiteman and Vincent Lopez bands. But Tommy wasn't happy.

"We're suckers," he'd say. "We should have our own band."

"No," said cautious Jimmy. "We are making good money. Be satisfied."

CONSTANT ROWS

Tommy won out, and they formed the Dorsey brothers orchestra, which had such stars as Glenn Miller, Charlie Spivak, Ray McKinley, Bunny Berigan and Bob Crosby. Despite their success, the brothers tiffed constantly.

On the night of May 30, 1935, the band was playing the Glen Island Casino in New York. Tommy started the beat for "I'll Never Say Never Again." Jimmy didn't like the tempo and said so. Hot words followed, and Tommy stalked off the bandstand. He never returned.

"I'm going to start my own band," Tommy vowed. "I won't give up until it's twice as good as his."

Jimmy came to Hollywood for the lush job of conducting for Bing Crosby. Tommy hit the road, playing the grind of one-nighters. Finally he hit the bigtime with his records of "Marie" and "Song of India."

Has Five Questions About Nurseries

OTTAWA (CP)—J. H. Rooney (L—Toronto St. Paul's) Thursday gave notice of five questions he will ask the government concerning the Rosehall Nurseries Limited of Brantford. Notice appeared in the Commons votes and proceedings.

Mr. Rooney asks whether the nurseries had contracts with Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation or any other branch of the government since 1949 and, if so, what was the total amount of money involved.

Other questions:

Has Rosehall Nurseries contracts being performed at present? If so, how many and what is the amount involved? Who are the directors of the nurseries?

Protest College Site

TORONTO (CP)—The Ontario Teachers' Federation, governing body of the province's 27,000 teachers, in a letter to Education Minister Dunlop Thursday, protested the site of the new teachers' college. The college, which is to be built in East Toronto, should be closer to the University of Toronto, the federation said.

Once Prominent Vienna Physician Suffered In Korean Prison Camp

Philip Deane continues to-day his story of life as prisoner of war in Korea.

BY PHILIP DEANE
Correspondent of Observer (London)

Later that day I was driven in a jeep out of the town to a ramshackle group of huts. While I sat waiting in a room, a bronzed, blue-eyed, barefoot man strode purposefully in.

"I", he said, in a firm parade ground voice, "am Lord, of the Salvation Army. It's good to see you."

A few moments later, in another part of the building, a kindly giant with a soft Irish brogue helped me lay down on the floor.

"Relax," said Monseigneur Thomas Quinlan, "relax, my boy, you are now with friends." I was in the camp for the civilian internees of North Korea.

It had been a school building—with consecutive rooms connected by a long corridor. There was the British room, the miscellaneous room, the French room, the women's room and the American room. The rooms were not allowed to communicate with one another. We were not allowed to go to the toilet without permission from the guards. We were all desperately hungry because the food consisted of three teacupfuls of rice a day and three teaspoonfuls of turnip-top juice.

An incredibly dirty Korean brought us water in a bucket that normally stood by the neighbouring pig-sty. We all, of course, had dysentry, but there was no treatment. In the American room there was a doctor, yet the guards would not allow us to consult him They would never accede to anyone's request—only to Monseigneur Quinlan, whose Irish charm worked even on North Korean prison warders. As a special favour to him, they allowed Dr. Ernst Kisch, of Vienna, to look at my wounds, to squeeze out the bullets that were near the surface, to remove as much of the infection as he could and to pack the wounds with some sulphanilamide powder which the French charge d'affaires had somehow managed to bring with him into internment. That was a whole week after the North Koreans captured me.

Of all the tragedies of this internment Dr. Ernst Kisch's was, perhaps, the most tragic. Until 1936 he had been a fashionable physician in Vienna. His was a brilliant clientele of beautiful people, who liked his knowledge and his ready wit. And then he found himself wearing a yellow armlet with "Jew" written on it. He was put in Dachau, and afterwards in Buchenwald. In 1939, some friends —diplomats—managed to get him released. The tired, almost broken man, was offered employment in the Shanghai Methodist Hospital, from where he went to the American Methodist Hospital in Kaeson, right on the 38th Parallel.

At 5 a.m. on the morning of June 25, 1950, North Korean tommy-gunners jumped into his room and dragged him, in his underwear, to the prison. There he found the other members of the American Methodist Mission. All day, as is the rule in Oriental gaols, Dr. Kisch was made to squat. He was shouted at, starved, and taken to the lavatory only once a day. Then, packed in a cattle-truck with so many people that one could only sit with legs drawn up right under the chin, he was made to wait for days in Seoul station, forbidden to get out, even when United Nations planes strafed the sidings. Miraculously he was not hit, and arrived finally in the dilapidated school where he treated me. Dr. Kisch's country, Austria, is not a member of the United Nations. Even in the times of her empire, she had never attacked Korea in any way. Dr. Kisch, who for a pittance devoted his skill to the service of the Koreans, was imprisoned because he was not a Communist. During the captivity his greatest hardship he said, was not being allowed to use his knowledge in curing anyone. Dr. Kisch, who survived Dachau and Buchenwald, died of starvation in North Korea. His story can be told because he is dead. The story of others who are still alive in the hands of the Communists must remain, for the time being, untold.

The oldest member of the camp was eighty-two—Father Paul Villemot, who came to Korea when he was in his early twenties, had to hide from persecution, made converts and built cathedrals

He was bedridden when the North invaded, refusing to go home, wanting to die in his beloved Korea, to be buried like the old Korean men he so resembled by now. He was dragged—literally to the prison, fed on boiled barley once a day, packed in a cattle-truck, and finally dumped on the bare verminous floor of the school where we were interned.

In another room, a small breast-fed baby was dying. His mother's milk had stopped and he could not digest the other food. As an immense concession the guards gave the mother some hot water. Inexplicably the mother's milk came back. The baby lived

At night, the mosquitoes lice and bugs, kept us awake. It was a relief to be called away for the interrogations that went on constantly in another part of the building. These were carried out by minor officals who had forms to fill. "What's your name? Christian names? Aliases? Father's name? Mother's name? Their ages? What countries have you ever visited? Write down exact dates of arrival at and departures from those countries."

Then: "What other relatives have you got? Cousins, aunts, uncles? Do you expect us to believe you have no more?" (Because in Korea there are no more than about a dozen surnames and because of the similarity of the other names people are identified by the names of their relatives.)

"Why do you want more?"

"We are not authorized to tell you."

It was the French who started the fashion of inventing relatives.

"The little men were so insistent," said Georges Perruche, the French charge d'affaires in Seoul, "I felt it was hurting their feelings if I stopped giving them names."

Somewhere in the archives of North Korea there is a voluminous dossier about M. Perruche's mythical schizophrenic aunt who paints pictures while riding a bicycle and gets arrested for breaking traffic regulations—about how Lenin's treatise on art influenced the brushwork of the aunt, about her renunciation of realistic naturalism "pour de l'accomegalisme senile."

"Please," asked the interrogator, could you tell me how to write this. What is it?" "A French art school," said Perruche. "You are decadent," said the large-eared young Asiatic, shaking his bespectacled face pityingly.

Humour was a rare and precious commodity., and the few occasions on which it could be displayed remained stamped in my memory, with other small human details.

"Francis, Francis," said Mgr. Quinlan to a learner of bridge, "when I say one club after passing the first time, it is not a forcing bid."

Every night, one interrogator pressed me to broadcast. Five days after my arrival at the Pyongyang school, on August 4, 1950, a car came to fetch me.

"We are taking you into town," said the escorting interpreter, "because here you are afraid to broadcast. Your compatriots will not let you, and especially Capt. Vyvyan Holt (the interned British Minister who was repatriated with me)."

They took me to a Japanese house in the town, where I was seated at a large table facing three interrogators. A very large electric lamp hung down six inches from my face. There were blankets over the windows and it was very hot. The man sitting in the middle started talking:

"You came to Korea with the American invaders. You were captured at the front. You were treated kindly — not like the Americans treat prisoners. You have seen the destruction. American planes bomb our hospitals. This is civil war. They have used their automatic majority in the United Nations to bring in their satellites against us. Britain is a satellite. We do not fight Britain. Our ships do not bombard British shores. Our men have not invaded your country. Why do you come here to fight us? Do you not think war is unnecessary? Do you not think that a small country like ours should be allowed at last, after 50 years of slavery, to decide its own fate?

"Do you think the English people — the mothers and wives especially—want young Englishmen killed? You are married. Do you think your wife liked your going to Korea? And how do you think she feels now, without news from you, not knowing whether you are alive, listening to hear from the radio that you are not dead? You would like to hear from her also, would you not? We can get a telegram from her in a few hours. We would like to do that for you. Now if you will speak on the radio, if you will condemn the atrocities which you have seen, if you will speak of the dead women and children, then your wife will hear your voice and she will be happy. And we will bring you a telegram from her.

"No you cannot just broadcast a message. This war-time we cannot waste an important propaganda weapon like our radio for personal messages. You understand that, don't you? Do you think broadcasting personal messages would have good propaganda value? We don't. If you want your wife to hear you are alive you will have to record a broadcast giving your impressions of the American bombing. You will not? Because your contract binds you? Your contract with whom? Do you think the newspaper you work for cares about you? You are very naive. Do you think millionaires make money by being charitable? Do you think they will look after your wife? Does your contract oblige them to pay her a pension after your death? You are not dead yet, as you say, but they don't know. If you broadcast, and it is proved you are alive, they may pay her your salary, although even that is doubtful. You know what newspapers are like. They work for profits, not charity. Really, do you want us to believe you are so naive?

"I'll tell you what, if you broadcast as we tell you, if you prove to us that you are what you claim to be — an impartial reporter — if you co-operate with us in exposing the Anglo-American crimes, then we will liberate you. You are a civilian, we have no reason to keep you here. We are not your enemies. We help those who help us. Do what we ask you and we will send you through China to Hong Kong. No, we cannot send you first, you must broadcast first, we cannot trust you. How can you trust us? But we are empowered to speak on behalf of the People's Government. I see you do not trust us. Yet you have no choice. Do you think your wife would thank you for dying here? Do you think it is worth being pig-headed? Can you not rid yourself of your prejudices for a while? Let your mind be free. Give us the chance to explain.

"After all, you should look at both sides of the picture. No, you did not have exact information about us before. Your Press is biased. You have heard Moscow broadcasts and read Communist books? And you were not convinced? Don't you see that your environment, those people you call your friends, everything around you, were bound to influence you against understanding us? Intellectual honesty, you know, is a difficult achievement. It is so subjective. Why do you refuse to consider our point of view? We are a small poor country. Some of our institutions might shock the Western mind. I am a professor of ethnology, I have studied in Berlin and London, and I know how the West thinks.

"I am not a Communist myself. You do not approve of our methods? But we have to adopt emergency measures. We are centuries behind. We cannot, for the sake of the suffering people, wait for the slow process of reform. Can you justify, from the standpoint of humanism, the starvation of a child? You say neither can you justify aggression? But we did not attack. We can prove it with documents captured in Seoul. We are preparing a book on the subject."

Then the tone changed.

"I am afraid that the Minister was right. You cannot be a journalist. If you were a journalist you would not mind reporting facts. We've heard this story about your contract. You are just dodging the issue. You are afraid to write because you cannot write, and you are afraid we will find out. Come to think of it, your accent is not completely English. On your way from Seoul to Pyongyang you talked to a man in police uniform. We cannot find him. We believe he was your contact. Our headquarters were bombed the next day. You went through there. You must have given away the location. It was not visible from the air. Who was that man? We have ways of making you talk, you know. We are not savages, we are civilized people. We are trying to be kind, but you realize that we must think of our country and its security. Who was that man? Of course you'd say you don't know. And what will happen when we catch him and confront him with you?"

Yes, what would happen when they'd confront me with the poor, kind wretch who made the mistake of saying: "I'm sorry, I'm a Christian."

"You," the ethnologist continued, "have a chance of saving your life, of making your wife happy, of becoming free again. You refuse to take this chance. What happens to you from now on will be your own fault. We are not savages, we are civilized people. We do not want to illtreat you, especially if your are a journalist. But we cannot find the man with whom you spoke. So you must prove that you are not a spy. If you don't, then on your head be it."

I felt sure, then, that they would use physical violence, and I told myself that I would give way at the first signs. But they did not touch me. They just went on—the three of them relaying one another, alternating threats with cajolery, abandoning the spy theme to appeal to my objectivity as a reporter, interlarding their talks with Marxist jargon, building up elaborately complicated arguments which sounded so logical except for some flaw It was awfully important to keep finding that flaw, to keep control of the facts one had known and which were being washed away by the ceaseless talk.

I arrived at that house late on the evening of August 4. At the edge of the blankets hanging before the windows, hours later, I saw the light of day come in. I saw the signs of dawn that way three times during the ceaseless interrogation. Then I remembered nothing more—until I came to, in a bed, with an English-speaking Korean police captain sitting by my bedside.

"You have been very ill," he said, "and I have orders that you should not die. The correspondent of the 'Daily Worker' cabled London about your capture and your newspaper is making much noise about you. They have also asked for your release in the United Nations. I think you must be important. And you must be well."

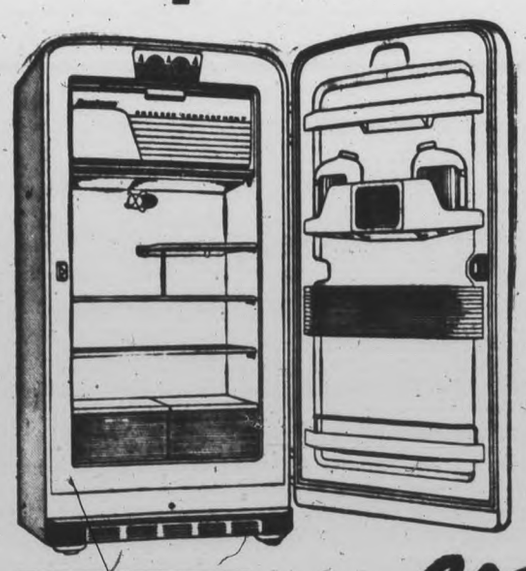
FLAMES AND SMOKE rocket skywards as the news camera records this dramatic picture of an explosion at the Canadian Oil Companies' plant last night. Firemen battled throughout the night to bring the roaring inferno under control and prevent the flames from spreading to nearby oil storage tanks. The loading ramp at left fell prey to the searing flames minutes after this picture was taken.

Urges Farmers Get More Aid In Raising Hogs

OTTAWA (CP)—Arnold Darroch (L — Wellington North) told the government Thursday it should offer greater financial encouragement to Canadian farmers to produce top-quality hogs.

Speaking in the House of Commons on agricultural estimates, the Ontario farmer said quality is the best guarantee of good markets. For that reason it was not right that there should be only an average of 60 cents apiece difference in prices paid for grade A and grade B hogs.



The difference should be at least $4. As a start, the government should increase the bonus it pays farmers for grade A hogs to $3 from $2, he said.

FARMERS CONCERNED

Andrew McLean (L — Huron Perth) said farmers were concerned about getting an equitable balance between costs and prices. Consumers tended to blame the farmers for high food prices, but they seemed to forget the higher costs of freighting, packaging and handling.

Mr. McLean felt that mechanization of distribution may be the end instead of the means to an end. Possibly that should be investigated and some steps eliminated.

DEPARTMENTAL HURDLE — Assistant Fire Commissioner Anthony J. Mullany climbs over a desk at the crowded County Building in Chicago to reach the witness stand. An inquest was being held into the recent Haber factory fire that killed 34 people.

'Paul Revere' Saves Village From Flames

PORT ARTHUR—A present-day Paul Revere Thursday was being given much of the credit for saving the village of Kakabeka Falls from a grass fire that managed to level a church and nearby hall before it was brought under control at another district point. A Fort William timber contractor lost his life in a similar blaze.

At Kakabeka Falls, 18 miles west of here, an Anglican Church frame building and mission hall were destroyed with a loss of $10,000. At Finmark, 50 miles west, the body of Anton Salo was found in a fire-scarred field of his homestead, a pail of water nearby.

Residents of Kakabeka retired Wednesday night believeing a grass fire which had been burning, was out. But 2:35 a.m. the entire population was awakened by a motorist who drove up and down the streets blowing his horn.

200 KEEP

More than 200 villagers turned out with trucks, pails and barrels of water and fire hose but were unable to stop the church blaze which burned for three hours. The bucket brigade was successful however, in quelling sparks and flames which threatened other village buildings in a brisk breeze.

Provincial police here were informed today of the death of Salo who left his Fort William home Friday. He was 64 and it is believed he died from a heart attack resulting from exhaustion while fighting a mushrooming grass blaze. His body was found in a field.

The blaze burned down the one-storey homestead and adjoining barn. Salo has been timber contractor in the district for 15 years and is believed to have been alone when the fire occurred.

Donati's was the finest comet of the 19th century and is known as the typical comet.

Two Indignant Senators Tick Off CBC, Whitton

OTTAWA (CP)—The CBC, Charlotte Whitton, Donald Gordon and the cabinet all got ticked off Thursday by two indignant senators.

Senator Thomas Reid (L—British Columbia) took care of the first two. He said he suspects the CBC aims to throw an iron curtain around Canada as far as television is concerned but that the people who can get U.S. stations go right on listening to them anyway.

He said the CBC's recent "narrow attitude" on television may alienate the general feeling of goodwill it has built up. The way it had delayed private stations from coming into British Columbia, although a CBC station wouldn't be ready for months, had angered people in that area and might well provoke a big political issue

He couldn't understand why private initiative was being so denied in Canada in the television field, unless the object was to throw up a curtain to keep up U.S. broadcasts. If this were true, the public should be told.

NO SCRAMBLING

His attack on Ottawa's mayor Whitton came in reply to a rebuttal the mayor made to previous criticisms in which she said she couldn't understand why senators went scrambling after Senate appointments when they didn't like Ottawa.

He didn't scramble after his appointment, said Senator Reid. It was offered to him and he wasn't foolish enough to refuse something he knew would never be offered twice. As for Ottawa, he liked the place but he still thought civic administration should be cut in two because its 23 controllers and aldermen plus the mayor made a total well out of proportion to the totals in such larger cities as Toronto and Vancouver.

The other raps came from Senator John T. Haig, Progressive Conservative leader. He criticized Donald Gordon's CNR for "morally" misleading the country in claiming a surplus of roughly $140,000 in the last year. The truth, said Senator Haig, was that retroactive salary increases granted for April more than wiped out that surplus and the public should not have been fooled.

HAMPERS SENATE

As for the cabinet, he criticized it for following the usual practice of so arranging the business of the House of Commons that all important legislation came to the Senate in the last two weeks. The same thing was happening all over again and it wasn't right because it gave the Senate too little time to consider vital matters, such as the bill to abolish the $2.50 radio licence on which Senator Reid spoke and the annual bill on CNR financing on which he himself spoke.

Salvage Gold Bars

AUCKLAND, N.Z. (Reuters)—Two gold bars, valued at about $28,000, have been recovered from the wreck of the liner Niagara and were brought here Thursday by a British salvage tug. The tug will return to the site off the North Auckland coast in an attempt to recover 35 more bars still in the sunken liner, which struck a German mine in 1940.

PARALYZED ARTIST—Earl Bailly, 48, of Lunenburg, N.S., one of Canada's most popular artists, was paralyzed at the age of three and can only move his head. He paints a waterfront scene from a specially-equipped chair, using his teeth to hold the brush. His work is snapped up by tourists.

Three-Car Pileup Injures Four People

TORONTO (CP)—Two St. Catharines residents were among four persons injured in a three-car pileup on the western outskirts of Toronto Thursday night.

They were Pearl Wright, who suffered facial cuts, and Walter Kugler.

Also hurt were Leo Ranko and Ernest Ronski, both of Toronto.

Police said two late-model cars crashed head-on. A third car ran into the tangle of wreckage.

Cook Book Author Nellie Pattinson Dies

TORONTO (CP)—Widely known in the household economics field, Nellie Lyall Pattinson died Thursday. She was the author of "The Canadian Cook Book," used by housewives and as a textbook for household science classes in secondary schools.

Born in Bowmanville, Miss Pattinson was a graduate of the Hamilton Normal school. She leaves one brother, Fred, of Bowmanville.

Preliminary Hearing In Murder Case

MONTREAL (CP)—James Rogers, 21, Montreal, and Frank Battaglia, 37, of Brockville, appeared for preliminary hearing Thursday before Judge Gerald Almond on a charge of murder in connection with the slaying of Charles (the Kid) Waggoner.

Found criminally responsible earlier by a coroner's jury, the two men were remanded to May 7.

Waggoner's body, weighed down in a creek at nearby St. Mathieu de LaPrairie with a 343-pound rock and a bullet wound in the head, was found March 29.

A FORMER MINISTER of Park Street Baptist Church, the Rev. C. C. Boyter will be the preacher at the 58th anniversary services on Sunday. My Boyter now of Parkdale Street Baptist Church, Toronto, was minister at Park Street for seven years during the Second World War and immediately following it.

Bishop Barnes Retires; Many Disputes

BIRMINGHAM (Reuters) — Dr. Ernest Barnes, 79-year-old "heretical" bishop of Birmingham, retired today because of ill health after 29 controversial years in the post.

The Anglican church leader attracted world-wide attention for doubting Christ's virgin birth, miracle cures and bodily resurrection on grounds they were scientifically untrue. He refused to resign in 1947 after being called upon publicly to do so by the Archbishop of Canterbury, Dr. Geoffrey Fisher, primate of the Church of England.

Dr. Barnes went into retirement quietly with a farewell message free of controversy. He wished the church and laity "God speed in the work which lies ahead" and expressed the hope they will "continue to bring to that work the quiet confidence wherein lies strength."

Too ill from asthma to leave his house, the bishop was visited by local churchmen who presented him with a small gift. At the same time, they launched an appeal to build a permament memorial to him in Birmingham Cathedral.

The bishop stirred up violent controversies on a variety of topics from the first year of his appointment here. He wrote three books on religion, all devoted to his central theme that there is a scientific answer for practically everything.

Some of the bishop's controversial opinions were:

The virgin birth: "The stories have a pagan background. The mistranslation turned the word meaning 'young woman' in the original Hebrew text into 'the virgin' of Matthew's Gospel."

Christ's miracles: "Man is naturally superstitious, but science has proved that nothing can happen contrary to the law of nature. The time has come when the mistaken assumptions of the pre-scientific, pre-critical era must be repudiated."

Communism: "I very much doubt whether a motion advocating the extermination of communism by war would succeed in the average church community."

Birth control: "Are the great countries of the world to have populations so large that they become an excuse, albeit a mistaken excuse, for war? Are we to refuse to have restraints that limit the increase even of bad stock?"

Family Thrilled Soldier Alive

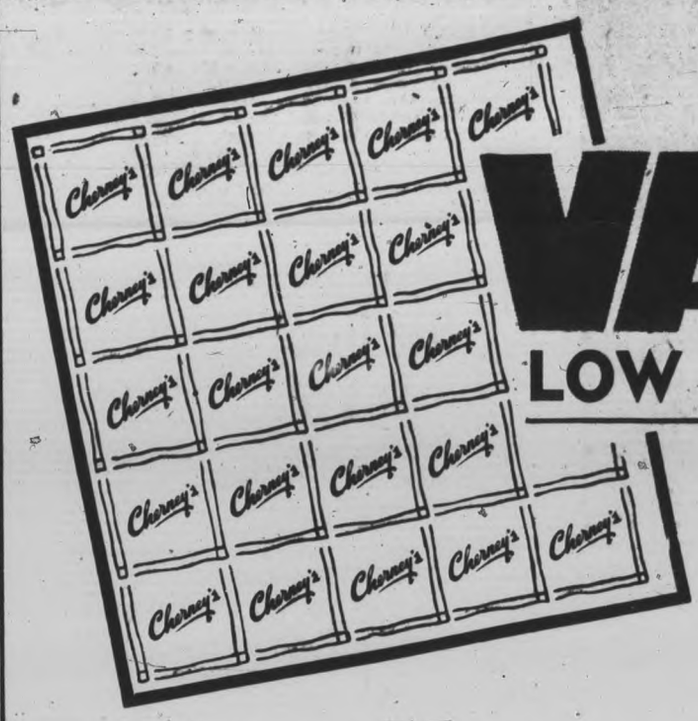
NEW WATERFORD, N. S. (CP) —"That's wonderful!" Shirley Jewer said today when told her brother, Pte. Bernard Jewer of the Royal Canadian Regiment, has been reported alive and well in a North Korean prison camp.

She said her mother, Mrs. Daisy Jewer, switched on a radio by her hospital bed and heard the news.

Pte. Jewer was listed as missing in action by the army Oct. 31, 1952, and the family has not yet received official word of his safety.

But a list of Canadian prisoners of war, released in Tokyo today by two returned fellow prisoners, contained the name of an unidentified soldier not carried in previous reports. L. Cpl. Paul Dugal of Quebec City and Pte. Arthur J. Baker of Montreal said the soldier's next of kin was Mrs. A. Jewer of New Waterford.

"Everybody is overjoyed," Miss Jewer said. "Our phone hasn't stopped ringing all morning."



Pte. Jewer, 22, who had been working in Montreal and Toronto, joined the army in Toronto just after Christmas last year. Another brother, Lloyd, is with the navy at Esquimalt.

Small Factory Blown To Fragments, 1 Killed

PEABODY, Mass. (AP) — An earth-trembling chemical explosion blasted a small factory to fragments Thursday killing at least one man, injuring 25 persons and causing an estimated hundreds of thousands of dollars damage.

The blast rocked this north shore industrial city, 20 miles from Boston. First reports said four were killed but two hours after the first of a series of sharp blasts no bodies were found. Fred Lawson of Salem, one of the workers, died in a hospital.

CRACK DOWN ON MAU MAU TERRORISTS—Following recent outbreaks of Mau Mau terrorism in Kenya, East Africa, the British have begun a roundup of those suspected of belonging to the bloody native organization. Picture at left shows an armed guard watching over some of the 1,000 Mau Mau suspects netted in the recent raids on the village of Mathari, near Nairobi. British troops destroyed the village, which had been one of the worst Mau Mau centres. Other photo shows police guarding a line of suspects in the Nairobi municipal market. Authorities were screening the suspects in an attempt to find the terrorists who had recently murdered an Englishman.

Senate Approves Credit Unions

OTTAWA (CP) — The Senate Thursday night approved legislation under which credit unions will be able to do a Canada-wide business. They now are restricted within their own provincial boundaries.

The measure, which engendered opposition in Senate discussion previously, was endorsed after a Senate committee wrote tighter control provisions into it.

The amendments provide that loans by a credit union in one province to a union in another must be limited to 10 per cent of the total assets of the loaning union.

Also endorsed was a private, companion measure. It seeks incorporation of a central credit union body which will embrace credit unions in seven provinces and handle inter-provincial business for them.

Will Consider Money For PoWs

OTTAWA (CP)—Veterans Minister Lapointe said Thursday night consideration will be given to a request that Canadians who were prisoners-of-war in Europe receive $1-a-day for their term of imprisonment.

A delegation of the National Council of Canadian Prisoners met Thursday with five cabinet ministers—Mr. Lapointe, Labor Minister Gregg, Immigration Minister Harris, State Secretary Bradley and Ralph Campney, associate defence minister.

Mr. Lapointe said in an interview after the meeting that the ministers discussed some points in the delegation's brief and will take up the $1-a-day request with the cabinet.

Maj. J. R. Prefontaine, council secretary, said the government's decision to pay $1-a-day to Canadian prisoners of the Japanese established a precedent that the Enemy Alien Fund should be used for this purpose because all such prisoners were maltreated.

SET HEARING DATE

Ontario Labor Relations Board has set May 26 as the date it will hear the application of the International Association of Machinists (AFL-TLC) to represent DeLaval workers. If the application succeeds, it will be the first successful bid by a union to be bargaining agent for the workers.

CLOSING SATURDAYS

Kingston City Hall will be closed Saturdays from June 15 to September 12, a custom in Peterborough all year around. The week schedule of hours will be Monday to Thursday, 8.30 to 5 p.m. and Fridays 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. The council must have rated this a weighty question as indicated by their recorded vote of 13 to 8.

BARBER SHOP HARMONY

The Buffalo Bills are back in town Saturday night heading the SPEBSQSA program at the Collegiate auditorium. Other groups of the barber shop harmonizers are the Dulcet Tones of Oshawa; Cowling Brothers, Toronto, headed by Ald. Alf. Cowling; the Tune Twisters of Toronto; the Oshawa Chorus of 60 voices, and also the Kawartha Four of Peterborough. They represent the Society For The Preservation and Encouragement of Barbar Shop Quartette Singing In America.

TELL ME A STORY—That popular tune was whistled and hummed throughout the Peterborough district as the fish tale season began today with the opening of the trout season. Chilly wet weather and poor catches made opening day uninteresting for trout enthusiasts who chose places beside warm stoves and told fish stories. Orm Barlow (left) and Steve Stephen, both of Oshawa, laugh while resting on the car trunk. Their group caught nine trout (in middle) during the early hours at the Cavan pond.—(Examiner Staff Photo)

$30,000 Gift To Help Build Parish Hall

Col. A. G. T. LeFevre Gives Money In Honor Of Wife

LAKEFIELD (ENS)—The Anglican Church of St. John the Baptist is to have a new Sunday school hall, made possible by the gift of $30,000 from Col. A. G. T. LeFevre.

Col. LeFevre has asked that the name of his late wife, Gwyneth Tudor Wallis LeFevre, be associated with the gift, which was accepted by the church through its wardens this week.

The estimated cost of the building is $40,000, of which the parish is expected to subscribe the remaining $10,000.

The new hall will be built beside the present church instead of at the old church, now known as the parish hall, as previously planned. It is expected to be built of stone to match the existing church and will measure 50 feet by 30 feet with a basement and main hall. Plans are being prepared by architects Blackwell and Craig of Peterborough. The Rev. Lloyd J. Delaney is rector.

BORN IN LAKEFIELD

Both Col. and Mrs. LeFevre were born in Lakefield and were related to the Strickland family, a leading pioneer family in the community.

Mrs. LeFevre, who died in December, was a daughter of the late F. J. Tate, a staunch supported of St. John's Church. Col. LeFevre's grandfather, Kivis Tully was a well-known architect who designed the old Trinity College building on Queen St. in Toronto. He was association in the construction of the present Lakefield church, with the late Walter Strickland, father of Mrs. E. R. Tate of Lakefield.

Col. LeFevre is the son of the late Henry LeFevre who came to Lakefield from the channel island of Jersey. From 1873 to 1887 Col. LeFevre attended The Grove preparatory school, of which he is now a member of the board of governors.

He later attended Upper Canada College in Toronto and the Royal Military College in Kingston, graduating in civil engineering. After five years of surveying and engineering in Canada, he went as a professional engineer to Cuba, China, Colombia, Peru and Chile.

In Chile he completed his active professional work as general-manager of the Nitrate Railways and general-manager of the Tarapaca waterworks at Ique.

Col. LeFevre served with distinction in the First World War in which he was awarded the Distinguished Service Order and the Croix de Guerre. He was mentioned in despatches by Field Marshal Sir Douglas Hague and was awarded the "Orden de Merito" by the government of Chile.

Dispute Denied

Negotiations between the shop union and management of the Dominion Woollens and Worsteds commenced this week with the employees presenting their demands to C. B. Merrett, manager. Substantial increases are being asked by the production workers and further negotiations are to take place in the near future after both management and employees have had an opportunity to study the effects of the new demands.

The management emphatically denied that there was a dispute between the two parties for negotiations have only commenced.

Plan To Honor Past Engineers Of Trent Canal

Two retired superintendents of the Trent Canal will be made honorary members of the Engineering Institute of Canada at its 67th annual meeting in Halifax May 20-22.

They are Alexander Joseph Grant, former Transport Department engineer in charge of the Welland Ship Canal, at Welland, now 90 years of age; and Albert Lawrence Killaly, 78, former Transport Department superintending engineer of the Trent Canal, Peterborough.

Three other honorary memberships will be awarded to Frederick Perry Shearwood, 87, who was chief engineer of the Dominion Bridge Co., Montreal; Dr Arthur Surveyer, 75, president of the Surveyer, Nenniger and Chenevert, Montreal; and Stewart Young, 69, former director of community planning, Regina.

Honorary membership is bestowed for outstanding engineering achievement and service to the Institute.

WENT TO WELLAND

Alex Grant was superintending engineer in charge of construction during the years from 1908 to 1911 when he was transferred to Welland. A. L. Killaly came to Peterborough in 1944 as superintending engineer in charge of operations. In 1945 he was succeeded by Thomas J. Ryan.

Ross L. Dobbin, retiring manager of Peterborough Utilities, will assume the presidency of the Engineering Institute during the Halifax convention.

Fell From Car Man Dies In Hospital

Carl Coulter Injured Monday, Will Hold Inquest

LINDSAY (ENS) — A Reaboro farmer, Carl Coulter, who fell out of a car his wife was driving Monday, died of his injuries Thursday in Ross Memorial Hospital in Lindsay.

An inquest will be held Police said that Mrs. Coulter heard the door latch open beside her husband who was sitting in the front seat with her. She slammed on the brakes and Coulter pitched out and struck his head on the pavement.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Coulter are natives of Minden. During last winter Coulter worked in the lumber bushes around Minden to pay off the money owing on a small farm they were buying near Reaboro.

The accident victim is survived by his wife, the former Blanche Nesbitt, and four children. He was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Coulter.

The funeral service will be held Saturday in the Pentecostal Church, Minden. Burial will be in Bethel cemetery.

$300 Clothing Only Loot In Three Tries

Three break-ins took place in Peterborough Thursday night or early Friday morning. Two netted nothing while a third resulted in the theft of $300 worth of women's clothing.

Marguerite Myers of Toronto had left her car on the city parking lot while staying overnight at the Empress Hotel. Sometime during the night someone pried the draft window of the car open, gaining entrance and stealing the clothing.

Nothing was noticed missing from the Godson Motors Ltd. this morning when a break-in was discovered there. Thieves attempted to enter through a door at the rear but after breaking a small window there, could not gain entrance.

They eventually opened a larger window in the paint shop but on entering knocked several cans of paint over The paint spilled on the shop floor. Aside from the spilled paint, no loss was reported.

The third break-in occurred at the cattle barn on the exhibition grounds. A padlock was broken off the shed but again nothing was missing.

Weather, Water Too Cold Trout Still Swimming

Diehard trout fisherman got to their favourite district streams today in small numbers. What with an east wind, rain and cold they knew their outlook would be poor and the catches were poorer. In the popular Cavan country service station men and storekeepers report the greatest congregation of cars, some of them arriving at 2 a.m.; a carload of Americans from New York State were seen south of the Emily district in south-eastern Victoria county.

Bannister and Mercer ponds and Manley creek west of Bewdley attracted very few fishermen and none of them coming back through Bewdley had anything to report.

East of Cobourg the famous trout streams Burnley, Cold and Shelter Valley, had few visitors. The latter noted for its rainbows, is posted both north and south of Highway 2 by the property owners; permission to fish must be obtained from them.

The Ouse and its west branch were thinly patronized as were the streams in the Havelock district.

CONDITIONS WRONG

Those fishermen contacted all had the same story: too cool, water too high and recent weather too cool to produce necessary natural fly hatches. Those who caught anything found the worm was the lure.

Orme Barlow and Harold (Steve) Stephen of Oshawa and Fred Adair of Newcastle took 14 trout between them at Cavan Pond. Jim English and Clayton Selkirk took eight on a stream in Emily township.

With a two-day weekend coming up many fishermen will leave tonight for far northern spots for lake speckles and lakers. Northern Haliburton and Hastings counties, and the Land o' Lakes country with their innumerable secret spots will get the greatest play from them.

To finalize, opening day for trout in this part of Central Ontario was poor.

Elsewhere in the province, the miserable morning weather kept anglers at home and generally made fishing poor. One Owen Sound man, braving wind-driven water frothing over Eugenia Dam, took a 15¾ inch speckled on worms.

Best catch of the day was reported by John Campbell of Toronto, fishing from Dufferin dam at Horning's Mills. Within 30 minutes he landed two rainbow trout, the largest better than three pounds.

The Gull river near Minden yielded four, well over limit to a Toronto man, while another Queen City angler landed two at the Nottawasaga, both 15-inchers.

Timber Structures Not Moving Despite Story

R. M. Peirson, president of Timber Structures of Canada, today denied the persistent report that his company is leaving Peterborough to settle in a new plant at New Westminster, B.C.

Timber Structures will open a new plant in New Westminster, but are not considering moving the Peterborough plant there.

Most recent report of the company leaving Peterborough came from a timber trade magazine which flatly stated the company had decided on the move.

Purchase of 21½ acres, plus a building, at the B.C. town, will provide the site for the plant, which is expected to cost nearly $200,000 all told.

Some of the equipment for the new factory will come from the Vancouver plant of Timberline Laminators, a firm recently purchased by Timber Structures. The building which will house the new Westminster plant is a former Canadian Pacific Airlines hangar.

Ennismore Ready To Change School Districts

A by-law is being prepared by the Ennismore township council that will make the whole municipality a continuation school district—much the same as one of the three high school districts elsewhere in the county.

Approval of this step has been given by the Department of Education and the County Council has been informed that the secondary school students in Ennismore will no longer be considered "county students." The academic schooling at the continuation school goes up to Grade XII, Junior Matriculation.

The bylaw is only a formality. Agreement has already been reached among the four school sections. Formerly only School Section No. 4, around "the cross," contributed to the continuation school.

This will leave only the municipality of Galway-Cavendish with students whose education is paid for by county levy. The others are all in high school districts with the exception of Ennismore which now has its own special educational setup.

Ennismore secondary school students taking other than academic courses will continue to come to PVCS where vocational training is available.

May To Be Declared Safety Month In City

Three city organizations are making plans for the observation of May as safety month.

At an informal meeting today rough plans were sketched for the campaign. Representatives were present from the Peterborough Automobile Club, the Federation of Auto Dealer Associations, and the Peterborough and District Casualty Underwriters' Association.

They propose to ask the city to inaugurate a system of compulsory tests by police of cars' brakes, steering, windshield wipers and so on.

Window displays and broadcasts will feature the extensive campaign that the three groups plan on. The campaign is to start May 11.

A JUNIOR JERSEY in the herd of Bamforth and Kelly, at their North Monaghan farm, must be impatient with this spring's dilly-dallying in clouds and rain and cool winds, instead of getting on with the pasture and freedom of the fields in the warmth of sunshine that has already made a long stride up from the tropics and the nearer Miami. Few dairy cattle in Ontario got their noses into sweet young grasses in this April now in laggard departure as indecisive as March in preparing for the staging of summer. However, May is here and the spring usually possesses swift recuperative forces. But it has been a long period of stabling for the young B-K Jerseys.

County Farm Notes

By HARRY THEOBALD

Interruptive Weather Delays Completion of Spring Seeding....Malabar Farm An Attraction In Proposed Bus Trip....Quinte and Kawartha Groups Adopt Surgical and Medical Co-Op Services.... Shorthorn Breeders Meet Monday....Final Practice of Junior Farmers' Choir Wednesday.

Rural Ontario has been waiting for the sunshine this week as reported by forty counties from the Ottawa River to Lake Huron. Persistently cool weather has retarded the schedule of seeding, growth and grass, and April ends on a provincial chorus of comparatively slight advance with the new season's work.

The rains of last Friday and through the weekend halted most of the spring grain sowing, and since then the ground was so thoroughly dampened that the general operations were further held up until Thursday. Now comes more rain.

In Grey county, about 10 per cent of the seeding was completed at the beginning of this week, but the proportion was up two-thirds in Waterloo.

Some of the grain in the Guelph area had been in the ground three weeks, but as in Brant "there has been very little growth although wheat, hay and pastures look fairly well." Around Ottawa, "very little seeding has been done" up to Monday, and that scanty evidence of progress extends in the east through Lanark, Dundas and Leeds.

Hog prices are firm at weekly sales, with a lively demand in Ontario county. Commercial dairy cows bring around $150 to $200 in Brant, but beef men in Wellington say that selling at present prices would entail loss.

Chill weather has retarded pasture growth in many sections. Victoria sees a shortage of pasture for cattle this spring.

Some improvement in poultry prices has been encouraging. In Frontenac, 24 junior Holstein calves averaged $116.50 at the Kingston and District Agricultural Society's sale. Fourteen were bought for 4-H Club members. Incidentally, enrolment in Huron 4-H Clubs has been larger than a year ago.

Corn Demonstrations

Planting of demonstration strips of fodder and grain corn, one on the farm of J. A. McFarlane and the other at W. W. Dawson's farm, both in Otonabee, was arranged this week by George Jones of OAC. He was accompanied on his rural quest by F. C. Paterson.

"I think I'll also have a similar demonstration of soy beans," Mr. Paterson said. "The corn in 10 varities will be planted in rows across the fields, alongside the usual stands. That will be a total of 30 rows in the demonstration strips. OAC supplies the seed and will do the testing."

This is an experiment in crop improvement to ascertain varieties which promise most vigor and yield in the area.

Extend Protection

Co-Operative Medical Services of Belleville and Peterborough areas are jointly adopting the surgical-medical plan, as an extension of their hospital services.

W. W. Dawson and Harold Lewis attended recently a group meeting at Belleville, following which this course was accepted as a preliminary stage of expansion.

The two Co-Ops are, Quinte Medical and Kawartha Medical Services. "We decided to go in together until we have enough members in the surgical-medical section. We need 200 for approval, and we have now around 50 in each," Mr. Lewis said Thursday. "Durham put theirs through in a little over a month. We started with the hospitalization plan and built up to it. The cost of the two additional services is $30 a family. That is cheap insurance providing for surgical and medical care, and both Quinte and Kawartha groups feel certain that it will appeal to farmers who see the advantage of extending their protecting at very reasonable terms."

Mr. Dawson is vice-president of Ontario Co-Operative Medical Services.

Bus Trip Itinerary

Farmers interested in bus trip to Ohio are requested by F. C. Paterson, arranging details for the Crop Improvement Associatoin, to reach a decision by May 15.

Tentative plans propose departure at 7 a.m. June 3 from King St. terminal, changing in Toronto, and going on to Hamilton, Woodstock, Ridgetown, Chatham and Windsor. That part of the trip provides for calls at Ridgetown Agricultural School and the farm of Lawrence Kerr near Chatham.

Louis Bromfield's Malabar Farm is one of the main attractions in the Ohio country. The return will be by way of Akron, Erie and Buffalo. It is a four-day trip costing approximately $50.

"Sixteen men have already signified their interest, but we need a total of 37," Mr. Paterson said.

Condemn Dandelion

The common dandelion, sprinkling the green fields with gold spangles these spring days, is dismissed as a pest and nuisance by the crops, seeds and weeds branch of the Ontario Department of Agriculture. And that includes Melville Johnston as county weed inspector. So, the official thumbs are down on "Taraxacum officinale Weber", a tremendous name for such a small and bright flower.

As a pest it is on the Department's proscribed list, and about the only fair word said about it is that in its first greening the stalks make "an excellent salad", and its roots have been used in medicines.

From early spring to late fall practically all localities, parks and lawns are overrun with this yellow flowered perennial which valiantly resists efforts at eradication.

The familiar fluff ball contains the ripened seed, appearing about two weeks after the flower opens. Drought does not affect the dandelion as the long, fleshy tap root can carry the plant through many drought spells, thus giving it a chance to grow and multiply when other plants are in a weakened condition and hanging on the ropes.

Spraying with 2,4-D where no susceptible flowers or ornamentals are near, and where no bent grass is used in the lawn will give very gratifying results, the Department advises. The chemical can be bought at most drug, hardware and department stores. It should be applied at rates recommended by the manufacturer and before the Dandelions begin of flower. Unless some action is taken to clean up large areas, new seeds will blow in and produce a new infestation. Dandelions are profuse seeders and some say the motto of those wishing a lawn free from them must be, 'Everlastingly keep at it'."

Blue Seal Winner

A purebred Holstein owned by G. S. Macklin, Cobourg, has qualified for a Blue Seal Certificate of Longtime Production as presented by the Holstein-Friesian Association of Canada. She is Nellie Pietje Alcartra with none lactation twice-a-day lifetime production of 126,230 pounds milk containing 5,046 pounds fat, average test 4.00 per cent.

"Nellie" has been milked twice daily throughout her lifetime and four of her records were made in the 305-day division. She started on test as a two-year-old and made her ninth record as an 11-year-old. Her highest individual production was made as a junior four-year-old when she produced in 365 days 15,223 pounds milk containing 628 pounds fat, average test 4.13 per cent. She is classified as "Very Good" in Selective Registration, the second highest rating attainable for type.

Recent Cattle Sales

Fifty-two Holsteins were recently distributed at the consignment sale at Oshawa fair grounds. Best price was $460 for the bull calf Malmont R. A. Duke A, consigned by Neil Malcolm of Burketon Station, and purchased by Everett E. Benjamin, Tenafly, New Jersey.

F. W. Webster, Picton, received $380 for Farry New Chieftain Lally from Walter Brown, Akron. James T. Brown, Newcastle, sold his 18-months-old bull, Brownview Futurity Rex, for $300 to C. B. Smith, Williamston, Mich. Prices were fairly good, but were considered on the whole, lower than these quality Holsteins would sell for in the U.S.

4-H Refreshments

Peterborough Kiwanis Club is arranging to provide refreshments for the 4-H Forestry Club, Lakefield District High School, at their Nassau tree planting Monday. Any farmers who are not on the land that day are invited to look in on the big job of setting out 15,000 seedling pines. This applies particularly to parents of the students.

"We do hope that adults will show interest in this 4-H Club project, and let the young people see that their efforts are appreciated," F. C. Paterson said Thursday.

Juniors To Coronation

Vic Krassman, 21, assistant leader of the Craik 4-H beef calf club, will represent Saskatchewan, under the sponsorship of the Saskatchewan Department of Agriculture.

Audrey Adair and Kenneth Forbes are going from Manitoba. Their expenses will be paid by the Manitoba 4-H Club Council with the assistance of the Manitoba's Women's Institute and the provincial pool elevators.

Miss Adair is a member of the Pipestone 4-H Clothing Club and Ken is with the Dauphin 4-H Swine Club. Both are 17. Kenneth Forbes was a member of the Manitoba Swine Club that won national honors at the 1952 National 4-H Club week beginning at the Royal Winter Fair, Toronto.

Jean Samells of Port Perry and Kay Williams, 16, of the Great Village Clothing Club, Nova Scotia, are attending the coronation as guests of Garfield Weston.

These selected rural young people will travel widely in Britain in organized tours to observe farming practice, and the way of living in England and Scotland.

CLIFF WAITE (right), secretary of the Ontario Farm Radio Forum, was speaker Sunday at special services for farmers at Gilmour Memorial Baptist Church in Smith, in the morning, at Indian River in the afternoon, and Norwood at night. He has succeeded Clare Burt in the Forum's work of fostering the intellectual service of the Forum as manifested by the interesting and evocative subjects of the recent winter series. With him is Wilson M. Gemmell, manager of the Royal Bank in Peterborough, who was guest speaker at the Ontario Farm Radio Forum convention in Toronto, where this photograph was taken.

Not since the Red Mills at Nassau were a flourishing lumber industry a century ago will there be such a rebirth of activity on that vacant site as the setting out of 15,000 red pine trees Monday May 4.

This is the present season's project of the Lakefield High School 4-H Forestry Club of 50 boys and girls who have taken hold of an opportunity in reforestation which will eventually replant the 200 acres with a total of 150,000 trees.

The first sod will likely be turned at the week end, possibly by Clarence Mann of Smith township who has promised to supply a team and plow. Cliff Curtis has offered a tractor and a considerable area of the ground should be ready for the students of L. H. S. when they arrive by bus around 9 a.m. Monday.

ON C. G. E. PROPERTY

Hon. H. R. Scott, former Minister of Lands and Forests, will be present to plant the first seeding, and G. K. Fraser, M. P., will also have a hand in the little gesture of ceremony. R. T. Bogle, works manager of Canadian General Electric Company who own the property and are paying for the trees, has promised to be present, representing the company and Robert McMorran of C. G. E. will also be there.

Mr. McMorran had both thought and voice in the conception of this reforestation project.

John Bell of Lakefield, district forester, Frank C. Paterson, agricultural representative, and his assistant Ken Best, are others who will guide and help the 4-H Club in their day's work.

MILL BUILT IN 1854

L. H. S. 4-H Forestry Club should be interested in an historic fact associated with the location of their tree planting enterprise. Poole's sketch of the progress of Peterborough county affords this information:

"The Nassau Mill, the largest in the county and one of the finest in the province, situated at a disance of three miles from Peterborough, was built in 1854, by Charles Perry, Esq."

The following paragrahp quoted by Poole is from White's directory, published in 1858: "The Nassau mill has two Yankee Gang (saws), a slabber, a stock gang, and an English gate, containing in all 130 saws, besides circulars for butting, cutting laths, etc. This mill has cut 90,000 feet in twelve hours."

Dr. Poole resumes his own account: "It is now (1867) carried on by Messrs. Campbell & Co."

He also publishes a summary of lumber production in Peterborough county during the year 1866, listing the output of twelve mills. Their total cut of lumber was 50,650,000 feet, and foremost in that review of the year's county industry, including the Fowlds mill at Hastings, was Campbell & Company's Nassau Mills, 10,000,000 feet.

Shaw & White at Buckhorn and Lakefield cut a total of 9,000,000 feet, and George Hilliard's Blythe Mills, at Auburn, south of Langton St. and on the west side of the Otonabee River, 7,000,000 feet. Samuel Dickson' smill in the town of Peterborough, at the present site of the Quaker Oats dam, at the east end of London St., 6,000,000 feet.

The 4-H Club students will hardly be lectured about the im- of the lumbering industry in Peterborough and also of Lakefield around a century ago, but at any rate there are the facts.

HISTORY TURNS A PAGE

The boys and girls Monday become agents in a dramatic reversion of event, the planting of 15,000 seedling conifers on the location of the biggest sawmill engaged in converting into lumber the timber that was floated into the bay above the Nassau Bridge.

And that mill was built exactly 100 years ago, virtually from the date of Monday's planting.

In their bright imagination, these 4-H youngsters may catch a glimpse of themselves repairing on a small scale the stripping of timber lands in this area when trees were the prime source of revenue and industry in the community.

NO REFORESTATION THEN

Those pioneer industrialists, men like Perry, Campbell, Hilliard, Dickson, Ludgate and the others, gave no thought to the future. They were too busy with job in hand, and necessarily concerned about its profitable results. Moreover, the wealth of timber appeared to be illimitable, and the future could take care of itself and its needs.

Well, nature has infinite patience, eventually calls for a reckoning, and leaves to man's necessity and ultimate awakening a redressing that is reflected in present day urgency of reforestation and conservation.

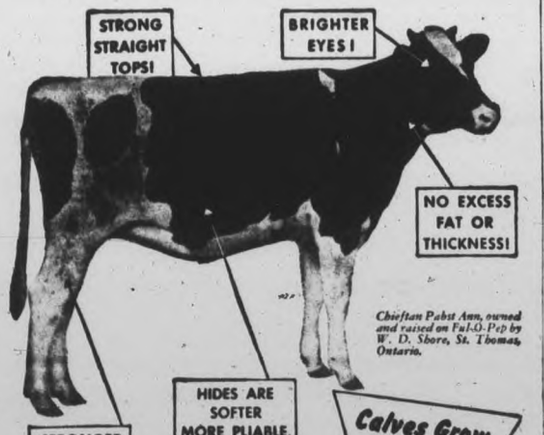
Nothing remains of Perry's Mills built in 1854, and the workmen's houses on both sides of the river. Grass has grown over the sawdust piles. But, the 4-H Club of Lakefield High School may visualize all that busyness of a century ago ,the teams hauling lumber down the road on the west side of the river, and at the end of the day the file of millhands walking in that same direction, those whose homes were not at Nassau, toward the town where they lived.

They are all gone, Perry and Campbell ,too, the timber land has been cleared, much of it converted into farmsteads, and the biggest mill in the county is not even a memory.

EVEN THE NAME IS DIM

Only the name occassionally recurs in casual questioning about the significance and location of the Red Mills, and the Red Bridge as distant from the Black Bridge at Smith St. now Parkhill Road.

This new planting will be at the rate of 15,000 trees a year for ten years, and when the C. G. E. riverside property is reinvested in young pines the students of Monday's work will be in their late twenties, some probably thirty, when the last stage of the undertaking is completed. By that time next week's seedlings should be standing up in vigorous growth.



And, after all, it is mainly a demonstration project, intended to attract attention to time's increment of new timber substance, if men will join hands, and, in that trite but challenging phrase, cooperate with nature.

B.C. Ballet Winning Special Interest

OTTAWA (CP)—The British Columbia Ballet Company, which has attracted special interest since the start of the Canadian Ballet Festival here last Monday, earned more applause Thursday night with two new ballets.

The Vancouver dancers, a picked company chosen from three west-coast groups, has provided variety with three choreographers and six of the 18 works being presented at the week-long non-competitive festival.

Its ballets Thursday were "Gershwin Interludes" by Lenard Gibson and "Variations" by Mara McBirney. The three other dances on the program were repeated from earlier in the week—"Suite" and "Theme Primeval" by the Janet Baldwin Company of Toronto, and "Les Valses" by the Classical Ballet of Ottawa.

For the second successive night the Ottawa Little Theatre's 500 seats were sold out to an enthusiastic audience.

Two Visitors To Town Like It, Start Industries

ERONGARICUARO—This was just a sleepy little town of 3,000 whose only claim to fame was their big Sunday market until two non-Mexicans fell in love with the place and settled there. The two industries they started have made Erongaricuaro a new place and boosted the standard of living for many people.

Fourteen years ago, Mrs. Lena Gordon, an Italian, spent a vacation here and liked it so well she decided to make her home here. Warren Jones, a California mineralogist who came with friends to spend a few days at her home, ended up staying three months and now has a gem stone cutting industry whose products are shipped all over the world.

Although she began to handle embroidery work eight years ago, Mrs. Gordon's cloth manufacturing only began three years ago. Her factory which employs 25 men and 15 girls is built back of her home which commands a view of Lake Patzcuaro. The grounds are a mass of color from her lovely gardens.

HAS 15 LOOMS

The factory has 15 looms and most of the goods manufactured go to important stores in Mexico City and to one or two in the United States. They make beautiful materials in lovely shades of blue, green, yellow, orange etc. In one open air section they have big stone vats where the cotton is dyed. Then it is spread on lines until dry. Girls wind the cotton for the looms where it is woven into fine fabrics.

It takes about three months for the employees to learn their trade. They work six days a week and occasionally overtime on Sunday and the average pay is between 60 and 70 pesos a week (about $8.50). The industry has given new life to the town. The cotton is imported from textile factories in Puebla and the colors come from Mexico City.

The maestro at Mrs. Gordon's plant is Sr. Carlos Bermudaz who comes from Uruapan. He started to learn his trade there at a big textile plant when he was seven years old. Now he is the plant foreman at Erongaricuaro.

Two years ago it was always a scramble to meet the weekly payroll, depending largely on a few tourist purchases. Today the firm is well established with excellent market outlets.

SOMETHING NEW

No one ever heard of synthetic gem stone cutting in this quiet corner of Mexico until Mr. Jones decided to make his home here and try a hand at it. Today he has 19 machines and 23 young men employed.

This firm does not ship anything to the United States but they have markets in South America and Asia and other foreign countries. The firm is jointly owned by Mr. Jones and Michele Cadorat, an importer.

"I have found these people quick to learn and the younger the better. I used to take them at 20 and then I cut it to 18 and 16-year-olds. But I am soon going to lower it to 14 years. In Mexico that is not robbing them of an education. At that age these boys would only be working in the fields with their fathers and they learn so fast," Mr. Jones said.

"When I first started with two machines I took Mrs. Gordon's yard boy. He was a complete failure as a yard boy but he turned out to be a wonderful gem cutter. My men are so good now that I only have to go to the shop once in a while.

"A year and a half ago I took on a chap who couldn't read or write or do arithmetic. Now when I am not here he runs everything and handles all the correspondence. He is only 21 years old so that gives you an idea of the calibre of these youngsters."

2,538 PoWs Died Of Starvation

TOKYO (AP)—A returned prisoner who said he had access to Communist medical records in North Korea said today he had learned of 2,538 captive Allies who died of starvation and disease in less than a year.

Sgt. James F. Daniel of Alameda, Calif., said 931 Allies died of malnutrition and lack of medical care in 2½ months at the now infamous "Death Valley."

That was the prisoner name for a sort of way station between Kunu and the far North Korean prison camps at Pyoktong.

The 931 deaths came between Dec. 26, 1950, and March 14, 1951, Daniel said.

Later, 1,607 Allied captives died at Pyoktong's Camp No. 5 on the Yalu river, Daniel said, of "just starvation and disease."

That was during the first seven months of 1951.

Daniel, a medic, said he had access to Communist medical records because he was helping care for sick and wounded at Death Valley and later at Pyoktong.

Daniel, former member of the U.S. 2nd division, was captured at Kuni Dec. 1, 1950, after he was wounded.

Approve Tax Rate

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—London city council Thursday night adopted a by-law striking the 1953 tax rate at 51 mills—a figure which, with the 10-per-cent general increase on building assessment, means the average Londoner will pay no more than he did last year, when the rate was 56 mills.

No Green Light Planned Yet For Private TV

OTTAWA (CP)—The government does not intend to give a green light right away to private television stations that want to operate in the same cities as CBC television stations.

Revenue Minister McCann said Thursday night that a request for this action was an attempt "to have us loosen up a lot quicker than we have any idea of doing."

Dr. McCann, who reports to Parliament for the publicly-owned CBC, made the comment in the House of Commons broadcasting committee during discussion of a brief from Harry Sedgwick, man-CFRB in Toronto.

The CFRB brief recalled a Commons statement by Dr. McCann last month that it may not be long before the government will consider allowing two or more stations in certain areas.

In reply to a question, Mr. Sedgwick said the government should speed up the implementation of that policy. The brief urged the broadcasting committee to recommend "that all available television channels should now be issued to approved applicants."

Dr. McCann said Mr. Sedgwick's request is for the government to loosen up a lot quicker than it has any idea of doing. The minister did not amplify his remark.

In a second brief to the committee, the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association suggested that the CBC should do nothing more than regulate broadcasts and perhaps produce educational programs.

The brief was presented by W.H. Cranston of Midland and W. E. Cartney of Toronto. It said that both publishers and electors have for years skated around the basic issues "involved in government ownership and subsidization of a mass medium whose prime function is the provision of public entertainment."

The CWNA believed "the CBC can perform a useful continuing service as a regulatory body and, as well, perhaps as an organization which would create for the various departments of government educational programs such as does now the national film board in another sphere."

Dealing with comments on subsidized radio, Dr. McCann told Mr. Cranston that newspapers themselves receive a form of subsidy in preferential postal rates and the recent elimination of the 10-per-cent sales tax on newsprint.

Jailed For Shoplifting

U.S. Embargo On Wheat Big Problem In Marketing For Canada

OTTAWA (CP)—Agriculture Minister Gardiner says Canada's problem of what to do with her wheat wouldn't be nearly so tough if it weren't for one thing—a little-known United States embargo against Canadian wheat.

The minister brought the subject up in the Commons Thursday during consideration of his estimates. He told members there is a lot of talk about American restrictions on dairy and other products, but no one ever seems to say much about the American embargo on wheat.

From the point of view of the Western Canadian farmer, the embargo was "most serious," the minister said.

"The question of what we are going to do with our wheat would not be nearly as difficult if it were not that there is an embargo against shipping wheat into the U.S."

The Americans, he said, instead of taking Canadian wheat, have increased wheat acreage to 83,000,000 from 62,000,000. That increase was equal to Canada's acreage and when that much extra wheat was being produced it had a bearing on the world wheat situation.

CRITICIZES RESOLUTIONS

The discussion was initiated by John Diefenbaker (PC—Lake Centre) who criticized U. S. restrictions against Canadian dairy products. He said there is much talk about Canadian-American co-operation for the preservation of freedom, but when it comes to trade it seeme to be a different matter.

Canada, he said, should protest in the strongest possible terms. The restrictions on Canadian dairy products could have the effect of restricting Canadian agricultural expansion which would be most serious.

The House spent its second straight day considering agricultural estimates. Discussion ranged from price spreads to marketing policy and floor prices for poultry. At one point Mr. Gardiner said he isn't convinced Canada's poultry industry wants a guaranteed government floor price.

One big topic of debate was the long-discussed South Saskatchewan power and irrigation project which a government-appointed commission recently estimated would cost some $250,000,000 and said would be uneconomic at this time.

CHARGES STALLING

George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, charged the government with stalling on the big project. He said a letter written by Mr. Gardiner to Premier Douglas of Saskatchewan offering to renew negotiations put up a lot of unnecessary road blocks. It was, he said, a "tawdry evasion of responsibility."

Mr. Gardiner denied the charge. He said the letter merely set out that the federal government would have no part of any controversy among the Prairie provinces as to water rights on the South Saskatchewan river which winds through them and that development of power was a provincial responsibility.

There was also the matter of ascertaining actual costs. The federal government wanted to be sure that a cost estimate of about $100,000,000 made by Prairie farm rehabilitation administration engineers was an accurate figure.

JUST REVERTED

To the minister's mind, the letter merely took things back to where they were before the commission report and opened the way for new negotiations, The federal government had not said whether it accepted the commission recommendation not to proceed at this time and had not said whether or not it would proceed.

Progress of the House was stopped short at an item in the estimates under which the big South Saskatchewan project could be further discussed.

The parliamentary argument continues today.

Jeweler Makes Replica Queen's Crown

Actually it's an imitation, patterned after a magazine color photograph of the crown, and like the real thing in every respect.

Mr. Mercier, who has been in business here for seven years, worked for 250 hours to produce it, using bits of gold-plated brass, bronze, and countless pieces of colored stone and imitation pearls.

Rabbit fur bands the crown's base; there are imitation diamonds, rubies, and sapphires around the outside, and the inside contains a cap of deep purple velvet.

There are 110 years of jewelry and watchmaking experience in the Mercier family. This includes time spent at the job by Mr. Mercier's father, his brother, an uncle, and Paul Mercier himself who came from Montreal.

Business Men Forgetting How To Get Out And Sell

By FORBES RHUDE
Canadian Press Business Editor

Business men are frequently told that no one has had to really try to "sell" anything since before the war—and that "order-takers" have replaced salesmen.

Each time a small black recession cloud appears on the horizon, they are told they will have to get back to "ringing doorbells." So far, the little black recession clouds have dissipated themselves, but they get very respectful attention while they are in sight.

Latest advice of the "get-out-and-sell" variety comes from R. Harvey Whidden, vice-president in charge of sales for the W. A. Shaffer Pen Company of Fort Madison, Iowa.

Speaking to the point-of-purchase advertising conference in Toronto Thursday, he said:

LULLED ALONG

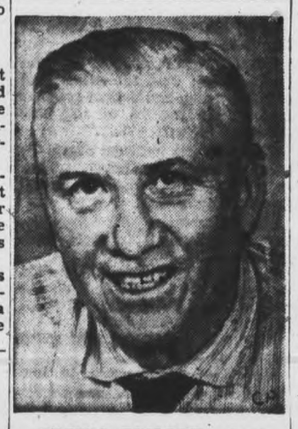
"It is unfortunate but true that business men have been lulled along with every one else by the false philosophy that only government spending can bring prosperity.

"The expert in selling, merchandising and advertising hasn't needed any expert knowledge for more than 10 years now, with one war crisis after another making his job practically automatic.

"But all that is over. There is no other crisis in sight and business is finally on the threshold of a return to basic competition. We are returning to the days where, in order to do business, a company must get its representative there first, must make its product more desirable and more serviceable and must make its selling, advertising and merchandising more compelling."

EXPRESSED FEAR

He expressed fear, however, that the "business luxury stimulated by a decade of crisis prosperity may take its toll among so-called experts who may have forgotten why they were hired.



"Business is going to return to competition, but many business men may discover that they will be left behind—that they already have gone past the point of no return."

Canada Would Like Start Seaway Now

HALIFAX (CP)—Resources Minister Robert Winters said here Thursday that Canada would start work on the St. Lawrence seaway immediately if the United States would stand aside and "let us get on with it."

Speaking before the Women's Canadian Club of Halifax, he said "we are looking forward to the day when the Americans will stand aside and let us get on with it."

"We can't build the necessary dams without permission of the United States, and we can't build the seaway without the dams. If we were given permission by the Americans, we'd start digging tomorrow."

REGINA BUILDER — Opposition parties led by George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, have demanded an inquiry into federal goevrnment contracts given to Harvey Lunam, Regina contractor. They claimed Mr. Lunam owes subcontractors $239,000 after going into insolvency before completing some of the government contracts. Lunam has admitted he and Austin Dewar, member of Parliament for Qu'Appelle, "traded" cheques as a means of financing the business of Lunam Construction Company. Mr. Dewar has since resigned from the Commons, the first man to do so under similar circumstances in 21 years.

Experts Believe Main Threat To Free World Now In Laos

By ALAN HARVEY

LONDON (CP) — British commentators appeared convinced that the main threat to the free world now lies in the rugged country of Laos, Shangri-La of French Indo-China.

The British government is reported "concerned" at the Vietminh invasion of the 600-mile-long territory bordering Siam. Writers on foreign affairs, going farther, paint a gloomy picture of what may happen if Laos falls to the Communist invaders.

The big danger, they agree, is that the uneasy balance will be upset in all Southeast Asia. Thus they regard Laos as potentially even more important than Korea.

"For the first time," says the independent weekly, the Economist, "the Communists look dangerously like breaking through the shield—composed of mountains and French Union troops — that has hitherto protected the soft heart of Southeast Asia."

NEW SITUATION

In the same way, the Manchester Guardian, an independent Liberal newspaper, said in its leading editorial Thursday that the invasion could mean "the start of a transfomation of the whole situation in Southeast Asia."

The Liberal News Chronicle says a Laos divorced by force from the French Union "could easily upset the works" throughout Southeast Asia.

The British Government's anxiety, it is said unofficially, has been intensified by the Chinese Communist news agency's claim that the Siamese government is preparing to aid the French and to make the country a U.S. military base. The Siamese government is thought to be friendly to the West but the country's population of 17,000,000 includes about 3,000,000 "fence-sitting" Chinese.

Labor Elected 4 To Council

Organized labor elected a slate of four candidates to the city council in 1919, the first year in which municipal voters were required to mark their adermanic ballots for four of the listed aspirants.

The Labor nominees emerging in election were Robert Morrison, Harry Gainey, James Garside and Alex Murray. The mayor that year was George H. Duncan, a contracting painter.

Decision to dispense with the ward system was reported in the Examiner of 1917.

A synopsis of the bylaw was published Dec. 8, 1917. The bylaw carried at the polls, and the ward system was abandoned. Election from the city as a whole became effective in 1919. Meanwhile, the council had obtained the special legislation requiring electors to vote for at least four aldermanic candidates. They could also mark their ballots for five. That was optional, but the four-name regulation was compulsory to validate a ballot.

Ten aldermen were to be elected, the top five for two years, and the other five for one year.

Presumably the first labor candidates were elected for one year. At least three of them were returned in 1930 when Archibald A. McIntyre succeeded to the mayoralty. They were Morrison, Gainey and Joseph Crowe.

Copies of the Outram report will be mailed to the two labor councils in the city. In the last year or two organized labor has been asking for a return to the ward system, and the rescinding of the four-man restriction.

Dugal Believes Armored Vest Saved His Life

By BILL BOSS

TOKYO (CP)—L. Cpl. Paul Dugal of Quebec City said today he believes he owes his life to an armored vest.

Dugal, one of two Canadian prisoners of war exchanged by the Communists, said he was wounded and captured during a patrol on which the Canadian Army first tested the armored vests in Korea. But he did not wear a tin hat and the wound which partially paralyzed his left side was a mortar fragment which struck his head. That was on June 23, 1952.

BELIEVED DEAD

The 20-year-old lance-corporal of the Royal 22nd Regiment told The Canadian Press:

"I learned from friends in the Van Doos at Kure that the canvas of the vest I wore was ripped by fragments and blood-stained from my head wound. A friend started carrying me back to our lines but decided I was dead and left me to carry another wounded man."

The armored vests now are standard gear for patrols and in some frequently-shelled areas.

Dugal was brought to the United States army hospital here from Kure prior to being flown home. He was freed on April 20 after nearly 10 months in captivity.

Both Pte. Arthur J. Baker of Montreal, the other Canadian exchanged by the Reds, and Dugal said they want to remain in the army and return to Korea.

Said Baker: "I like the life."

McIntyre Herefords For Norwood Fair Project

C. A. Brethen, president of Norwood Agricultural Society, received a letter Tuesday informing him that a car load of Hereford calves from the famous McIntyre ranch in Alberta should arrive at Norwood in about ten days.

"This is one of the big ranches of Canada," Mr. Brethen told the Examiner. "We are getting a break on the price for the young people because Mr. McIntyre was interested in our project, and wrote me that he wanted to help them in their calf club undertaking. The calves are being held for about a week for vaccination before being loaded for the east. The weight is around 450 to 475 pounds."

Mr. Brethen mentioned that the herd numbers around 10,000 head, and is now going on grass. "We should have more definite information next week."

This is a notable project, and farmers generally will wish the Fair Board and their juniors every success. The McIntyre herd has had registered purebred bulls for years.

Newest Discovery Pushes Stars Twice As Far Away

WASHINGTON—Discovery that all stellar systems beyond the earth's own galaxy, the Milky Way, are twice as far away as previously belived vastly increases the scope of the National Geographic Society-Payomar Observatory Sky Survey.

The revolutionary discovery was made by Dr. Walter Baade of the California Institute of Technology's Palomar Mountain Observatory, home of the Schmidt 48-inch telescope that is making the Sky Survey. The gigantic 200-inch Hale telescope, largest in the world, is also at the Observatory.

Dr. Baade found that the most distant galaxies visible through the Hale instrument are two billion light-years away, rather than one billion as previously believed. A light-year is six million miles—the distance light travels in a year at a speed of 186,000 miles per second.

The discovery also expanded the volume of the observable universe eight times, and placed its age at four billion years rather than two billion.

HALF COMPLETED

It is this universe, much larger than once thought, that is being mapped by the Sky Survey. All of the heavens visible from Palomar —about three quarters of the sky —will eventually be photographed and plotted by the project. The Survey, a little more than half completed, will consist of nearly 2,000 photographic plates of outer space.

Dr. Baade's discovery automatically doubles the distance that the Schmidt is known to see into the far reaches of the universe. It increases by eight times the volume of the space explored by the Survey. The survey plates will show clusters of galaxies 600 million light-years away, rather than 300 million.

NEW NEBULAE DISCOVERED

Sky Survey astronomers already have logged some 1,000 new clusters of stars and stellar dust. Systematic study of the survey photographs may shed new light on the question of whether the galaxies form into clusters in a regular pattern and whether these clusters themselves group into new superclusters.

The discoveries of the Schmidt in the Survey work are expected to provide astronomers, working with more powerful but pinpoint instruments such as the Hale, with research material for years to come.

Israel Youngsters Start To Learn Flying At 12

MOST AIR-MINDED NATION in the Middle East is Israel, whose youngsters start learning to fly at 12. First, as these boys and girls in Tel Aviv, they begin by building model planes.

RACHEL MARKOWSKI: "You can't buy pilots . . ."

By RICHARD KLEINER
NEA Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK —(NEA) —At the tender age of 12, a select group of Israel's boys and girls start to learn how to fly. Eventually they became licensed pilots for the air-minded young republic.

"We can't afford a big army," says Rachel Markowski, a representative of the Israeli Aviation Council, "but we must be able to defend ourselves. All around us are potential enemies. Planes we can buy; pilots you can't buy or even make in a few months. So we're training our own, from childhood."

The slim, serious Mrs. Markowski, a mother of two, in the U. S. study American methods of flying education. She's also trying to acquire some light training planes. It seems like a big, unlikely mission for a motherly woman, but Mrs. Markowski is a veteran pilot and used to difficult missions. She is, in fact, Israel's first woman pilot.

During Israel's war for independence —she calls it "our war" —she was in charge of liaison between the Aero Club and the Army. It's the Aero Club which trains young pilots. Before that, she flew for the underground Haganah, flying important papers and munitions and supplies to isolated settlements.

She learned to fly in 1940, and got a British license. Now she has some 1,500 hours logged. When "our war" broke out, she left her five-week-old daughter with a friend and went to serve.

At present, the 70 Aero Clubs scattered throughout Israel are well-organized and have some 2,000 youngsters between 12 and 17. Enrolled in the exhaustive aviation course, Mrs. Markowski heads the government-sponsored project.

They begin at 12, by building model airplanes and learning the theory of aerodynamics. At 15, they are actually flying gliders and studying advanced aviation and navigation. They don't solo until they're 17, and by then they're ready for their license. That's to comply with international law, which sets 17 as the minimum for licensed pilots.

All this training is free, for the selected pupils. They're picked for aptitude and desire. More than 25 per cent are girls.

Today Israel is the most air-minded nation in the Middle East. Its Lydda Airport is busy with the planes of 14 nations flying in and out. Mrs. Markowski says it's like the hub of "a modern caravan route."

She says she's "green with envy" over the facilities for training youngsters in aviation here. Particularly, she remembers Civil Air Patrol courses in Detroit and Los Angeles.

Her own two children are split about aviation as a career. Her son, who is 11, loves to fly. Mrs. Markowski is sure that "he'll find his wings." But her daughter, now five, is afraid of flying.

"I'm so angry with her," she says, unangrily.

Korean Dish Too Much For Soldiers

The kimchi is not prepared for U.S. troops, whose tastes have not developed along Korean lines, but for South Koreans who drive and repair trucks for transportation battalion.

Some Americans have tasted kimchi once. Koreans eat it all the time, for breakfast, lunch and dinner. They call it a health food and one that adds interest to meals otherwise composed largely of boiled rice.

MADE IN LAYERS

Kimchi comes in many varieties, most of which have a strong resemblance to sauerkraut. It usually is made from one of three basic ingredients, which sometimes are combined. The three bases for kimchi are daikon, a radish-like vegetable, Chinese cabbage soaked in brine, or cucumber.

Whatever the base, kimchi, is enlivened with such things as leeks, onions, garlic, spices, hot peppers, ginger and dry salt shrimp.

Summer cabbage kimchi is probably the easiest to make. Chinese cabbage is sliced into small pieces and a layer is placed in the bottom of a crock or jar. On top of this goes a layer of salt, sliced hot peppers and leeks, and a little dry salted shrimp for that extra flavor.

Alternate layers of cabbage and the pepper-salt-leek-shrimp mixture are added until the jar is nearly full. It is then left in a warm place to age and ripen for a few days.

Kimchi ages vigorously, so round stones are placed on top to hold it down. The flavor of the added ingredients mixes slowly with the cabbage, daikon or cucumber, until the whole it a highly aromatic mass that allegedly smells as good to a Korean as fresh-baked bread does to a westerner.

There is an advantage to the pungent ordor of kimchi, western troops maintain. They say it has such a marked effect on the breath that there is little danger of being ambushed by North Koreans if the wind is in the right direction.

Find Bicillin Effective Against Syphilis

WASHINGTON (AP) — Public health service doctors reported today that preliminary evaluation has shown bicillin, a form of penicillin, is an effective one-shot cure for early syphilis.

Dr. Clarence A. Smith, assistant chief of the services' venereal disease division, said in a paper for the fifth annual symposium on venereal disease that a single injection of bicillin proved safe and effective in a test group of 125 patients.

Talking to newspaper men prior to the meeting, Dr. Smith and his chief, Dr. James K. Shafer, told of the work with bicillin.

Dr. Shafer said it is "the first drug that gives such extended treatment against syphilis with one injection."

BEST SO FAR

Dr. Shafer said no one drug is 100 per cent effective in dealing with all kinds of syphilis cases but that bicillin generally seems to be the best so far.

He emphasized he was referring only to the treatment of early cases, primary and secondary, and that it will be some time before tests in tertiary syphilis cases can be evaluated.

Syphilis is quite susceptible to penicillin but its spirochetes die slowly. That is where the long-term effect of bicillin proves valuable.

Other forms of penicillin used against syphilis required repeated doses and were found to be effective up to 72 hours, at the most. Bicillin was reported to have been effective for as much as 28 days after a single injection.

Two Women Get $300 Damages In Kidnapping

JOLIETTE, Que. (CP) — Damages of $300 each were awarded Thursday to two young women, Witnesses of Jehovah, who were driven out of town by a group of men and told never to return.

Mr. Justice Andre Demers of the Quebec Superior Court made the award after saying he was "scandalized by the criminal act" of the men involved. He said the act, although subject only of a damage action, amounted to kidnapping, an offence punishable by up to 25 years in penitentiary.

The damage action was launched on behalf of Olive Lundell and Winniefred Parsons. They had lived in Joliette for six months and were distributing Bible tracts Dec. 14, 1949, when the attack occurred.

MOLESTED BY CROWD

The women testified they were molested by a crowd and then forced into a taxi. Six men accompanied them on the drive to Montreal, 40 miles south of here.

They said the men attempted unsuccessfully to have them lodged in the Women's Fullum street jail. They then were driven to a police station where police declined to have anything to do with the case.

The women were released at a street corner in Montreal east. The men warned them "not to come back to Joliette."

Ordered to pay the damages were three men—the only ones the women could definitely identify. The three were Fortunat Masse, driver of the taxi, Roch Rouleau, a laborer, and Gedeon Dion, a merchant, all of Joliette.

Rural Public Schools Major Problem

ORILLIA.—The greatest problem now facing education in Ontario is that posed by the rural elementary school, G. L. Duffin, assistant superintendent of elementary education for the province, said here Thursday night.

Addressing the annual conference of the central zone, Urban and Rural Trustees Association, Mr. Duffin noted that half the women teachers now in rural schools are married and, in many cases, are still teaching because they were coaxed to stay on. He added that of the 1,000 teachers in Ontario not qualified to teach, 800 of them are in rural areas.

"There is no uniform policy regarding the training and salary of rural teachers from one county to the next," he added. "We'll fall down badly in Ontario if we neglect the elementary school in the small villages and rural areas. I'm hoping the same men who took the high school problem by the horns and did something about it will tackle this problem, too."

Mr. Duffin was primarily responsible for the reorganization of high school districts throughout the province into larger administration areas. Since he completed that task he has been moved into the elementary school branch of the department.

The official scored people, including trustees and teachers, who think of the personnel in secondary branch. Progress will be seriously handicapped unless both levels are considered equal, he said.

BUILD UP SALARIES

"If high school teachers are better, let's get the qualifications and salaries of the elementary teachers built up," he said. "We can get qualified high school people to be principals in public schools. We have a good setup at the secondary level now, but it will just be slow if we don't solve the problems at the elementary level."

Mr. Duffin mentioned the new grant policy of the Department of Education, which limits provincial aid to ordinary classrooms, not gymnasiums, auditoriums and special rooms. Some places will still be able to build these special rooms on their own, he said. Others will be so hard-pressed to find room for all their students they will have to leave them out of their plans.

"You'd be surprised at the congratulations we have received from various parts of the province about the new policy," he said. "The people who agree with us say it's time we stopped building glorified playrooms and let the children walk to school for their exercise, instead of riding a bus."

He said he was not too worried about the ability of people to pay for education in a province in which the value of automobiles owned is enough to replace every public, separate and secondary school in the province; there are more than enough cars to divide on the basis of one per pupil, and enough to carry the population of the entire province in one mammoth cavalcade.

"This province is wealthier and more productive than we ever dreamed it woud be," he said. "We'll be able to build the schools."

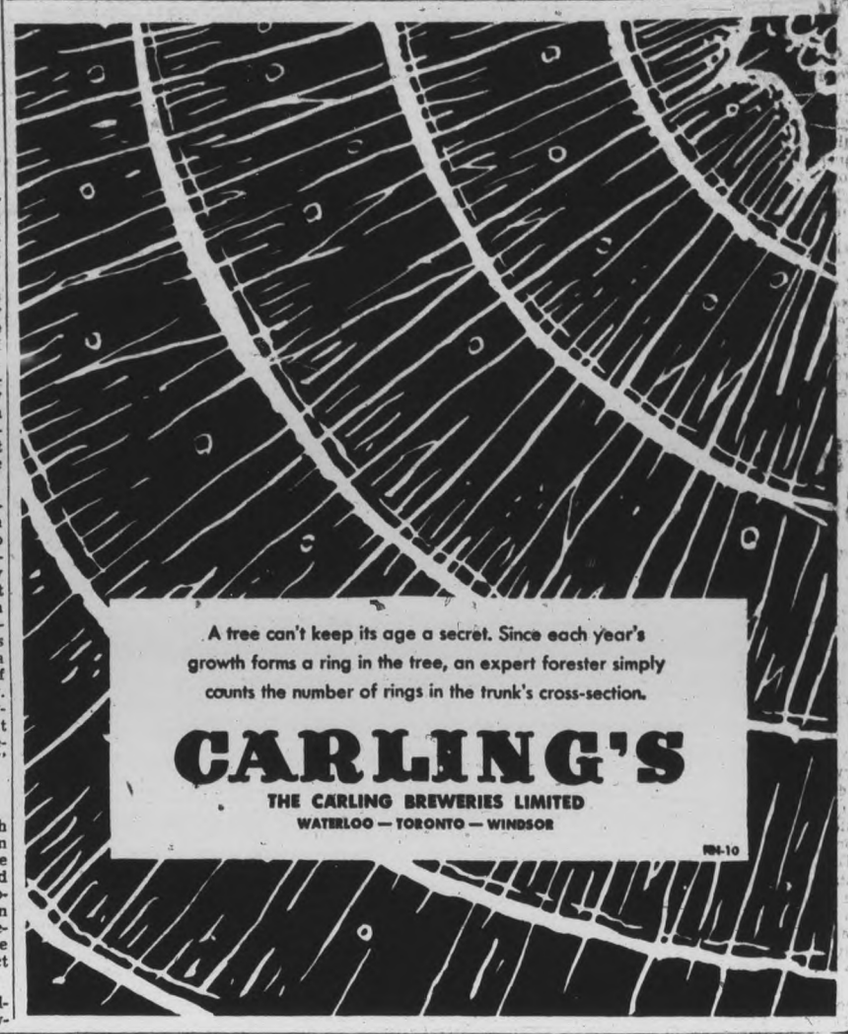
Odd Situation In London Court Case

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—A plaintiff's counsel E. J. R. Wright, in Supreme Court here Thursday on an $8,600 insurance claim case presented the court with the paradox of having before it a suit for claim before the actual cause of claim had happened.

Mr. Wright is counsel for Norman F. Newton of Strathroy, former London barrister and one time crown attorney for the county of Middlesex, who was seeking a claim of $200 a month from December 1948 for total disability from the defendant, Canada Health and Accident Assurance Co., Kitchener. Newton claims he has not been able to practice law since taking sick in December, 1948.

Because of the statute of limitation Newton should have filed a statement of claim within one to three months after he found himself totally disabled. The policy Newton took out with the defendant company in November, 1947 is a professional lifetime income contract which pays for three months on partial disability, and $200 a month for life, or the duration of impediment, on total disability. Newton is seeking a total-disability-for-life settlement. He testified that because of his illness he is now receiving a veterans' "burnt out" pension.

ODD SITUATION



The court found itself faced with the paradoxical situation when counsel, after his argument before the court, admitted that all he and his client could ask for at the moment was not what was asked in the original writ, the money settlement, but a declaration from the court that the policy was in effect on Nov. 1, 1948.

The company claims that the policy lapsed Nov. 1, 1948 when Newton failed to pay his renewal premium.

Mr. Justice Kelly reserved judgment.

May 1 No Longer Moving Day Too Difficult To Get Homes

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

It wasn't so long ago that May 1 was the traditional moving day for many Canadians. But in this day of long leases, high rents, big mortgages and a housing shortage, the date is little more than a headache to would-be movers.

Although a Canadian Press survey indicates Canada's housing situation improved somewhat during the last 12 months, the demand for living quarters increased to such an extent that new housing developments failed fully to fill the gap.

The problem facing families contemplating a change in location is not where or when to move, but simply a case of what to move into. There aren't enough homes to go around.

Movers report one of the slowest seasons on record. The habit of moving May 1 has given way to a policy of moving when and where living accommodation is available.

CRITICAL SITUATION

At Halifax, only 2,000 homes have been built since the war while some 7,000 families have moved to the city. The housing situation is described as "critical."

A general improvement is noted by Montreal authorities who point to large housing developments in the suburbs. suburban Montreal dwellings are being constructed chiefly for he middle-income group.

Ottawa housing officials estimate they are short some 5,000 units despite the many housing developments in the suburbs. One project consisting of 50 two-bedroom homes is just completed and plans call for 200 more homes by the fall, to rent at $55 a month.

BRIGHTER PICTURE

Some 9,500 units were completed in Toronto during 1952 to bring about one of the brightest housing pictures since before the Second World War. Several monster apartment buildings are under construction in Greater Toronto.

The housing situation for middle income groups at Winnipeg is the best in the history of the mid-Western city. However, rents here are up 100 per cent over pre-war rates.

Vancouver real estate authorities say that rents and property prices are at a peak. Few homes are renting and fewer still for sale.

Conservatives To Hear Woman Candidate

MISS E. JANZEN

Miss Elizabeth Janzen of Kitchener will be in Peterborough Monday afternoon as the special speaker at the meeting of the Women's Progressive Conservative Association being held in the Orange Hall. She is among the early candidates in the field for the forthcoming federal election campaign.

This tall, attractive woman of 35 years will be tossing her modish bonnet into the federal lists for the second time, however. She had her initiation in the hard-fought Waterloo by-election of May, 1952, for the seat left vacant by the appointment of the Liberal representative L. O. Breithaupt as lieutenant-governor of Ontario. Though she was the loser then she reduced the majority by nearly 10,000 votes.

Miss Janzen is secretary-manager of the Janzen Realty Company; past president of the Waterloo North Women's Progressive Conservative Association; president of Western Ontario Women's Progressive Conservative Association, a member of the Provincial Women's committee. She has assisted in organizing the Young Progressive Conservatives in North Waterloo; is a member of the public relations committee of YWCA; has helped in organizing civil defence. She is the daughter of a farmer and nursery man at Breslau.

As well as being recognized as a realtor of outstanding ability, Miss Janzen is a skilled home economist with a reputation as a charming and generous hostess. She is a graduate of the OAC in Guelph.

Polish Woman Refugee Now Chemical Engineer

TORONTO (CP) — Sygfryda A. Grygowicz had the distinction of being the only woman delegate among 500 men attending a U.S.-Canadian Chemical Institute convention here.

The attractive young Polish woman, a graduate chemical engineer who works near Montreal, has led a hard and adventurous life.

In 1939, when 17, she and some friends tried to cross the border from Poland into Hungary.

"It was a gamble and we lost," she said.

"We had no food and so we stopped at a farmhouse. There was a Russian militia officer inside."

Miss Grygowicz then spent nine months in a Russian prison waiting for her case to be heard. After that she was sent to a concentration camp.

She was released in 1941 and for another year travelled from village to village testing light bulbs. She was not allowed to leave Russia, but spent her time trying to escape.

Finally she bribed Soviet officials to let her take a train to a southern city where the Polish army was mustering. When one unit left for Iran she was concealed in the baggage car.

Miss Grygowicz then served as a second lieutenant in the Polish Army and was in Italy when the war ended. She studied in Rome, then London, graduating in 1950.

"My sister who lives in Montreal said I should come to Canada because it's the place to live," she said.

And Sygfryda Grygowicz agrees

Only Two Fittings Required Queen's Coronation Gown

By MURIEL NARRAWAY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP) — The Queen's first fitting of her Coronation gown is one important engagement awaiting Her Majesty's return to London from Windsor Castle.

This gown-of-state, that will hit the headlines in every country of the world, follows the same procedure as the implest garden-party outfit. It has just two fittings.

A tailor's "dummy" to the Queen's measurements, shrouded in sheeting in a secluded corner of designer Norman Hartnell's Mayfair workrooms, saves the Queen many tedious hours.

One day early in May, Hartnell will set out for Buckingham Palace bearing the world's best-kept secret in a large cardboard box. The royal designer, chosen to make the two most important gowns to date for the Queen—for marriage and crowning—will take his head saleswoman, lilac-haired Mme. Denise and two fitters, Mmes. Emilienne and Isabelle.

ROYAL SECRET

The Queen will then inspect the much-discussed gown, advance details of which would bring big money in many world markets. Hartnell's secrecy is in keeping with his diplomacy in royal fashion secrets, started with the wedding gown of the Duchess of Gloucester. He never completes a design of such importance until the day it is due for delivery.

The first fitting will follow the same line as any other royal one. Fittings are always made in the Queen's boudoir, or dressing room, and only her personal maid, Scottish-born Margaret Macdonald, is present.

It's Miss Macdonald's job to note every detail of the dress, its fastenings and the way it should be draped.

Hartnell's craftsmanship is also an important factor in the way the Queen will look during this most demanding day of her life. Many points are considered in the make-up of a gown that must remain comfortable throughout the long ordeal.

The design must ot only be something the world will talk about, it must be easy to kneel in, full enough to fall in elegant folds as the Queen enters and leaves her carriage and the embroidery must be so designed it will not irritate or cut into the flesh through the coronation ritual. It must also be light in weight to ease the strain of heavy paraphernalia.

ALWAYS PATIENT

"The Queen is always most patient during fittings, and makes us feel at ease," says Mme. Denise. Although Hartnell takes only his most trusted employees to such a fitting, and all have been at the palace on many occasions, they are always nervous.

Tense is Hartnell himself. This shy, retiring Englishman, who looks more like a country squire than a front-line fashion designer, finds it hard to give even a press interview.

Royal fittings, however, do follow a well-worn channel and his advice is the same to any member of his staff: "Be professionally on your toes." The procedure is: Give one curtsy when the Queen enters, but do not curtsy again. Address her as "Your Majesty," not "ma'am." This is used by royal acquaintances only.

Hartnell says it's amazing how the Queen will put even the most nervous newcomer at ease with a few words.

"Violet Day" Nets $1,100 For Hospital

The two hundred workers for St. Joseph's Hospital Auxiliary who braved last Saturday's wet weather, and the fine response of the citizens of Peterborough to the Violet Day appeal produced the sum of $1,100 which will be used for equipment being installed at St. Joseph's Hospital.

Convener Mrs. M. Armitage was congratulated by executive members of the auxiliary when she made her report Thursday evening at the regular meeting, and the gratitude of the hospital was expressed to all who contributed to the splendid result.

Mrs. William Hickey and Miss Joan Heffernan were two workers who won pots of African violets in a draw at the conclusion of Violet Day.

Membership conveners Mrs. J. Paquette and Mrs. D. Driscoll reported more than 2,100 annual memberships received.

Rev. Sister Priscilla discussed plans for the observance of Hospital Day on May 13 and also invited all Axiliary members in Peterborough and district to attend the Nurses' Graduation Exercises at St. Peter's School auditorium on Friday, May 15.

St. John's Choir Holds Annual Meeting

Annual meeting of St. John's Anglican Church choir was held in the parish house Thursday evening. President Mr. Victor Coleman, who was re-elected to the office, presided.

Other officers for the coming year are: Vice-president, Mrs. G. Kilborn; secretary-treasurer, Miss Ruby Quartermaine; assistant secretary, Miss June Kilborn; treasurer and convener of flower fund, Mr. H. Choate and Mr. R. Pitchford; librarian, Mr. W. Miller; assistant, Mr. E. Brown; social committee, Mesdames V. Coleman, E. G. Brown, F. G. Mann, M. Thompson and Messrs. J. Smith and D. Gedge.

The organist and choir master is Mr. Fred G. Mann and honorary executives are Archdeacon W. P. Robertson, president, and Mr. C. Lech, Mrs. F. G. Mann and Mr. C. G. Graham, vice presidents.

The year's work and progress was reviewed by Mr. Coleman. Main item of business was procuring and maintenance of choir gowns. A committee was formed to approach a full-time choir mother to maintain gowns in good condition. The treasury report showed a balance of $200 in the general account. Visitations and gifts to sick members and their families showed an active committee.

Presentation of a silver tea service to bride-elect Miss Shirley Brown was made by the president. The meeting also extended best wishes and hope for success to the Rev J. A. Purser who has been appointed to a Toronto parish and these will be incorporated in a written message to him.

"ROSETTA" — Rosemary Deveson, of Vancouver, a member of the British Columbia Ballet Company, dances the part of Rosetta in the company's production of "Pygmalion," presented at the week-long Canadian ballet festival in Ottawa. Governor-General Vincent Massey opened the festival which is on a non-competitive basis.

DOROTHY DIX:

Girl Too Young To Marry Problems Overwhelming

DEAR MISS DIX: I'm sixteen and have been married six months. I realize I was very young to marry, but my husband was out of school and said he wouldn't marry me if we didn't get married when he wanted to. I've always been jealous and my husband, Paul, knew it before we were married. I try not to show my jealousy, but just can't help it. Paul has a brother, Leo, who is married and I am terribly jealous of his wife, Martha. Maybe it's just my imagination but I feel that she and Paul are flirting every time they see each other. I told Leo how I felt and he told his mother. Now she's always jumping on me about my foolish jealousy.

EILEEN T.

FIGHT, MAKE-UP MERRY-GO-ROUND

ANSWER: Naturally I agree that you were too young to marry, and every line of your letter proves the point. Your childish haste to grab a man on his own terms, your senseless jealousy, the separations and reconciliations outlined in your letter—which was too long to print in full—all indicate an irresponsible approach to marriage. You're just a child and, instead of trying to conquer your shortcomings, you almost revel in revealing them. It's time you decided whether to make a success of your marriage, or to continue it as a fight-and-make-up merry-go-round.

If you love your husband, as you say you do, grow up and act like a wife and a woman. Stop giving in to your senseless jealousy and stop bragging about it to the rest of the family. It's nothing of which to be proud. Learn to tackle your own problems without involving in-laws who have enough of their own. Consultation with a marriage counsellor would be a good idea, though I'm not so sure that a kindergarten teacher wouldn't be more on your emotional level.

DEAR MISS DIX: Almost a year ago our 31-year- old daughter met a widower of 40, whose wife died four years ago. Apparently it was love at first sight and they have been deeply attached to each other for several months. However, the gentleman, whose social and business standing are impeccable, has not proposed, supposedly because he still cherishes the memory of his late wife. Do you think my daughter is wasting her time waiting for him to propose?

W. N.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: Many men have a perverse tendency to monopolize the time and affection of one woman, never getting around to the awaited question, "Will you marry me?" Such an arrangement is, of course, convenient for the male, but frustrating to the female, who is anxious to get about the business of establishing a home and raising a family. Perhaps the man in this case just needs a little nudge, or perhaps he is quite satisfied to have the pleasure of a lady's company without being tied down to domestic life. While it seems very likely that his love for your daughter will produce a proposal ere long, it certainly wouldn't be amiss for her, or you, to ask his intentions. Keeping a woman in suspense, as he is, is very, very unfair to her.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: Is an intelligent person ever a giggler? I know someone who claims to be intelligent but giggles all the time. I love to hear anyone with a good hearty laugh, but a giggle gets on my nerves.

JOYCE M.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: The nature of one's laugh has nothing to do with intelligence; some people laugh heartily, others manifest enjoyment in a more moderate fashion. Giggling is more apt to be a nervous habit than anything else. Isn't there a better means for you to judge intelligence?

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: I am a widow with three children, and have been going with a very nice man for two years. The trouble is that he and my oldest boy, who is 15, don't get along. Would marriage under these conditions be wise?

ISABELLE

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: Depends on why they don't get along! The probabilities are that the difficulties arise from mutual jealousy over you. If that's the case, your marriage would be one continuous battle, with each vying for your attention. A dangerous situation, and one not to be encouraged. Try to create friendliness between the two before you go ahead with marriage.

No Known Immunization Against Measles

By JOAN BARBERIS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

This is the season for measles, one of the most deceptive of childhood diseases. It usually creeps in with the symptoms of a cold, but may leave behind it serious complications.

For four-year-olds and under the serum that will ward off or modify an attack of measles, following known exposure to the disease, is strongly advocated by health authorities. But there is no known way to immunize a child against measles.

Complications from measles often involve eyes and ears, leaving them in a defective state.

Bronchitis, present to a degree in all cases, may extend to the lungs causing pneumonia.

The only way to fight the disease is through proper care once its presence is discovered.

SYMPTOMS TO WATCH

Doctors tell of visits to homes where the sick child answers the door and is running around because "at the moment" he feels just fine.

The appearance of the blotchy, mottled rash over the entire body is usually preceded by a fever, a dry "hacky" cough, sneezing, watery eyes and runny nose.

These early symptoms, not the appearance of the rash, should be the signal for a mother to keep her child away from other youngsters.

Doctors give these rules for treatment:

Isolate the patient in a well ventilated room. Make sure the patient stays in bed, warm and free from draughts.

Use warm water or sponge baths (this often helps to bring the fever down).

Be careful of the patient's eyes. Wash them frequently with a warm, not hot, solution of one teaspoonful of boracic acid to one pint of water.

As to diet, give as many fluids as possible until fever subsides and then light, nourishing food.

To entertain a quarantined youngster all types of plastic toys are considered ideal as they may be cleaned with lysol. Cheap, paper-bound books that can later be destroyed are also a good idea.

PRINCESS AT OXFORD—Princess Maria-Pia, 18-year-old daughter of ex-King Umberto of Italy, takes a stroll through the grounds of Lady Margaret Hall College, Oxford University. She is there under the incognito of Comtesse de Sarre to study English at the famous university. She arrived April 24 and will continue her studies at least until the end of June and probably for longer.

Readers' Friday Column Conducted By Mary Moore

THANK YOU NOTE: Up until April 14 lovely little Easter greeting cards and messages were arriving from readers. I want to thank you all for your thoughtfulness. Naturally I would like to have sent cards to you too, but you know from my Easter message that I was full of Easter spirit and sent my greetings through the column.

LETTER: This may sound like a tall tale, but so help me, it's the truth! A while ago I clipped your recipe for "Cherry Coffee Cake" and yesterday I took a notion to try it out while making Hot Cross Buns; however before I got around to putting the recipe away again, my three-year-old came along and ate it! No kidding; I'm sure this is one for the book, but nevertheless I would appreciate it if you would send me the recipe again, as the Coffee cake was "delish", and the rest of the family really went for it, even if Judy did prefer the clipping!

You know, I was just thinking you surely give us gals credit for a lot of will power. . .lecturing us about calories and then tempting us with recipes like this one. It ain't hardly fair you know! Of course I'm forced to admit that your calorie campaign is a worthy one; and of course we just wouldn't be deprived of your tasty recipes, so there you go—I should complain, eh? . . kindest regards to you and yours. . . Marion S.

ANSWER: . . .I sure laughed at that one. . . .I hope swallowing newsprint didn't do Judy any harm . . .I've sent the clipping of Cherry Coffee Cake by mail. . . you certainly scored, Marion on that cross-purpose program I run . . .it was wonderful to hear from you again.

QUESTION: (from reader giving no signature but who wanted recipe for faggots.)

FAGGOTS

ANSWER: One and one-half lbs. pork liver, ½ lb. fat pork, 2 eggs, 1 large onion, breadcrumbs, pork caul fat, nutmeg, sage, thyme, basil, salt and pepper. Chop liver and onion very fine and cut pork in small dice. Put together in stewpan, add salt and pepper to taste. Cover closely and cook slowly ½ hour, but do not brown it. Drain off excess fat and let cool slightly. Add beaten eggs, the suggested spices to taste and enough breadcrumbs to make a fairly stiff paste. Mix well, and form into squares. Wrap each square in caul fat, and place open side down, in baking tin. Pour over them a little rich gravy. Bake in moderate oven until golden brown. Serve with gravy. If preferred this may be pressed into loaf pan and covered with caul fat and baked for about 1½ hours. These amounts will serve 7 or 8.

✧ ✧ ✧

QUESTION: I would like to tell you how much I enjoy your wonderful column every day. . . you sound so neighbourly that you make me feel as if we've known each other for years. . . my mother used to make a pie but has lost the recipe. . . the filling for the pie was made with apple butter, raisins and eggs. Can you help me . . . have you ever tried putting a pinch of horseradish in a bowl of pea soup? It does wonders for the soup—just a pinch in each bowl. . . D. D. L.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: Yes I do have that recipe. . .I certainly hope it tastes like your mother's did. Did hers have cinnamon in? Thanks for the horseradish tip.

APPLE BUTTER PIE

One-half cup each apple butter and steamed seedless raisins (raisins are optional), 2 eggs, ½ cup sugar, 1½ tablespoons cornstarch, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, 2 cups whole milk (or part milk and part cream). Add beaten eggs, sugar, cornstarch and cinnamon to apple butter and raisins. Mix well then add milk while stirring. Pour into unbaked pastry shell. This is usually covered with ¼-inch wide strips pastry put on lattice-fashion. Bake at 375 deg. Fahr. about 30 to 35 minutes or until filling is set and top is golden.

THIS PLEATED SKIRT has two simulated pockets at either side of the self waistband. Completing an all-Canadian ensemble the model wears a Helen Harper cashmere type sweater.

Say Grain Firm Manipulating U.S. Oat Prices

WASHINGTON (AP)—Agriculture department officials told a Senate sub-committee today they believe Cargill, Inc., one of the largest grain firms in the U. S., is trying to manipulate oat prices by illegal trading.

The officials testified they had recommended criminal prosecution of Cargill, Inc., last October for the same type of "manipulation in oats." They said the aim was to pile up big profits by forcing down domestic oats prices and cashing in on contracts for future deliveries.

The testimony came from J. M. Mehl, administrator of the commodity exchange authority which supervises trading in many farm products, and D. B. Bagnell, the CEA's chief compliance officer.

VICE-PRESIDENT

Senator Milton Young (Rep. N. D.), conducting the hearing of a Senate appropriations sub-com- "vice-president of Cargill now is on one of Secretary of Agriculture Benson's advisory committees."

Agriculture department records show that R. C. Woodworth, vice-president of Cargill, Inc., of Minneapolis, is on the secretary's advisory committee on feed.

Mehl and Bagnell explained they have no such authority. They said they could do this only after a trader had been convicted and the case has gone through appeals.

Meet Again After 40 Years

Home Thursday night from the sunshine of Miami, Ben Rogow commented this morning that from all accounts and the drab appearance of the weather he hadn't missed much here in his vacation absence.

He mentioned a coincidence of acquaintance that turned back the years to his early days in Peterborough. A Windsor friend, staying at another hotel, met a man named Harry Deutsch of Brooklyn. Reference to Windsor, moved the conversation across Ontario to Peterborough, and Mr. Deutsch remarked that he used to know a man here named Rogow.

And that led to a meeting of Mr. Deutsch and Mr. Rogow, and recollections of Peterborough nearly 40 years ago.

Deutsch and Freidman were in ladies' wear at that corner. In 1917 they disposed of the store to Mr. Rogow, and Mr. Deutsch is now in business with a son, featuring custom tailored slacks and sports jackets in Brooklyn.

"One man in Peterborough at that time I'll never forget was Dr. A. Moir," he said. "He saved my life when I was so sick I thought I was going to die. I am sorry to know that he is dead, and I certainly owed a lot to him. He pulled me through."

Sorority News

FOUNDER'S DAY BANQUET

Beta Sigma Phi Sorority annual founder's day banquet was held Thursday evening at the Empress Hotel. Members of the Alpha Theta and Xi Iota Chapters of Peterborough were joined by 13 members of the sister chapter of Belleville who were given a special welcome by Mrs. Donald Anderson who received. Chairman of the banquet was Mrs. Lance Foord.

Guest speaker for the occasion was Miss Lydia Brooks, division chairman from the International offices of Beta Sigma Phi in Kansas City. She told of the Sorority formed a year ago in Athens, Greece. It is considered unique because every one of the 15 chartered members speaks five languages or more, one being able to spack 13 languages.

She spoke of several other organizations in the foreign division and then described personalities in the home office. A toast to the founder of the Sorority, Mr. Walter W. Ross, was proposed by Mrs. M. Caccavella, and Mrs. Ernest McWilliams spoke on the 22nd anniversary of the Sorority. Miss Marilyn Hollingsworth read a poem "So We May Serve."

The presentation of a past president's pin to Mrs. Ernest McWilliams was made by Mrs. Thora Rolfe. Presentation of pins to new members, Miss Sheila Briggs, Miss Barbara Nelson and Mrs. Maybelle Mutton, and the ritual vows ceremony had to be postponed until a later meeting for lack of time.

Miss Moira Whalon was convener of the banquet arrangements and she was thanked by Miss Nelson.

Barrie Man Observes His 101st Birthday

BARRIE (CP)—The records say L. E. Mills is 101 today. But, Mr. Mills says he's 102, and adds:

"Somehow or other the paper went astray, but what's one year when there are a hundred-odd involved."

Born on Big Island in the Bay of Quinte, the son of a Wesleyan Methodist minister, Mr. Mills credits his Christian training with his long and happy life.

He operated a general store in Shannonville, eight miles west of Belleville, until he was 97 and retired from business after an attack of pneumonia.

Mr. Mills says the birthday means he's "over the hump."

Robbed Minister After Lift, Jailed 3 Months

Commenting "you must feel pretty small about this," Magistrate W. R. Philp sentenced Charles Robertson of Montreal to three months in jail on a charge of theft. Robertson had taken a camera from the car of Rev. Fred Kreick after the pastor had given him a ride from Orillia to Peterborough last Friday.

Robertson asked for a reformatory term instead of county jail; "I don't want to stay here," he told the magistrate. "I don't like the food."

Mr. Kreick had picked up the accused at Orillia and given him a ride to Peterborough. En route, he had stopped the car at Lindsay and left Robertson alone in it for a few minutes.

He let Robertson out at McDonnel and Aylmer Sts. The next morning, Saturday, he discovered a $65 camera missing from the glove compartment of his car. He reported the theft to city police who picked Robertson up later in the morning.

Commenting on a report that the accused had no previous record, Crown Attorney Bradshaw agreed: "There was nothing clever about the offence."

Youths Convicted Of Stealing Scrap Iron

LINDSAY (ENS)—Three youths of the Fenelon Falls district, Fred Kelly, 19, Leo Hart, 18, and a 15-year-old juvenile were convicted today in magistrate's court of the theft of $50 worth of scrap iron.

The scrap was stolen about March 20 from an unoccupied farm owned by Herbert Worsley of Cameron. The youths were arrested Thursday by provincial police.

Hart was reported to have been AWL from the army's Valcartier camp since the middle of February and is now classed as a deserter. He was picked up today by an officer of the army's provost corps.

Kelly, described as the ringleader by Crown Attorney Lorne Jordan, was placed on suspended sentence for one year. He was assessed $15 costs and ordered to pay $15 restitution to Worsley.

The juvenile, whose father was almost removed from court because of his repeated interruptions, was also placed on suspended sentence for one year. He was ordered to pay $15 court costs and $10 restitution.

A second juvenile who had helped the others remove the scrap from the farm, but was not aware it was stolen, was acquitted.

Drunk Second Time In Three Days, Jailed

Found drunk on city streets for the second time in three days, John Whaley will, as a result, spend the next four months in Mimico Reformatory.

Remanded on $200 bail April 28 on a third offense drunk charge, Whaley asked for an adjournment on another drunk charge laid Thursday night until May 13 when the other offense was to have been dealt with. Adjournment was refused so Whaley pleaded not guilty with the idea of appearing on May 13 on the second count after all.

When Crown Attorney Bradshaw asked for a remand until Monday instead, Whaley commented: "Well in that case will you give me three months indefinite and one month definite in Mimico?"

"How can I?" asked Magistrate Philp. "You pleaded not guilty."

Whaley changed his plea to guilty and his request was granted . . . with another month definite thrown in.

Millard Scores Lindsay As Town Of Low Wages

LINDSAY—(ENS)— Describing Premier Leslie Frost's home riding as one in which "every prospect pleases and only wages are vile," C. H. Millard, national director of the United Steelworkers of America, vice-president of the Canadian Congress of Labor and a former MLA, scored low wages in this area and predicted that the federal government would soon be forced to grant collective bargaining rights to Canadian Arsenal employees here.

Mr. Millard told some 500 metal workers in the Legion hall Thursday night there was no reason why they should be paid depressed wages for their work. It is no credit to the province, he said, that the home seat of its premier should have the reputation of an open-shop community whose citizens received such low wages that they depended on the summer tourist trade to make ends meet.

TWO CERTIFIED

He congratulated employees of Dominion Brake Shoe and McCrae Machine and Foundry who received word this week that his union had been certified as their bargaining agency. He also promised his union's backing in "the struggle which must now start to bring Lindsay wages up to decency levels."

Terming Canadian Arsenal the "pace-setting plant of this community," Mr. Millard accused the cabinet of "sneaking through" an order-in-council depriving Arsenals employees of collective bargaining rights enjoyed by other government employees such as those of the CNR, CBC and "even atomic workers at Chalk River".

He said the order was "unnecessary, unrealistic and unfair" and promised "if the workers at Canadian Arsenals want to organize and choose the United Steelworkers of America as their union, our union will not only support their effort to improve wages, hours and working conditions but we will work unceasingly to restore to them the rights snatched away by this shameful order-in-council.

COULD BE REPEALED

"I say to Arsenal workers here and now that, if you are determined, I am certain that Ottawa will repeal this regulation."

Recent work by organizes of the Steelworkers' union has led to organization of two plants here. A labor board decision is pending at another Lindsay metal-working firm, Chatco Steel Products Co. The hearing of the latter case was held last week.

Alderman William Beggs of Peterborough, staff representative for Eastern Ontario of the United Packinghouse Workers of America, also spoke at Thursday night's meeting in Lindsay.

IT'S HOPALONG NOW

In these days of Hopalong Cassidy, nursery rhymes have lapsed into the shadow of anachronism. And so, there is only a dulled point to the observation that Mayor Waddell might have recalled one line from a classic of childhood: "I'm going to London to see the Queen," as he left at 2:00 a.m. today for the coronation. And that brings back a memory of the old Grand Theatre, and the Gingerbread Man, and its nostalgic salute: "So, give to them our praise/ Those olden, golden days/ When the jingley, jingley nursery rhymes were true." And like the other songs in the show not a dud in the score. Chaps like Morgan, Noyes, Clute and Cook may remember. This generation has goldbricked itself trading Cassidy for that melody and beauty dedicated by the theatre to the gay sentiment of the nursery rhymes.

Saunders Holds Conference With President

WASHINGTON (CP) — R. H. Saunders, chairman of the Ontario hydro-electric power commission, met with President Eisenhower Thursday to discuss possible U. S. participation in the project.

Saunders told reporters afterward that he was "very pleased" with Eisenhower's attitude—"particularly as regards the power project."

Eisenhower has indicated he favors U. S. participation in construction of the seaway. He recently received a report from a committee which said the seaway would be important to the U. S. from the standpoint of security.

Saunders visited with Eisenhower after addressing a conference attended by Transport Minister Chevrier of Canada and John E. Burton, chairman of the New York state power authority.

SAUNDERS OPTIMISTIC

Saunders said his organization is confident the seaway soon will be started—despite opposition of "selfish interests" in the United States.

Saunders told the conference the Ontario hydro already has 80 men working on the power job in its head office in Toronto and in the field.

If Ontario is to get the added seaway power, he said, it must get the go-ahead "within the next few months at the latest."

He added that Ontario's anticipatory moves were being made so that no time would be lost once the project got the final okay.

REUNION AFTER TERROR — Mrs. Anna Michalek greets her six-year-old daughter, Mariska, at Milwaukee, Wis., airport after the child arrived from Vienna. They had been separated in Czechoslovakia when Mrs. Michalek left for America. Her husband and daughter were to follow. Czech border guards, however, shot her husband to death in sight of the little girl. Other refugees and charity groups saw to it that she was reunited with her mother. But little Mariska speaks only German; her mother only Czech and English. Said the mother: "It is very strange not to be able to talk to my little girl. But the joy of having her back is so great that I cannot be unhappy."

Widow Loses $40,000 Damage Suit

TORONTO (CP)—Mrs. Dorothy Gingrich, widow of an Elmira school bus operator, Thursday lost her $40,000 damage action against Lishman Coach Lines and was ordered to pay $710 for damage to the bus that killed her husband.

Sylvester Gingrich, 53, was killed on a highway Jan. 22, 1952. At the trial of the lawsuit in Kitchener last month, several theories were put forward about the manner in which he was fatally injured, including one that an automobile struck him while he was trying to put chains on his empty bus at Crowsfoot Corners.

Mr. Justice Wishart Spence said in his judgment a proper inference from the evidence was that Gingrich was standing on the road near his stalled bus and that he was struck after a Lishman bus crashed into his vehicle. He found that John Howard Lishman had not been negligent.

Mr. Justice Spence said the evidence showed there was no flare burning beside the stalled Gingrich bus.

Woman Rules Chippewa Tribe At Muncey

MUNCEY, Ont. (CP)—After a year under a woman's rule the Chippewa tribe will put on election war-paint in June and let the world know how they like it.

Chief Arletta Silver runs he tribal councils like a home-makers' club, keeps the boys down to business and has well-defined views about most things.

When the Canadian government gave Indian women their franchise under the revised Indian Act such whole-hearted acceptance of the vote and the power to sit on Indian councils wasn't expected.

But in the Chippewas, a band of about 800, women outnumber the men. And if Chief Arletta (whose maiden name was Reilly) decides to run for re-election, she'll not have much trouble.

The former Chippewa chief was Clarence Silver — Chief Arletta's husband. He had to resign because of ill health.

Validity Of Marketing Act Said Matter For Courts

OTTAWA (CP)—Agriculture Minister Gardiner offered the opinion Thursday that any question regarding the validity of the Ontario Agricultural Products marketing Act is a matter for settlement in the courts.

He expressed the opinion in the House of Commons after H. P. Cavers (L—Lincoln) said concern had been expressed about the validity of the Ontario act because similar acts in British Columbia and Prince Edward Island had been declared ultra vires—outside the jurisdiction of Parliament—by the courts.

He said some schools of thought on the matter felt the Ontario act might be amended, others that the federal Agricultural Products Marketing Act might be amended.

UP TO COURTS

Mr. Gardiner said he understood the question in Ontario was the right to collect fees from the farmers for marketing purposes under the act. He understood that the counsel who conducted the P.E.I. case now was conferring with the Ontario government on the matter.

"There is only one place in which it can be settled," said Mr. Gardiner "and that is in the courts."

If the Ontario act were to be questioned, he said, it would "require a case to be taken to the courts in that province and whether the decision is a satisfactory one or not, it would have to be carried through to the Supreme Court of Canada to get a final decision in the matter."

Challenges Coldwell To Correct Charge

OTTAWA (CP)—The managing director of station CFRB, Toronto, Thursday night challenged M. J. Coldwell, CCF leader, to correct his charge that station CFRB is an "American outlet on Canadian soil."

Harry Sedgwick issued the challenge in a brief to the Commons broadcasting committee where Mr. Coldwell made his charge April 9.

He said station CFRB is "in substantially the same position, as far as our affiliation with Columbia is concerned, as the CBC is in connection with the arrangements it has with NBC, ABC, Mutual, etc."

CFRB is not obliged to carry any programs from Columbia with which it has been affiliated for 24 years, he said.

Thief Beats Clerk, 79 In Lakefield Robbery

BEATEN AND ROBBED for $150 Friday, Charles Smith, 79, of Lakefield, is in critical condition today in Civic hospital. He suffered a fractured skull, other head injuries and cuts on his left hand when attacked in the back office of Alf Hudson's second hand shop. The robbery scene (top) shows the stool (lettered A) where Mr. Smith usually sat, blood (lettered B) which formed a small pool on the floor and the stove (lettered C) on which the head of a hammer, possibly the assault weapon, was found. An iron spike was also found nearby and is held by police as another possible weapon. The small second hand store is shown in the lower photo. —Examiner Staff Photos

Rebels Closer To Capital, Assault Soon

HANOI, Indo-China (AP)—Vietminh invaders steadily closed a two-column pincers on the tiny Laotian royal seat of Luangprabang today with every indication they would open an all out assault tomorrow.

A northern column of the Communist-led forces was pushing within less than a day's march of the town. Another from the east was reported 12 miles away.

French Union forces poured in reinforcements and supplies to bolster the troops of this little mountain kingdom of Laos, one of the three states making up the associated states of Indo-China.

HOPE TO HALT HORDES

Digging in with the help of Luangprabang's 6,000 inhabitants, the French command hopes the defenders will be able to hold off the outnumbering hordes of rebels with superior firepower.

Moscow-trained Ho Chi Minh, the Vietminh leader, is believed to have thrown up to 40,000 troops—roughly four divisions—into the Laos invasion, which the French say is being supplied from Red China and is part of the Kremlin's over-all plan for conquest of southeast Asia.

A large part of these are moving into the 2,000 to 3,000-foot mountains ringing Luangprabang around the Ekong valley. From the east they are whacking through banana and coconut groves; from the north over jungle trails and in canoes down the Namhou river, which skirts Luangprabang.

French planes, dropping jellied gas fire bombs and strafing, make up the main element holding up the Vietminh drive. The French and Laotians have pulled back from strong posts along the invasion routes after fighting defensive slow-down battles.

But the threatened attack on Luangprabang cannot be put off much longer. Of little strategic value, capture of the residence town of Laotian King Sisavang Vong nevertheless would give the rebels tremendous prestige and open the way for an invasion of the sister kingdom of Cambodia.

The guerrillas have a third invasion column holding up thousands of French-Laotian troops on the broad Plaine des Jarres 200 miles southwest of the royal town.

Greek Transport Plane Down In Mediterranean

NICOSIA, Cyprus (Reuters) —A Greek DC-3 transport plane was reported down in the Mediterranean Sea today with an unknown number of persons aboard.

A Transworld Airlines Constellation flying in the area changed course to help look for survivors, confused radio flashes from the scene at first suggested that it was the TWA plane that had crashed.

(In London, TWA officials said the Constellation, flying from Cairo to Athens, was unable to sight any wreckage or survivors and resumed course after a search.)

Gov't Plans To Expand Health Work

$42,000,000 Extra Will Boost Aid To Mothers, Disabled

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government has mapped of a $212,000,000 health grants program for the next five years, including a three-way boost to aid disabled persons and mothers and their babies and to provide increased X-ray and other laboratory facilities for the sick.

The three-fold expansion, to cost $42,000,000 during a five-year period, was announced by Health Minister Martin as he initiated a Commons debate Friday on health department estimates. It was the biggest expansion in the national health grants program since it was created by the late Prime Minister Mackenzie King in 1948.

Spokesmen for all three opposition parties agreed, with varying qualifications, that the expansion was a step in the right direction, but the CCF suggested the government should have gone farther, bringing in national health insurance. Stanley Knowles (CCF—Winnipeg North Centre) said the Liberals have been promising health insurance since 1919.

Mr. Martin made the announcement just a few days before the fifth anniversary of the national health program. He emphasized that Mr. King had stated in 1948 that the grants represented "first stages in the development of a comprehensive health insurance plan for all Canada."

GRADUAL EXPANSION

The health-grants expansion will be gradual, Mr. Martin told the House. In the current fiscal year federal grants to the provinces may be boosted by a total of $5,300,000. This will work up to $10,800,000 a year in the fiscal year 1957-58.

Officials said this will increase federal grants to provinces to a total of about $212,000,000 during the next five years. A total of $165,000,000 was made available in the last five years, but the provinces used only about $100,000,000. Grants went for such things as hospital construction, free x-rays and drugs, medical training, and cancer and tuberculosis health care.

The three new stages of the national health program are for:

1. Construction of new laboratories, particularly in outlying areas, to help the doctor diagnose ailments without bringing the patient to medical centres in the big cities.

2. Health aid to rehabilitate disabled persons, such as those with legs or arms amputated, paraplegics, victims of accidents and others suffering body-crippling conditions.

3. Health aid for mothers and their babies, including more health research on pregnancy, improved equipment for maternity wards in hospitals and increased construction of health clinics.

PROVINCIAL RESPONSIBILITY

In some cases provinces will have to put up dollar for dollar with the federal government before they can get the federal grant. In others it will be a straight federal contribution, provided the provinces abide by federal regulations.

The new laboratory and radiological services will be the most costly. Total grants for this will be about $4,300,000 climbing to an annual maximum of $7,800,000 in the next five years.

Starting at 30 cents per capita, the grants to the provinces will rise to a maximum of 50 cents per capita in the fifth and succeeding years. The provinces will have to match dollar for dollar on federal aid.

In building these laboratories, said Mr. Martin, there is "no thought of regimentation or centralization of personal health services."

Escapes Unhurt

ORILLIA (CP)—Jean Lalonde, 25, of Niagara Falls, escaped unhurt today when his car went out of control, careened into a ditch, snapped a pole, crashed through a stump fence and slewed 75 yards through a muddy field. His wife, Constance, suffered minor cuts and bruises.

PoWs Denounce Korean War As "Useless"

LYNEHAM, England (AP)—Twenty-two repatriated British prisoners of war returned home from Korea Friday.

Some denounced the Korean war as "stupid" and "useless." Trooper Arthur Surridge of the 8th Hussars said he believed Communist stories that the war was started by the United States "to make profit."

"It wasn't propaganda," said Rifleman J. N. McNally of the Royal Ulster Rifles. "They just gave us talks on what was going on."

LOOK HEALTHY

Although classified by the Reds as "sick and wounded," most of the men looked bronzed, healthy and well-fed. Six of 22 were stretcher cases. One stretcher case said he broke his leg playing soccer.

Trooper Surridge, who said his only ailment was dysentery, described Communist medical treatment as "very good."

"We got lectures from the Chinese with a slight bit of propaganda but personally I believe the war is being fought for profit," he told a reporter. "There's no sense in the Korean war. It's a waste of time and has nothing to do with Britain at all."

Private Donald Large of the Gloucestershire Regiment described the Korean war as "useless" and said "everybody out there is cheesed off with the war—a lot of the men in the line, too."

(Reuters news agency said most of the men refused to speak about attempts to indoctrinate them with Communist teachings, but all agreed they had been well treated as prisoners.)

Arrest Cubans Planning Attack

HAVANA, Cuba (AP)—A government spokesman says Mexican authorities have arrested a group of former Cuban officials and seized "information disclosing an intent to attack the Cuban coast."

In Mexico, there was no immediate comment on the report. Government offices were closed Friday for the May Day celebrations and officials could not be reached.

The announcement was made Friday night by Ernesto de la Fe, information minister in the government of President Fulgencio Batista. He said those arrested were friends of exiled Cuban president Carlos Prio Socarras. Prio was ousted from the presidency in March, 1952, by an army-backed revolt that put Batista in power.

The Mexican newspaper Ultimas Noticias reported several days ago that 300 mercenaries financed by Prio were on the Yucatan peninsula preparing for an attack on Cuba. There has been no confirmation of this report, however.

Deny Princess Plans Enter Religious Order

The New York Daily News says today that after the Coronation Princess Margaret may enter a religious order and that the Queen Mother may be named governor-general of Canada.

In a Washington dispatch by Ruth Montgomery, the News says that Princess Margaret, "since the death of her father. . .has turned increasingly to religion."

"This rumor has been floating around for some time," the palace spokesman said, "but there is no reason to believe Princess Margaret is contemplating anything of the kind."

Two Children Two Men Die In Crash

Skids On Pavement Car Strikes Clover Leaf Abutment

AJAX (CP)—Four persons, two men and two small girls, were killed today when an automobile skidded on wet pavement and crashed into an abutment at the Ajax clover leaf on the four-lane Toronto-Oshawa highway.

The dead were identified as:

Romeo Larocque of RR2, Port Rowan, driver of the car, his two daughters, June 8, and Judy, 10, and Stephen Patten, also of Port Rowan.

Police said the late-model car was owned by the Miller Oil Company of Simcoe.

They said the vehicle was westbound and went into a skid just as it approached the overpass at the clover leaf. The car hit the concrete abutment broadside.

Other details were not immediately available.

2 Middle East Kings Crowned

Royal salutes of 101 guns boomed out over this storied Iraqi capital as youthful King Faisal II took his simple oath of allegiance to the constitution and loyalty to his people.

Across the Middle East's mountains and deserts, Faisal's cousin 18-year-old King Hussein I, became the third reigning monarch of Jordan in a similar ceremony in Amman's tiny Parliament House.

The two young kings were enthroned at virtually the same moment before overflow crowds of foreign representatives and leaders of their respective countries.

The cry of "Long Live the King," ringing from the Jordan Parliament House announced that Hussein, grandson of Jordan's first monarch, King Abdullah, had assumed his royal duties.

Both Hussein and Faisal are members of the ancient Hashemite dynasty and descendants of old King Hussein who established a kingdom in Arabia when the Arabs revolted against the Turks in the First World War. Both have been studying in England in preparation for their royal duties.

Scratch Entries For 79th Derby

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (CP)—Entries for the 79th running of the Kentucky Derby were reduced to 11 today when trainer Jack Hodgins scratched Dixiana Farm's Spy Defense.

He said he doesn't believe his horse belongs in the same field with the "big grey"—Native Dancer.

Two other horses were doubtful starters. Social Outcast was not expected to start because the track was fast. Money Broker, the Florida Derby winner, was also considered unlikely to start except on a muddy track. Scratches are permitted up to 45 minutes before post time—5:30 p.m. EDT.

Recovery Chances Said Good; Pension Cash Gone

Seventy-nine-year-old Charles Smith of Lakefield lies critically injured today in Civic Hospital with a fractured skull and severe head wounds, believed caused by blows from a claw hammer or a heavy spike. Police believe he was struck six times on top of the head and once over the left eye by a thief who waylaid him in a Lakefield second-hand store and robbed him of $150. The attack is thought to have occurred shortly before 11 a.m. Friday. He was found wandering about in the rear of the store, his head and shoulders covered with blood, by Amos Forbes, 70, of Apsley who dropped into the store for a visit.

Dr. H. E. Gastle said today that the partially-disabled pensioner's chances of recovery are "good".

Although Smith was covered with blood and obviously hurt, Forbes and his companion, 20-year-old Jim Scott, a Coe Hill farmer, didn't think the elderly man was seriously injured. He was in a daze but he was able to lock up the store and walk back with them to his home 200 yards away.

RUSHED TO CIVIC

He was treated by Dr. H. E. Gastle, of Lakefield, rushed to Civic Hospital by ambulance, and it was not until 1:40 p.m. that Chief Constable Price Morris, of Lakefield, was notified.

Provincial Police from district headquarters in Peterborough are assisting Chief Constable Morris in the investigation. So is OPP Constable Jack McKendry, of Apsley.

No arrests have been made in connection with the assault and robbery.

Only two cents were left in his wallet. It had contained about $100 of his personal money — pension cheques that had been cashed the day before—and it is estimated, another $50 cash belonging to the A. J. Hudson store.

There is no till in the Hudson store which Mr. Smith had been managing for the last six weeks, and the week's receipts were carried around in his wallet.

SEMI-CONSCIOUS

Confusion over what happened is caused by Mr. Smith's inability to remember what happened. He is in a semi-conscious condition and is not articulate.

Mrs. Smith was shocked when she saw her husband trying to clean himself up when he walked into the house, accompanied by Mr. Forbes and Mr. Scott.

"You couldn't even see his hair for all the blood," said Mrs. Smith. "And his face was covered too. It was a terrible sight.

"I GOT HIT"

"I asked him what happened and all he could say was, 'I got hit.' He couldn't remember anything after leaving the bank. He couldn't remember being in the shop at all."

That was as much as he was able to tell the two men who found him.

4,000 Red Police Serve Prison Terms

BERLIN (AP) — More than 4,000 members of East Germany's Communist police army are serving prison terms for criminal and political offences, the West Berlin newspaper Nacht - Depesche reported today.

Nacht-Depesche said Gen. Vincenz Mueller, chief of staff of the 120,000-man military force, disclosed this figure at a recent staff conference when he complained about its "bad morale and catastrophic discipline."

Britain Hopes Home Influence To Cure PoWs

LONDON (AP)—The war office said today it is sending all British prisoners repatriated from Korea on home leave today in the hope that the atmosphere of their family life will cure any who have swallowed Red propaganda during their spell in North Korean jails.

When the party of 22 released British soldiers landed in Britain Friday a few of them made statements to reporters denouncing the Korean war and many spoke well of the treatment they received from their captors.

A military spokesman said today stretching their legs by their own firesides is the best way of restoring a sense of proportion to those in need of it. He indicated there will be no psychological or other special treatment for selected prisoners regarded as cold war propaganda victims.

NATURAL COURSE

"The war office policy regarding any disindoctrination considered necessary for any repatriated prisoners is to allow them to go to their homes as soon as they are fit in the hope that home influence and the return to normal surroundings will give them a more balanced view," the spokesman said.

The U. S. defence department has said American prisoners suspected of having been affected by Communist propaganda would be sent to Valley Forge army hospital in Pennsylvania for psychiatric treatment.

Jets Smash Red Targets

SEOUL (AP)—The UN command sent hundreds of Sabre jets and fighter-bombers streaking over North Korea today in a search for Red MiG jets and troop and supply targets.

No MiGs were sighted, but the air force said several rich targets were smashed.

Fighter-bombers plastered a series of rail bridges near the North Korean capital of Pyongyang and pounded front-line targets in western Korea.

Returning pilots reported big fires in both areas.

The Republic of South Korea 3rd corps was in action on the eastern front today, boosting the RoK strength almost to that of U. S. forces in the 8th army.

Michael Bowes-Lyon Dies In England

SOUTHILL, England (Reuters)—Michael Bowes-Lyon, 59, brother of the Queen Mother, died at his home here Thursday, it was announced today.

Heir to the Earl of Strathmore, he was vice-lieutenant of Bedfordshire—an honorary post.

He fought in the First World War and was taken prisoner. Though his sister became Queen, he took little part in the activities of court and society.

He held no title but as the son of an earl was entitled to prefix his name with "The Honorable."

65 People Flee Flames In Building

TORONTO (CP) — Sixty-five persons fled to the street in their nightclothes early today when fire broke out in a suburban East York apartment building. Damage was $2,000.

Mrs. M. Walker, 49, told police she awoke, choking from smoke, to find her bedding ablaze. She turned in the alarm.

Story Of Queen Elizabeth II To Appear In The Examiner

As the spectacle of the coming Coronation focuses world attention on Queen Elizabeth II, The Examiner brings you the most intimate story of her recent years, as written by her friend and former governess, Marion Crawford.

This special serialization of "Elizabeth the Queen" will begin Wednesday, May 6, and will continue daily through the peak period of Coronation interest. In pictures and story, you will be taken behind the scenes in Buckingham Palace to meet the warm and vibrant personality of the new Queen. Anecdotes of her private life are told as Marion Crawford paints a charming picture of a girl who has become, at the age of 27, one of the most prominent figures on the international scene.

"Crawfie"

For 17 years, "Crawfie," as the author was known to members of the Royal Family, was governess and guide to both Queen Elizabeth and Princess Margaret Rose. Besides "The Little Princesses," Miss Crawford wrote "Mother and Queen: The Story of Queen Mary," as a result of her intimate glimpses of England's Royalty. Although her books are already widely read, "Elizabeth the Queen," on the eve of the Coronation, will interest thousands of additional readers.

This special Examiner serial gives you an up-to-date portrait of Britain's new ruler. It details the recent life of Elizabeth covering her romance and marriage, her children, her visits to America and Africa, her first year on the throne and her vibrant personality.

The memoir itself is both an account full of human interest and an authentic picture of the woman who will be crowned Britain's Queen on June 2.

Ontario Ready To Co-operate

TORONTO (CP) — Dr. J. T. Phair, deputy health minister for Ontario, said Friday night that the province will take advantage of every nickel of federal money available for health purposes, provided the Ottawa program fits into Ontario's long-range objective.

Commenting on Health Minister Martin's statement in the House of Commons, he said the federal government's offer of an additional $42,000,000 spread over the next five years is a matching one. Ontario would have to provide a dollar for every dollar put up by Ottawa.

"The matter of policy is one for the government to decide," Dr. Phair said, "but we have never hesitated to co-operate with Ottawa in progressive health moves."

New British Plane Needs No Runway

LONDON (AP)—Britain has an experimental rocket-propelled aircraft which shoots vertically into the sky and needs no runway for take-off.

Trials with the VTO first took place from a ship near the Welsh coast in 1949, the Fairey company disclosed today.

City Fathers Of Cardiff Decide Painting Not Insult

CARDIFF, Wales (Reuters) — Cardiff city fathers took a close look today at an artist's view of their mayor as Pontius Pilate and decided that, after all, it was no slight to civic dignity.

The picture, showing Christ carrying a stone cross through a present-day Cardiff street, with the lord mayor riding behind in a car, scandalized the city council Friday.

First the councillors heard of it was the news that the canvas was hung in the summer exhibition of London's Royal Academy, citadel of British art.

Civic leaders bristled with indignation. There was even talk of asking the academy to take the picture down.

But today the councillors saw the picture reproduced in the newspapers and had second thoughts.

Mayor William Muston, trying hard to recognize himself as Pontius Pilate, sent his compliments to the artist, Jeffrey Steele, a 20-year-old newcomer who lives in a Cardiff garret.

"I congratulate him on a good imaginative effort," Muston said. "We have certainly not taken any action of protest."

Steele's painting, "Christ Carrying the Cross," shows the city band marching ahead of Christ, with workaday Cardiff folk looking on—shopkeepers, chimney sweeps, garagemen, housewives and a priest. The mayor's car bears his official licence plate.

Reds Suggest 4 Asiatic Countries

Communists Request One-Day Recess In Truce Talks

PANMUNJOM (AP) — The Communists today asked for a one-day recess in the Korean truce talks after naming four Asian countries which they consider qualified to take custody of war prisoners who refuse to go home.

The Allies agreed to skip Sunday's session.

North Korean Gen. Nam Il said India, Pakistan, Burma and Indonesia might be considered neutral countries to serve as caretaker for 48,000 prisoners who balk at returning to their Communist homeland.

Lt.-Gen. William K. Harrison reiterated the Allied position that the neutral take custody of the prisoners in Korea until their future is decided.

UP TO OTHERS

Asked whether any of the four Asian states named by the Reds would be acceptable, the senior Allied delegate said:

Washington officials were quoted as saying it was possible the United States would accept either Pakistan or India as the neutral to take custody of the prisoners in Korea.

However, informed sources said the U.S. had no firm policy other than that Sweden and Switzerland were acceptable. The Reds already have rejected Switzerland. The UN suggested Sweden Friday, but the Communists did not reply.

WIND UP DELIVERY

Meanwhile, the UN command—following a fanatical, clothes-ripping demonstration at Panmunjom by a band of hard-core Red repatriates—warily prepared to wind up delivery of disabled North Korean and Chinese prisoners Sunday.

A total of 185 Reds, including 21 women, will be returned, making the final total 6,670. That's roughly 800 more than originally promised.

Nam repeated at the opening of Saturday's session the Red demand that the UN first agree to send balky prisoners out of Korea before the neutral custodian is named.

He insisted, however, that "it is obviously impractical" to ship captives to far-away Europe.

Harrison said it was "impractical" to ship prisoners "overseas," but added:

"The only difference (between movement to Europe or an Asian country) is the short period of actual travel on the sea. Yet you would make these few days a vital matter."

REASONABLE SOLUTION

The only "reasonable solution," Harrison declared, was to keep prisoners in Korea until their fate is ironed out.

After the session, Rear-Admiral John C. Daniel remained behind for a meeting of liaison groups handling the exchange of sick and wounded prisoners.

He said the Allies had "indisputable evidence" the Reds still hold these prisoners and that they wanted to come home and were fit to travel.

The Reds again turned down Daniel's appeal.

Youth 21, Convicted On Murder Charge

WHITEHORSE, Y. T. (CP)—Glen Donald Smith, 21, Friday was convicted of murder in the death of a taxi driver who was shot through the head by one of his passengers.

The youth was sentenced by Mr. Justice J. E. Gibben to die on the gallows July 10 for the death of Ralph Caruso.

Caruso was killed Aug. 11 last year after he was given orders at gunpoint to drive to a destination far to the south in British Columbia.

Most of the testimony at the five-day trial centred around who fired the shot that killed Caruso—Smith or his companion Eric Malmsten.

"We do not want in Canada to see any barrier imposed between doctor and patient for that would lessen the doctor's effectiveness and the patient would inevitably suffer."

INCREASE IN GRANTS

The grants to help the disabled will rise from a total of $500,000 in the current year to an annual maximum of $1,000,000 in 1954-55 and succeeding years. Provinces will share on the basis of $10,000 each, with the balance divided on the basis of population.

The money can be used to purchase such equipment as electro-therapy apparatus, whirlpool baths, remedial gymnastic apparatus and other special items to correct disabilities. It can also be used to help train professional rehabilitation workers.

The child and maternal health grants will total $500,000 this year, working up to a maximum of $2,000,000 in 1955-56 and succeeding years. This grant also will be on the basis of $10,000 for each province, with the balance divided among the provinces on the basis of births and infant deaths.

This money can be used to provide hospital out-patient service for mothers and children, building clinics where mothers can get guidance on child care, education of expectant mothers, and more follow-up home nursing visits.

SUGGESTS PENSIONS

F. D. Shaw (SC—Red Deer) joined with Mr. Knowles in urging the government to provide pensions for incurably disabled persons with no hope of rehabilitation. But Mr. Shaw said his party will never support a health insurance plan that destroys the doctor-patient relationship or that puts medical service on a production-line basis.

Earlier members wound up a three-day debate over the South Saskatchewan river project. Prime Minister St. Laurent suggested tenders would have to be called to establish a cost figure for the multi-million-dollar project, but he saw little prospect of a start on the irrigation and power plan this year. Prairie opposition members said Mr. St. Laurent's statement represented another Liberal action to delay the scheme.

WINNIPEG GRAIN

Routine shipper buying came out in oats and barley, while seaboard and processor interests picked up flax. Gains or losses in all grains, however, were narrow. Prices for Class 2 and IWA wheat advanced one-quarter cent.

Cabinet Delays Rate Decision

OTTAWA (CP)—The cabinet is dealing with an appeal from eight provincial governments against the latest freight rate increase, but is not expected to give a verdict for several weeks.

The ministers reserved decision Friday night on the provincial appeal which was backed up personally by five premiers, and Prime Minister St. Laurent later suggested it will take some weeks for the cabinet to reach a judgment.

Mr. St. Laurent told reporters he does not think a decision can be reached before he sails for the Coronation May 20th. That indicated the verdict of the cabinet would not be handed down before his return about mid-June.

Meanwhile, the $38,500,000-a-year award of the board of transport commissioners last winter will stand. The increased rates went into effect March 16.

Opposing them at sessions Friday and Friday night with the cabinet was a battery of provincial delegates including Premiers Manning of Alberta, Campbell of Manitoba, Jones of Prince Edward Island, Smallwood of Newfoundland and Fleming of New Brunswick.

In the closed meetings, it was understood, Premier Manning was the chief spokesman among the provincial leaders. He asked the cabinet bluntly to call a halt to rate increases, noting the transport board has given the railways authorization to increase rates by 98 per cent since 1947.

"These periodic and pyramiding increases cannot go on indefinitely," Mr. Manning said. "Someone must call a halt. We feel the time already is past due."

Recovery Chances

From the few sketchy details that could be gathered from the police, the men who found him, his wife, and others who had seen him Friday morning, here is a reconstruction of what happened:

Mr. Smith went to the Hudson general trading and second-hand store on Queen St. at the usual time. He has been managing the store for the last six weeks since Alf Hudson the proprietor became ill and was forced to stay home in bed. Altogether he has been working there for four years.

About all that is known of his Friday morning activities is that he went to the bank sometime after 10 a.m. and presumably he walked directly back to the Hudson store which is on the east side of Queen St. in the main business block.

THEORY OF ATTACK

Somebody was either lying in wait for him or followed him into the rear of the store—only partly visible through the front window—and there the attack occurred.

Bloody handprints on the floor indicate that the blows were sufficient to knock him to the floor. The large pool of clotted blood indicated that he must have been there for sometime, presumably unconscious. Somehow he got up by himself and walked out the back door to an outside lavatory. A trail of blood market his path, and blood was also spattered around the inside of the small room where the brutal attack occurred, near a woodstove.

Jim Scott, one of the two farmers who found Mr. Smith, said that he had driven Mr. Forbes to Lakefield to have some grass-seed cleaned at the W. J. Charlton mill. He was also going to pick up a load of oats.

"While we were waiting around town for the seed to be cleaned Mr. Forbes decided to look up Mr. Smith," related Mr. Scott. "He always drops in to see him when he comes to town.

COVERED WITH BLOOD

"The old man came out of the back room when we rang the bell as we entered the store. I guess he wanted to see who it was. But he didn't say anything.

"Mr. Forbes looked at him all covered with blood and said 'What in the world happened to you'?"

"I don't really know," Smith said, "but I think somebody hit me."

"We went into the back room and there was this great big pool of blood on the floor near the stove. The head of a hammer was lying on a cloth on top of the woodstove. The freshly-broken hammer handle was lying on the floor beside the stove."

A 10-inch spike was also found nearby but police point out that the instrument that caused the injury might have been one of many handy possible weapons lying about the second-hand shop. Both the hammer and the spike are being examined by police for fingerprints and bloodstains.

"We wanted to call a doctor and the police," said Scott, "but the old chap didn't want that. Finally we said we'd see him home. He acted sensibly but he was in a bit of a daze. He was steady on his feet."

HEAD BADLY GASHED

"He certainly looked a mess, his head was badly gashed, but he didn't seem too badly hurt."

Mr. Smith is an old-age pensioner who also draws a pension from the Quaker Oats Co. in Peterborough. He worked at the plant for 18 years and retired 13 years ago, doing odd jobs since then.

Before that he had a car-washing business on Water St. behind the taxi stand of the late Harold Gibbs. Before the First World War he worked with Alphonse T. Fontaine, who is now in the bicycle business across from the site where Gibbs' taxi used to be. At that time Mr. Fontaine was in the horse-livery business.

Mr. Smith served for three-and-a-half years in the Canadian Army during the First World War and was badly wounded in the right arm. He also received head injuries.

Three Issues On Agenda For Parley

St. Laurent, President Will Confer On Diplomatic Items

OTTAWA (CP)—A handful of problems involving relations between Canada and the United States likely will be discussed when Prime Minister St. Laurent visits Washington next week.

The journey has been billed as a "courtesy" visit, but it was indicated Friday that diplomatic affairs will rank high.

It was learned that External Affairs Minister Pearson will accompany the prime minister when he leaves by air next Thursday for a three-day stay with President Eisenhower, J. W. Pickersgill, clerk of the Privy Council and former secretary to the prime minister, also will make the trip.

The prime minister and his party will stop at Blair House, the president's official guest house.

PROBABLE ISSUES

Talks between Mr. St. Laurent and President Eisenhower will take place in the White House and likely will centre on these issues:

1. The St. Lawrence seaway—stalled because the U.S. has not yet designated an American authority to co-operate with Ontario in developing the power segment of the huge project. This will be the first time this issue has had an airing between the heads of the two governments since Mr. St. Laurent conferred with former president Truman in 1951.

2. American import restrictions—the Canadian government is deeply concerned over the continuation of U.S. import restrictions on Canadian dairy products and new bills before Congress to boost American tariffs.

3. Joint defence—a general discussion likely will develop on the general international situation; progress towards peace in Korea and how these developments will affect joint Canada-U.S. defence planning in the future.

This will be Mr. St. Laurent's first conference with the U.S. President since Gen. Eisenhower came to Canada on a visit in 1951 as commander of North Atlantic armies.

CONDUCTS CORONATION — Next to Queen Elizabeth, the most important participant in the Coronation is The Most Reverend and Right Honorable, The Archbishop of Canterbury, Dr. Geoffrey Francis Fisher. As Primate of All England, he anoints and crowns the Queen. Here he wears the magnificent cope he will wear during the Coronation. Presented to him in 1948 by Bishop Yashiro, of Japan, it is made of rich Japanese silks and brocades, lavishly embroidered.

PostponeAppointment Of Technical Groups

CAIRO (Reuters)—British and Egyptian negotiators met here for three hours today and decided to postpone temporarily the appointment of technical committees which will engineer the withdrawal of British troops from the Suez canal zone.

They adjourned the talks on the future of the zone until Tuesday, after agreeing to discuss the committees at another session.

100,000 Bushels Of New Wheat Ready In Fall

OTTAWA (CP)—The agriculture department may have about 100,000 bushels of a new wheat variety—developed to resist Race 15-B rust—ready for distribution as seed next fall.

Dr. C. H. Goulden, head of the department's cereals division, said in an interview that the new variety, developed after years of combined scientific effort, will come up for licensing this summer.

The department itself decides which varieties will be licensed for distribution and it appeared likely, said Dr. Goulden, that the new variety will be approved in time for fall distribution.

"The seed likely will be handed out on a first-come, first-served basis," he said, but he didn't know whether there will be sufficient to meet all requests.

6,000 BUSHELS

Agriculture Minister Gardiner announced development of the seed on Thursday. He told the Commons the department has about 6,000 bushels of the new variety which is being sown this year on federally-controlled land, including the Bow river irrigation project in Alberta.

"It is not licensed yet because we have not completely proven the baking value of it, although we think it has a baking value which is just about as good as any other wheat," Mr. Gardiner said.

But because of the great threat of Race 15-B rust, which spread to Canada from the United States, the department was going ahead with planting to have a considerable amount of the seed "for distribution at the end of the season."

Race 15-B is one of about 100 different types of rust, said Dr. Goulden, amplifying Mr. Gardiner's remarks. It was spread from the U. S. by airborne spores and hit Canada's high-priced durum wheat. The fungus germinates on the stem, evaporates the plant's water and withers the stalk.

The U. S. has lost millions of dollars of grain through this rust and Canadian scientists decided as far back as 1938 to use all means to prevent that from happening in Canada. Most of the damage so far has been in Manitoba.

A group of scientists in the department's Winnipeg laboratories found a wheat variety resistant to this rust and crossed it with high-quality wheat.

Batches of the new variety wheat were sent to California for year-round planting and quick reproduction. From the California plantings the department now has about 6,000 bushels of the wheat for sowing on Canada's Prairies. About 6,000 acres are being sown this spring.

Dr. Goulden said that while the baking value of the new variety has not yet been established, tests will continue and he is confident the variety will pass the baking tests satisfactorily.

The new wheat still has no name. It goes under the label of "CT-186." It will get a name, said Dr. Goulden, when the licence is granted.

PHOENIXVILLE, Pa. (AP)—Twenty tired U. S. soldiers recently released by the Communists in Korea, arrived by plane at Valley Forge military hospital early today after a long secrecy-shrouded journey from Tokyo.

The men, four of them stretcher cases, were given steak dinners, allowed to call relatives from mobile telephones brought to their bedsides and then settled down for a night's rest.

An air force spokesman said the defence department had ordered security conditions placed on the trip because the men had been "victims of Communist propaganda."

Maj. James Campbell, public information officer at Valley Forge, said, however, the main reason for the security measures was "simply that the men were both tired and ill and all had expressed a desire not to be interviewed."

Dismiss Charge Of Buying Furs Without Licence

COBOURG (ENS) — A charge against Harry Eisen of Toronto of unlawful purchase of beaver pelts was dismissed Friday because it was not shown whether the accused had a licence to buy the furs.

Meredith Brown, Roseneath, general store proprietor, told the court that James Montgomery of Hastings had five beaver pelts to sell and, as he didn't handle these pelts he put him in touch with Harry Eisen. Montgomery's evidence was that he sold the skins to Eisen for $45.

Crown Attorney Harry Deyman said that if the court ruled that he would have to call the registrar to establish that the accused did not have a licence, he would need an adjournment Defence counsel Martin Kelnen of Toronto objected to an adjournment and said that he was not in sympathy with a piecemeal hearing of the case.

"I may be wrong, but I interpret your remarks as meaning that you feel that the Crown is taking the case in steps to see how far he need go. In my years as magistrate I have been associated with 10 crown attorneys and I have never encountered one who was more fair than Crown Attorney Harry Deyman," declared Magistrate Baxter.

Mr. Kelnan assured the court that he was not in the least being critical of Mr. Deyman.

Defence counsel and the crown attorney argued as to whom the onus lay upon to show that the accused had a licence and the magistrate ruled that since the prosecution had not resolved the question he had no other course than to dismiss the charge.

The fish weighed about four and three-and-a-half pounds each. During the outing (just where the fish were caught she isn't saying), Mrs. McIvor tangled with two others just as large.

Identical Bills Introduced On Niagara Plan

WASHINGTON (AP)Senator Herber Lehman (Dem. Lib. N. Y.) and Representative Franklin D. Roosevelt Jr., (Dem. Lib. N. Y.) have announced they will introduce identical bills calling for federal redevelopment of hydro-electric potential at Niagara Falls.

Lehman and Roosevelt disclosed their decision Friday in letters to chairmen of the Senate and House of Representatives public works committees, which are slated to open joint hearings May 14 on bills to authorize private enterprise to do the job.

The two New Yorkers told the committees to be prepared to "consider the viewpoints of those who believe that Niagara should be developed as a public project, in the public interest."

BILLS FILED

Identical bills that would give the redevelopment to private interests have been filed by Representatives William Miller (Rep. N. Y.) and George Dondero (Rep. Mich.) and in the Senate by Senators Homer Capehart (Rep. Ind.) and Edward Martin (Rep. Pa.).

Engineers have estimated that the project, which would nearly triple the present power output at Niagara, would cost about $400,000,000.

The International League set back its opening day a full week this year to avoid bad weather, but it didn't entirely succeed.

The same clubs will try again today with the Montreal and Ottawa games in daylight and the Buffalo and Toronto contests under the lights.

Montreal continues to lead the circuit with three victories in four starts with Toronto in hot pursuit, having won five games and lost only two.

U.S. PoWs Think Some British Turned Red

By STAN CARTER

TOKYO (AP)Four United States soldiers who spent many months in North Korean prison camps today criticized British repatriates who denounced the war as "stupid" and "useless."

One American freed last week at Panmunjom said some of the remarks of the first group of British prisoners to arrive in England were identical with statements made by Chinese Communist instructors.

Another said he thought those Britons "might have turned a little bit."

The Americans emphasized they thought the majority of British prisoners disliked the Communists as much as they did. They said there were some among the Britons who were "progressives"—the PoW nickname for men who adopted the Communist line—just as there were some Americans. But they said they thought the percentage was small.

The British prisoners arrived at Lyneham, England, Friday. One said he believed the U.S. started the war "to make profit." Another said there was a "slight bit of propaganda" in Communist lectures and adde, "I never was a lover of the Americans."

"I'll tell you," said Sgt. Harry A. Cutting of Los Angeles, "there and the British. I ran into a couple of good ones."

All the Americans said stories of ill treatment and forced marches told by repatriated Americans were true to the best of their knowledge.

"It's not true what they said. I think they might have turned a little bit."

LIVED TOGETHHER

Americans and Britons lvied together in the prison camps Lang said he still had a touch of British accent from his close association with them.

Cpl. John King of San Antonio, Tex., said the statements of the British soldiers were "just what the Communists want to hear."

King said some of the Britons in his camp "did not like the Chinese at all and some seemed to get along with the Chinese better than they should have."

"It's just like you find a few Americans, too, who go along with the Communists," King said.

Agricultural Society Plans Carnival

MARMORA (ENS)—With Carl Heath presiding, directors of Marmora Agricultural Society met at the home of Reeve Irwin McCoy, Marmora township, on Thursday evening.

Names of those intending to join the grain club were submitted, the required number being reached. Names of those intending to join the calf club were also taken and it is hoped that the further three or four more required will contact the secretary-treasurer, Thomas J. Bateman.

Carl Heath, Thomas Bateman and Louis Hulsmans were appointed to inspect the track, attend to necessary surfacing and arrange for fencing.

Discussion took place regarding the annual street dance. The directors will probably substitute a carnival and dance in the arena.

Conveners of the sub-committees were urged to submit their portions of the prize list. The question of the evening horse show was further considered and will be dealt with at the next meeting at the home of the president, Carl Heath, May 28.

Mrs. Irwin McCoy, assisted by Mrs. C. Lajoie and Mrs. M. McFall, served lunch.

Politician Shot By Fanatic On Eve Of Vote

TUNIS, North Africa (Reuters)—A prominent Tunisian politician was assassinated by a fanatic gunman on the sidewalk here today on the eve of disputed municipal elections.

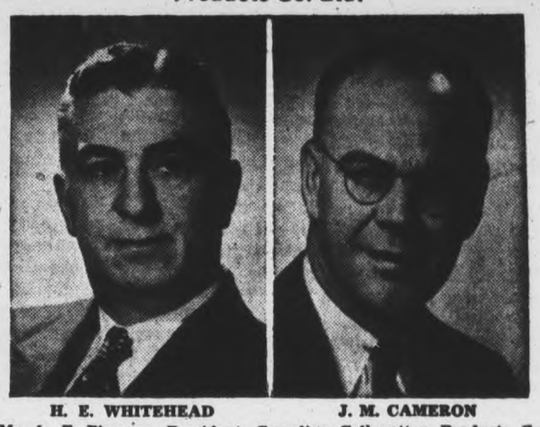
The killer, a young Tunisian, stepped up to Kastali on the sidewalk, fired two quick shots with a revolver and fled. Searchers lost his trail.

Kastali was up for re-election in Sunday's polling. The election has been condemned as "French-sponsored" by many nationalists campaigning for independence and an end to French colonial rule.

APPEAL AGAINST VOTE

The nationalists have appealed to the people not to vote and have sought to persuade candidates to withdraw.



About 40 per cent of the electorate abstained in recent district elections.

French authorities disclosed today that a burse of machine gun fire was fired Friday night at Ben Rais, minister of commerce in the pro-French government of Premier Baccouche, but Rais was not injured.

What Are Peterborough's Coronation Day Plans?

Exactly one month from today's date the Queen will be crowned, and there will be great rejoicing and celebration throughout the Commonwealth, except, in Peterborough, it now seems. Judging from the way plans are not being made in this city, and the excitement and preparations across the border, one would think that the Americans have more interest in the Coronation than Peterborough has.

* * *

A committee was set up weeks ago to prepare plans for Peterborough's celebration. There is a large committee, and a smaller subsection of it. Three aldermen are on the committee, one of them being its chairman. Two, or at most three, meetings have been held. That in itself is not an indication that plans are retarded. But the fact is that there is hardly the ghost of a plan.

* * *

As far as we have been able to find out, this is it. A community religious service is to be held on the Sunday evening. On the day itself—Tuesday— nothing at all is scheduled until the evening. Then a parade of some sort, with no objective in view, may be held up and down George Street. Thereupon fireworks will be set off at Little Lake. If the purpose of the parade is only to lead to the fireworks, we presume that it will not take place before ten o'clock at night and the fireworks around eleven. Remember, it is June and daylight saving time. That, citizens of Peterborough, is the sum total of the official celebration of the great occasion. Oh, yes, maybe the Utilities Commission will put up its Christmas lights—which would of course be seen and lit only an hour or two before midnight.

* * *

The Rev. H. G. Douglas, a member of the committee as head of the Ministerial Association, quietly deplores this lassitude and lack of plans. His letter is printed on this page today. Mr. Douglas suggests some reasons hindering an adequate celebration, and also presents some means of overcoming them. His point that there is nothing at all for children is especially pertinent.

* * *

Are we all republicans or Reds in Peterborough that such a miserable, meagre and half-hearted program is all that can be devised? Do we not admire the Queen? Do we not respect the Throne? Have we no regard for our great royal tradition, no pride in our Commonwealth association, no thankfulness for our British heritage, no gratitude that we live under an exemplary constitutional monarchy steadfast and devoted even to death? Is a matter of a day's wages lost or found greater than our joy, our traditions, our birthright? If the companies do not see their way clear to pay the whole cost of the holiday, surely the employees—citizens of Peterborough—and the union officials should seize the opportunity voluntarily to celebrate their loyalty?

* * *

This matter should not have impeded the Committee. Its lack of enthusiasm and plans suggests that it doubts the respect for the Throne of the citizens of Peterborough whom it is charged to represent. To date the Committee is remarkable only for its lethargy, its diddle-daddle and its lack of accomplishment. Other officials in town seem likewise ineffective in preparation. What, for instance, are the schools doing? This is not a matter to leave to each individual principal, as has been suggested. The Board of Education and the Superintendent of Schools should take it in hand in consultation with them.

* * *

The whole prospect of Peterborough's celebration—as far as it has taken shape—is a disgrace to the city's name and shaming to its citizens. The Canadian Government has, be it said, given desultory leadership. It has declared the day a Day of Thanksgiving, a sort of holiday but not a statutory holiday. And it is very possible that the industries, employees, merchants, clubs, schools and private people of Peterborough are themselves to blame for the Committee's failure. Without their support, enthusiasm and interest, the Committee can do little.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Five British admirals are practising horsemanship in preparation for their horseback appearance in the Coronation parade. We expect that the ship of state will not keel over even if they do topple off their equestrian bridges.

From No Power To Middle Power

Canada has a Department of External Affairs, not a Foreign Office. The name is odd, and like many other aspects of political Canada, was dictated by expedience. Forty years after Confederation, the Under Secretary of State, Joseph Pope, urged the desirability "of establishing a more systematic mode of dealing with what I may term for want of a better phrase, the external affairs of the Dominion". It was the first strong hint that Canada had any foreign affairs rightfully her own. When the Department of External Affairs was created two years later (1909), the name was chosen by Sir Wilfred Laurier so that the new Department should have responsibility for communications with other British imperial countries, as well as with countries truly foreign.

Up to that time Canada's external relations, such as they were, were conducted almost entirely by and through the British Colonial and Foreign Offices. As late as 1911 when Canada and other Dominions were given a glimpse of the workings of the British Foreign Office, Prime Minister Asquith made it clear that British diplomacy in Europe could not be shared by the Dominions. As late as 1921 Lloyd George claimed that there must be a single imperial foreign policy.

Canada had had a High Commissioner in London since 1880 and a Commissioner General in France since 1882, but neither had diplomatic status. Negotiations on trade and boundaries were conducted through the British Foreign Office. The Great War changed the British and foreign attitude to Canada's status. As F. H. Soward of the Department of External Affairs has recently written, "The great watershed in Canadian policy was World War 1. In France and Flanders, Canadian soldiers bought with their blood the title deeds to Canadian external autonomy". At the Imperial Conference in 1917 Sir Robert Borden claimed for Canada "an adequate voice in foreign policy". Canada secured separate representation at the Peace Conference and separate membership in the League of Nations.

In 1923 Canada signed its first international treaty (with the U.S. to regulate halibut fishing on the Pacific coast) without the usual counter-signature of the British Ambassador. In 1925 Canada established an office at Geneva and the League. In that year the distinguished Dr. O. D. Skelton left Queen's University to become Under Secretary of State for External Affairs, and thereupon began to lay the foundations of the Department which have served it well since.

In 1927 the first Canadian legation was established abroad; the Rt. Hon. Vincent Massey was first Minister to Washington. In that year, too, the Governor-General in each Dominion became recognized as only the personal representative of the King. Henceforth the Dominions carried out their business with each other and the U.K. through direct governmental representatives, and in 1928 the first United Kingdom High Commissioner arrived in Ottawa.

The establishment of legations and embassies abroad was delayed in the Depression years, after the establishment of a legation in Paris (1928), and in Tokyo (1929). In 1939 one legation was opened to serve Belgium and Holland. Thus, when war broke out, Canada has only four legations abroad, not one of the status of an embassy, and one High Commissioner.

As the first war had given Canada a recognized international status, so the second World War created it a Middle Power. At the close of the war Canada ranked third among the Allies in naval strength, fourth in air power. Alone among the Allies Canada had not required lend-lease aid from the U.S. Instead, Canada contributed almost two and a quarter billion dollars of Mutual Aid, and during and after the war advanced export credits ($600,000,000) to many countries and a loan of one and a quarter billion dollars to Britain. Canada was the third largest contributor to UNRRA. Says Mr. Soward: "Because of these achievements and the constructive policies of its representatives at the numerous international conferences at the close of the War and thereafter, Canada came to be regarded as a 'Middle Power' ".

Since the war Canada's hand has been in hundreds of international pots. Until 1946 this country had no full-time Secretary of State for External Affairs. The Prime Minister (Mr. King) had himself been the Minister and ran the Department as a personal sideline. In 1946 Mr. King appointed Mr. St. Laurent Minister of External Affairs, and just before Mr. St. Laurent became Prime Minister, Mr. Pearson was named to the office.

Now Canada has High Commissioners to every Commonwealth country, full Embassies in twenty-one foreign countries and legations in nine. The Department has some 250 foreign-service officers, including heads of Missions. The Department's budget is thirty-eight million dollars a year. Middle Power? Even Britain in her heyday never had as many ambassadors and ministers. Foreign affairs have of course multiplied as the One World has come closer while spreading out. Yet one may ask if the time has not come for the Department of External Affairs to control its self-propagation and stay its spending? We are, it seems, to build a million dollar embassy in Rome. We have a Minister to Iceland. Is the next step an Ambassador to St. Pierre and Miquelon?

The Journal of Samuel Marchbanks

SUNDAY: The Coronation haunts me. Not, I must at once make clear, that my own mind dwells lovingly upon the significance of the ceremony; no, no, it is the intense preoccupation of other people with the Coronation which keeps it before my eyes and ringing in my ears. Passed a group of children today who were hot and loud in argument as to whether the affair was properly called The Carnation or The Crownation; tears were being shed and blows were imminent, so I hurried on to the home of a friend, where a hot discussion raged as to the propriety of the Queen being anointed on the breast. I was drawn into this, and took the line that if one had to be anointed at all, it would be best done in areas which are easily washed rather than on the head, where even consecrated oil is likely to wreak havoc with the hair-do. I suppose that as a New Elizabethan I ought to be more concerned with these matters, and I promise to be so when the Coronation is actually at hand.

❖ ❖ ❖

MONDAY: There ought to be a law that everybody should read a letter three times before posting it, and that every recipient of a letter should read it three times before discussing it or replying to it. Such a law would quell at least one-third of the anxiety and ill-feeling which agitates the bosoms of my fellow-countrymen, and more particularly of my countrywomen. Today a woman I know wailed in the most heart-rending manner about the condition of a beloved child from whom she had received a letter. Everything in the girl's life, it seemed, was amiss and a ghastly fate awaited her. But I persuaded my friend to read the letter aloud to me, and it proved to be a perfectly harmless message, containing no more fodder for parental dismay than the annual report of a bank. I have known this to happen again and again with scores of people; they read letters hastily, while eating or working; they misunderstand them; they fly into tizzies; but they never take the elementary step of reading the letter again. It is the same with newspapers; if they are not read carefully, they are sure to be misunderstood, and rumors begin which are as fantastic as anything to be found in the horror comics. Be a triple-reader and enjoy life!

❖ ❖ ❖

TUESDAY: I expect shortly to make a brief venture over the U.S. border, and I hope that I can get through the U.S. Immigration without arousing suspicion. Was talking today to a friend who had recently been to the States, and at the border was asked what her employment was. She said she was an employee of the National Liberal Federation, and was much surprised to find that she was an object of the most intense suspicion, and was detained for special questioning. The word Liberal, in Canada means, of course, glorious, democratic, noble-minded and utterly loveable; unless, of course, you happen to be of the school of thought which thinks that it means infamous, totalitarian, sneakingly dishonest and vile. It is simply the label of a political party. The one thing it does not mean is subversive. But in the Land of the Free the word "liberal" means something very different; it means that one thinks that the present government of the U.S. is susceptible of improvement, which is, of course, heresy, inspired by Moscow. It is my misfortune that when questioned by any sort of official I become flustered, and look like a spy in the funny papers. Will it be best to declare myself leader of the Conservative Party?

❖ ❖ ❖

WEDNESDAY: Was reminded of that mighty diarist Samuel Pepys this evening as I looked at a manual of surgery, published in 1753. It contained full, and hair-raising instructions for the operation of Lithotomy, or Cutting for the Stone. I believe that this is commonplace now, but in Pepys' time it was a fearsome ordeal, chiefly because it had to be done without anaesthetic. The illustration showed the surgeon, handsome in wig and ruffles, working on a poor wretch who was being held down by a couple of assistants, with an instrument something like a shoe-horn. Pepys used to carry his Stone around in a leather case, for which he paid 25 shillings, to show it to his friends and boast of his operation.

❖ ❖ ❖

THURSDAY: Shakespeare's birthday, today, and I always celebrate this festival as appropriately as I can; this year nothing more striking than a visit to the movies was possible, so I chose a film which promised to deal heavily in adventure. After many years as a movie-goer I know what I like, and what I think the movies do best. I avoid what Hollywood thinks are sophisticated comedies, for the sophistication is rarely above junior High School level. I avoid all movies in which aeroplanes play a large part. I avoid anything which verges on modern history, for I know some history and I cannot believe that every great event in the story of mankind was rooted in the desire of a male boob to mate with a female ditto. But I like adventure films, and I have a boundless appetite for Epics — particularly those dealing with Ancient Rome, or the Bible Period in which history is romantically scrambled. The picture tonight was plentifully stocked with Indians, and movie-Indians are a weakness of mine. I am sure that Shakespeare would have enjoyed this film, even if he had suffered from some feeling that he could have touched up the dialogue.

❖ ❖ ❖

FRIDAY: I have for many years cherished an unfashionable admiration for that unpopular man Prince Albert, Victoria's Prince Consort. Not only did he devise the Prince Albert coat, which was one of the best garments of modern times for style and comfort, but he had several other good ideas. He was, for instance, a founder and patron of The Society for Improving the Dwellings of the Industrial Classes; he thought that it was a shame that a lot of people lived in poky, dark, nasty little houses, and he tried to do something about it. Albert, thou shouldst be living at this hours! Not only the Industrial Classes but virtually everybody nowadays who builds a house or buys one built during the last twenty-five years, is living in a house which, though it may not be dark, is unquestionably poky. Perhaps never, since the era of the Mud Hut, has domestic architectural design been at a lower level, or building costs at a higher one. The more civilized we become, the smaller our houses are. They may be convenient in some ways, but they are too small to live in without sitting in everybody else's lap and getting in everyone else's hair. And why should space be so dear in a country as big as this?

❖ ❖ ❖

SATURDAY: Greatly relieved that the Dominion Government does not mean to make teacup-reading a punishable offence. I have been a teacup reader for some time. A group of children of my acquaintance get tea only once a week, on Sunday evening, and they invariably ask me to read their cups. This I do, on a somewhat sneaky principle, foreseeing treats which I know about and they don't; predicting success in school tests of one sort and another; prognosticating dire reprisals if they do not amend certain bad habits. Nor is my practice entirely on this humble level. I once told fortune for charity at a church bazaar, and did a roaring trade. The things a good fortune-teller must always bear in mind are: (1) everybody is worried about a boy, a girl or a child, according to age; (2) everybody is short of money, regardless of income, and likes to be told that they will find money worries decreasing as they grow older, which is likely to prove true; (3) a stroke of good fortune is likely to come to everybody within three months, and may confidently be predicted; (4) nobody believes utterly in fortune-tellers, and very few people utterly disbelieve in them.

An American Opinion: KEY TO THE SHACKLES

Trapping Wild Animals

(By A Special Correspondent In London)

A COLOUR FILM of the trapping of rabbits in Scotland and of martens, beavers and other fur-bearing creatures in Canada, which was shown privately in London at Pathe House this week, assuredly deserves wide publicity.

It has already been exhibited in departments of the Federal Governments of Canada and the United States, which are increasingly interested in the welfare and preservation of their wild animals. There are many people in Britain who would be no less interested in seeing the film.

Running for thirty-five minutes and admirably photographed, it shows, against a background of the beauties of the Scottish and Canadian wilds, the terrible cruelty inflicted by the gin-trap and similar devices on their victims.

A rabbit, a marten or a beaver may live trapped by the paw for several days. A coyote — the Canadian prairie wolf — has been known to live for two weeks thus trapped. Some of the pictures of the struggling creatures are almost unbearable. Sometimes an animals frees itself by wrenching its paw right off. The film includes a shot of a skunk hobbling away on three legs, and more than one of a sprung trap with only a paw between its teeth. There was one picture of a great snowy owl which had somehow got trapped.

Dr. R. H. Little, of Dundee, who took the film, was originally a civil engineer, then became a surgeon, and served as a surgeon first in the Antarctic whaling fleet in 1946-7, and later with the seal-hunters of Newfoundland and Labrador. The film he then took is being used by the Canadian Federal Department of Fisheries in its efforts to secure international control of sealing.

The electric harpoon promises before long to put an end to the cruelty of the explosive harpoon in whaling. But while the gin trap has been denounced again and again, its abolition is still delayed, although two traps have been invented and thoroughly tested — the Sawyer and the Imbra — which can be depended on to kill instantly by striking the animal across the neck.

One hopeful sign, Dr. Little said, is that the Canadian Government more and more realizes that Canada cannot afford, for practical as well as sentimental reasons, the extermination of her wild animals, which have been relentlessly hunted now for three hundred years.

Sale of "Royal Charger"

(Ireland Bulletin)

Royal Charger, outstanding Irish sire owned by the National Stud at Tully, Co. Kildare, has been sold to Mr. Louis B. Mayer, the film magnate, for $300,000 (£107,000). Royal Charger is by Nearco (the sire of the Derby winners Dante, Nimbus and Nasrullah) out of Sun Princess, who is by the champion brood-mare sire Solario out of Mumtaz Begum, herself the dam of Nasrullah. Royal Charger is, therefore, a three parts brother to Nasrullah who was sold to an American syndicate in December, 1949, for $372,000, then a record price for a horse out of Ireland.

Outstanding among the progeny got by Royal Charger since he went to stud at Tully have been Royal Serenade, winner as a two-year-old in England of five races valued at £3,769, and Royal Duchy, winner of the coveted Phoenix Plate at Phoenix Park last season, and the two two-year-olds who carried the President of Ireland's colours with distinction last year—Banri an Oir and Banri Calma.

The winner of the National Produce Stakes at the Curragh last year, Sea Charger, was also by Royal Charger and other outstanding horses got by him were Sheila's Cabin, Happy Laughter, Queen's Flight and Lady Godiva.

Royal Charger's sire, Nearco, was also the sire of Neocracy, dam of Tulyar, which in February last, was purchased by the National Stud from the Aga Khan for £250,000. (See Bulletin No. 174.)

Bible Message

(From the Authorized Version)

Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers: for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? and what communion hath light with darkness? . . . Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing: and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty. (II Cor 6:14, 17, 18.)

Having, therefore, these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God . . For though I made you sorry with a letter, I do not repent, though I did repent: for I perceive that the same epistle hath made you sorry, though it were but for a season.

Now I rejoice, not that ye were made sorry, but that ye sorrowed to repentance: for ye were made sorry after a godly manner, that ye might receive damage by us in nothing. For godly sorrow worketh repentance to salvation not to be repented of. (II Cor. 7:1, 8, 10.)

And all things are of God who hath reconciled us to himself by Jesus Christ, and hath given to us the ministry of reconciliation. (II Cor. 5:18.)

Letter To The Editor

WHAT CELEBRATIONS?

Sir: In a few weeks' time we shall be celebrating the Coronation of Queen Elizabeth the Second. For millions throughout the British Empire, this will be the only coronation which they will remember, since our Queen is a young woman. In view of the significance of this important event, we should make this time one of joyous remembrance.

June the second has been appointed as a day of thanksgiving and rejoicing; but up to date, not a statutory holiday. What does this mean? Simply, that industry would have to pay the worker if industry shuts down for the day, and if not, the worker must lose a day's wage if he takes the day off. I do not know what the solution is, but I could suggest a compromise. If June the second is not to be a statutory holiday, could there not be proclaimed a half-day holiday with both Labour and Industry sharing the cost of lost wages? Surely there is much more to our national life than money and profits!

Another thing which gives me concern is the fact that there seems lacking an enthusiasm for children's celebrations on this day. The children should be given consideration so that they will ever remember June the second, nineteen hundred and fifty-three.

What are Peterborough's plans for the Coronation celebrations? In brief outline, all I have knowledge of is the following: First, a community religious service on Sunday evening preceding the coronation, a parade on June the second, in the evening, probably a brief ceremony at the Exhibition Park, and a fireworks display to climax the day.

Where are the children's celebrations? Can there not be some sports or special programs for the boys and girls for part of Tuesday afternoon? Could there not be some historical parade for children, or tree-planting?

My purpose in writing is to try to arouse public interest and enthusiasm for coronation celebrations before it is too late to do anything worthwhile. Wake up, Mr. Peterborough citizen, and give your coronation committee some direction and enthusiasm and vision for June the second.

Sincerely yours,

(REV.) HENRY G. DOUGLAS.

How Fare The Kawartha Counties? Here Is Their Story

The Ontario Bureau of Statistics and Research, which is directed by H. J. Chater, provincial statistician, has made a survey of the Kawartha Lakes region. This analysis of the area's economic development, special features and present industrial and agricultural condition, is such an informative and interesting summary that The Examiner has secured permission to reprint the entire article. Here today is the first instalment; it will be completed on this page next week. Our readers may wish to clip the article for future reference. It appeared first in the current issue of the bureau's monthly "Economic Record," published this week.

INTRODUCTION

The Kawartha Lakes Region of Ontario consists of the counties of Ontario, Victoria, Durham, Peterborough and Northumberland bordering on the north shore of Lake Ontario and extending northwards into the Canadian Shield area of the Province. This Region corresponds very closely to the drainage area served by the Trent, the largest river on the north shore of Lake Ontario.

The first white man to visit the Kawartha Lakes Region was Samuel de Champlain who, in September 1615, accompanied a war party of Huron Indians on a foray against the Iroquois To reach the Iroquois country south of Lake Ontario, the party travelled across the Region from north to south, following more or less the route of the present Trent Valley Canal System. In December, Champlain and the defeated Hurons returned and, moving slowly homeward on snowshoes, again traversed the Region, this time from south to north.

Although a few small trading outposts in Indian villages on the north shore of Lake Ontario were supported by Montreal and Quebec merchants, the French made no attempt to colonize the region. The posts were established to intercept Indians bound for Oswego or Albany with furs brought down from the northern hunting grounds. When their usefulness ended at the time of the Conquest they were abandoned. The fact that in 1794 Benjamin Wilson moved with his family into the log cabin which had been built as a rench trading post at the mouth of Oshawa Creek would indicate that these structures were substantially built. The one the Wilsons found standing on their U.E.L. grant had been deserted for more than thirty years.

PT. HOPE 1778

The first permanent settlement in the region was at Port Hope, where a flourishing trading post was in existence as early as 1778. In 1784 the land fronting on the lake between Toronto and Trenton was purchased from the Indians to be parcelled out principally to United Empire Loyalists. This tract proved adequate for incoming settlers until after the war of 1812, when more land was required to accommodate the flood of immigrants from the British Isles.

At Port Hope, in 1818, the Mississaugas sold the Crown a block of 4,000 square miles, comprising Victoria, Peterborough and parts of adjoining counties in return for a perpetual annuity of £740—in goods.

The majority of settlers bound for newly-opened district tramped overland from Port Hope or Cobourg to Rice Lake which they crossed on barges. Those who could afford it, however, preferred to travel as far as York by steamer before disembarking. From there they journeyed north, along Yonge St. to Beaverton, where they turned eastward into the wilderness. The best known of the early mass immigrations into the district occurred in 1825 when Hon. Peter Robinson brought out 2,000 Irish settlers from the neighbourhood of Cork, to Peterborough and Victoria Counties.

At the same time that mass immigration to the area was being subsidized by the British Government and private philanthropists, a number of individuals, officers on half-pay and members of the leisure class, tempted by romatic accounts of life in the wilderness took-up land in the district. Two members of this group, Mrs. Susannah Moodie and Mrs. Catharine Parr Traill have made permanent contributions to Canadian culture.

TRENT CANAL

Apart from the beautiful Kawartha Lakes, the great tourist attraction of the Region is the Trent Valley Canal, some two hundred and seventy-five miles in length, with locks at Peterborough which lift and lower boats a distance of sixty-five feet.

Work on the Trent Valley Canal was begun in 1833 and by 1843 locks had been built at Bobcaygeon and Lindsay. Ten years later, two steamers, the "Woodman" of Port Perry and the "Omegah" of Fenelon Falls, were carrying lumber to Port Perry on Lake Scugog, from whence it was hauled overland, by team, to Whitby. If work on the project had been carried on consistently the canal might have proven useful during the days when lumbering was an important local industry, although the forty-four locks, varying in width from twenty-five to thirty-three feet, have a depth of only four to six feet and the System is open for navigation only 175 days a year. However, long before the Canal was finished, other and more modern transportation facilities had been developed to serve the district and the lumbering industry had passed on.

The Kawartha Lakes Region is one of the largest in southern Ontario with an area of almost 5,000 square miles. Its population of 238,601, however, constitutes only 5.2% of the provincial total. Population density varies from 20 persons per square mile in Victoria to 102 in Ontario county. The latter county accounts for over one-third of the total regional population. Over the period 1941-1951, the population of the Region increased by 22.3% or slightly more than the provincial average. Ontario county made the greatest advance (32.5%) while Victoria showed an increment of only 4.6% over the period.

POPULATION

The inhabitants of this Region are overwhelmingly of British origin the proportion varying from 81% in Ontario county to 93% in Victoria. Other groups include French, Dutch and Ukrainian (Ontario). While the population of the Region is only slightly more urban than rural, the former sector is increasing at a much faster rate (35% as compared with 8.5%). The proportion of the population which is rural varies from 60.2% in Durham to 32.4% in Peterborough.

Within the Region are eight centres with populations in excess of 3,000 including two cities: Oshawa (41,545 and Peterborough (38,272). The latter two urban centres showed intercensal population increases of 55% and 51%, respectively, the largest jumps of any cities in Ontario, except Sarnia.

AGRICULTURE

The sale of agricultural products is an important source of income in the Kawartha Lakes Region. Farms supply food for the expanding urban areas, particularly milk and meat which are marketed in Oshawa and Peterborough, and in Toronto. The net farm income in the Region in 1949 was $39.1 million, fourth highest in the Province. The high rank of total net farm income results from the large area of cleared farm land—the Region is the second largest in the Province with 2,468 square miles—rather than from the use of intensive farming techniques. In the main, farming may be described as general, excluding a narrow strip of land parallel to the shore of Lake Ontario where vegetables, fruit and some field crops are cultivated as cash crops. The net income per occupied farm, $3,073 in 1949, is close to, but slightly higher than, the provincial average.

The proportion of the labour force engaged in agriculture in the Region varies, depending on the rural-urban distribution of the population. Of the three predominantly rural counties, the proportion is highest in Northumberland (33%), followed by Victoria (29%) and Durham 26%). In these areas it appears that agriculture contributes a greater proportion of the net income than manufacturing, but this is not typical of the Region as a whole.

IROQUOIS PLAIN

The topography and the soil of the Kawartha Lakes Region follow a pattern of bands roughly parallel to Lake Ontario. The southern section comprises the Iroquois Plain and the slopes approaching the height of land. Numerous small streams, emptying in Lake Ontario, drain the area. The Iroquois Plain, at one time part of the bottom of an ancient lake of the same name, contains excellent clay and sand soils, built at the deltas of rivers draining into the lake. The proximity of Lake Ontario exerts a moderating influence on the climate, and this has permitted the cultivation of fruit and vegetables which require a long growing season. The railroads and highways provide a rapid means for marketing the produce, essential for perishable goods. Vegetables and field crops are grown chiefly on clay soils, while fruit is cultivated in the sandy sections.

The area north of the watershed is drained by the Trent River and the Kawartha Lakes. The topography of the land is characterized by "drumlins" or hog-back hills and rolling country. The soils vary, but in general it may be described as clay loam. Stones in the soil are not uncommon in some sections, and this feature has tended to favour livestock farming. The hilly terrain, and the lack of adequate precipitation during the summer months, often resulting in droughts, have underscored the need for soil conservation, and this in turn depends in part on livestock to maintain the organic content of the soil. While the land is well drained for the most part, the valleys are commonly swampland.

PRECAMBRIAN

There are patches of good soil in the areas that fringe the precambrian rock of the Canadian ham, is used chiefly for tree fruits, the value of which exceeded $266 thousand in 1951. A large cold storage plant for fruit has been opened at Newcastle. The sandy areas have been used for growing tobacco, especially in the Port Hope area, and in 1951 2,000 acres were planted. The value of the crop, however, was less than 2% of the provincial total.

STAPLES

Ontario, the richest and largest county in the Region, on the basis of net farm income and cleared land, is very much the same as Durham in topography and agriculture except that the northern part of the county extends into the Simcoe Lowlands. Cattle, over shield, but most of the land is too stoney for field crops and can be used only for grazing. Some of the area could be reforested to prevent erosion of the shallow soil and to retain water. Sheep and beef cattle are common, and the Region ranks second in the Province in the value of sheep raised, with $1.8 million in 1951, 15% of the provincial total.

The southern sections of Durham county are devoted to mixed farming, with an emphasis on dairy cattle. Swine and beef cattle are more numerous in the northern sections. Field crops include hay, mixed grains, oats and fall wheat, the first three of which are used principally as livestock feed. The Iroquois Plain section, about eight miles wide in Durham, is the most important source of income. Swine and sheep are important, particularly in the northern sections. The principal field crops are the staples: hay, mixed grains, oats, and fall wheat. Potatoes are grown as a cash crop, valued at $424 thousand in 1951. Small fruit and vegetable products grown along the shore plain exceeded $338 thousand in 1951, but were not as important in Ontario county as in Durham and Northumberland.

Peterborough county is bisected by the precambrian shield which precludes almost all profitable farming north of its boundry. The south-west half of the county is characterized by general farming, including cattle, swine and sheep raising, and field crops, chiefly hay, oats, and wheat. Fruit or vegetables are not grown to any extent. The terrain is rolling and hilly, usually well drained but subject to drought and erosion in the summer months.

The topography and soil of Victoria county correspond approximately to that of Peterborough county with hilly terrain and clay loam soils. In the other counties of the Region over 60% of the cattle are raised for dairy products, chiefly milk, but in Victoria, which lacks a large urban market, 65% of the cattle are raised for beef. Swine and sheep are also important livestock. Field crops include hay, mixed grains, and oats. Wheat is not grown as much as in the other four counties. Fruit and fresh vegetables are not grown as cash crops.

The land in Northumberland county is rough and scenic. It produces a variety of products. Cattle are raised chiefly for their milk which is marketed in the cities and towns along the shore of the lake. Orchards along the shore plain produce about half of the Region's fruit and vegetables. The value of tree fruit grown in Northumberland exceeded $436 thousand in 1951, but this was only 3.6% of the provincial total. Tobacco was grown on one farm in the sandy area of the county in 1951. Fall wheat, hay, and oats are important field crops, and some potatoes are grown as a cash crop.

Your Garden:

Planting, Care And Kinds Of Tomatoes For Your Plot

By HENRY PREE (NEA)

A gentle reminder to the vegetable gardener is that tomatoes, as always, will form the chief crop in the 1953 vegetable garden. The usual advice is that plants should be set out in the open ground about the middle of May.

Those who plan to grow their plants must sow seed early.

The accepted practice is to sow seed about ⅛-inch deep in a hotbed, or a greenhouse. or in a box near a sunny window of a room where the night temperature does not fall below 55 degrees. When the plants are about two inches high they may be thinned out to stand three inches apart and transplanted to four-inch pots or old berry boxes, and babied along until transplated to their permanent home in the garden.

The gardener is warned, however, not to transfer the plants from the heat of the house or hotbed to the garden without first gradually exposing them to the out of-doors. Tomato plants will not endure a sudden change in temperature.

Seed should be started in soil composed of equal parts of sand, humus and garden earth, all well mixed and screened. Use no fertilizer or manure in seed-starting soil. Sterilize the mixture by pouring boiling water over the flat or pot, use two quarts of boiling water for each quart of soil.

Allow to drain, sow seed sparingly, ⅛ inch deep and cover lightly with sand. Seed should be treated before planting with one of the protective compounds such as red copper oxide or spergon.

Care must be taken to prevent over- or underwatering of both seeds and seedlings. Constant soil moisture and air temperature is a must from the time the seed is sown until the young plants are hardening off.

The garden soil must be well prepared, a loose soil, in which humus and fertilizer have been incorporated, is ideal. Drainage, too, is essential. Soil on the acid side of the scale should have some coarse limestone mixed with the fertilizer and worked in prior to planting.

Staking of plants is recommended because it takes up less garden space and produces better fruit. A good rugged stake should be driven 15 inches into the ground. three inches from each plant.

The stake should be long enough to stand five feet above ground after being firmly placed. Drive stake into the soil before planting, not afterward. Stakes are set 2½ feet apart in rows three feet apart.

Staking tomato plants means better fruit and more room for other vegetables.

Recommended varieties — Rutgers, Marglobe, Victor (early), Pritchard, Jubilee (orange-yellow) and Valient, a very early variety. Victor does not require staking. For those who want to try a new variety, the following are suggested: Longred, Van Cross, new F2 Hybrid; Queens, remarkably large, solid fruit.

Put a paper collar around the plants to protect them from cutworms.

More on staking and culture in a later article.

Gardening Questions

Q—Is there any advantage to be gained from spraying fruit trees during the winter?

Q—A local nurseryman advertises that all his plants are guaranteed to contain chlorophyll. Is this correct?

A—Yes. Chlorophyll is the green coloring matter in leaves, a complex chemical which, acting as a catalyst, enables a plant to take carbon dioxide and water from the air and soil and, in the presence of light, form glucose. From this glucose and the soil minerals, all other organic compounds are manufactured.

Q—The absence of cold and snow this winter has suggested that spading the vegetable garden now would be sensible? What is your recommendation?

A—The sooner this chore is done the better—however do not dig when soil is wet, as this will puddle it. A good test is to turn over a spade or fork full and give it a whack. If it breaks apart readily it is in condition to dig.

A·F·I·E·L·D with NICK NICKELS

Trout fishermen got their innings on Friday morning and a more unpromising opening day there never was. Streams refilled to the banks after recent rains; cool weather that has made the hatching of natural flies impossible; east wind and rain.

Being so close to the weekend, however, the majority of fishermen had already planned to do their opening-season fishing today and on Sunday. At least those who planned to get away to Haliburton, North Hastings, the Land o' Lakes and Algonquin Park left home Friday night and, regardless of weather, might find some luck in those distant spots.

District reports were few and far between at the time of writing. Jim English and Clayton Selkirk took eight speckles "out Emily way" and were quite pleased with an otherwise uncomfortable morning. Rigging their gear by the glow of the car's headlights will give you some idea of how early they were up and doing.

My Bewdley spy said there were a few carloads of fishermen at the Bannister and Mercer Ponds and Manley Creek. They didn't return via the village and there were no reports of their luck.

Down Cobourg way Scotty Grieves said the situation was about the same. Few were out on the popular streams east of town. The famous Rainbow stream, Shelter Valley, is posted both north and south of Highway 2; you will have to get permission from property owners before fishing in those parts but I do not think they are asking a rod fee.

Trout fishermen who didn't go out on opening day could at least lick their chops over the smashing picture of Globe and Mailster's Jack Dobson, a trout rising to a lure. It took a lot of patience and ingenuity for Jack to get the shot but he came up with a masterpiece.

A car with New York license plates was seen tooling along country sideroads on Friday morning. The fishing fame of the Kawarthas from May 1 to Oct. 15 is getting around.

While waiting for field reports to come trickling in I lounged by the open fireplace with the phone off the hook and immersed myself in Izaak Walton's COMPLEAT ANGLER; the text from my copy is from its fifth edition in 1676.

But First, For the Wind

'You are to take notice that of the winds the south wind is said to be best. One observes
. . . . when the wind is south,
It blows your bait into a fish's mouth.

'Next to that, the west wind is believed to be best; and having told you that the east wind is the worst I need not tell you which wind is best in the third degree; and yet (as Solomon observes), that "he that considers the wind shall never sow."'

Walton On Worm Fishing

'For the trout, the dew worm is the chief, especially for a great trout . . . because they are the toughest and most lively and live longest in the water: for you are to know that a dead worm is but a dead bait and like to catch nothing.

'And you may take notice, some say that camphor put into your bag with your moss and worms gives then a strong and so tempting a smell that the fish fare the worse and you the better for it.'

Twelve Several Flies

'It is said by many that in fly fishing for a trout the angler must observe his twelve several flies for the twelve months of the year. I say he that follows that rule shall be sure to catch fish and be as wise as he that makes hay by the fair days in an almanac, and no surer; but for this generality, three or four flies, neat and rightly made and not too big, serve for a trout in most rivers.'

Same Old (1676) Line

'First, let your rod be light, and very gentle; I take the best to be of two pieces: and let not your line exceed (especially for three of four links next to the hook), I say, not exceed three or four hairs at the most, though you may fish a little stronger above, in the upper part of your line.

'Now you must be sure not to cumber yourself with too long a line as most do. And before you begin to angle, cast to have the wind on your back; and the sun, if it shines, to be before you; and to fish down the stream; and to carry the point or top of your rod downward, by which means, the shadow of yourself and rod too will be least offensive to the fish; for the sight of any shade amazes the fish and spoils your sport.'

The Beauty Of It All

'And lastly, I am to tell you that the trout at their first taking out of the water, their bodies adorned with such red spots, as give them such an addition of natural beauty, as I think was never given to any woman by the artificial paint or patches in which they so much pride themselves in this age.

'I shall stay with you no longer than to wish you a rainy evening to read this discourse; and that (if he be an honest angler) the east wind may never blow when he goes fishing.'

Due to a shortage in manufacturer's supply the prizes for the 1952 fishing contest have just arrived this week. Most winners have already showed up once and graciously agreed to come back again when they knew of our delay. So, come and get them, you lucky people, and thanks for waiting.

SPORTS SHOW WINDOW

By CEC. PERDUE, Sports Editor

The Woodbine opens up in May, so wives should padlock hubby's pay, 'cause win or place or even show — that is where much dough will go. Yes, indeed, they're off and running at Woodbine on May 22 in a meet which goes till July 1. The runners shift then to Fort Erie from July 3 to Aug. 12. A break then till Sept. 5 when they're back at Toronto's Woodbine oval until Sept. 29. Big event, of course, is the Queen's Plate on Coronation Day, June 2, and the top-hatted, striped-trousered gentry will be out in force for that occasion. The Racing Form is a literary "must" for a sizeable section of our populace in the good old summer time.

There'll be races in May here, too, but not by horses. We refer to the third annual Peterborough and district high school track and field meet in Morrow Park on May 18 in the aft. Under the joint sponsorship of the Jaycees and the Recreation Commish. Age groups are: Senior, under 20 by Sept. 1 of 1952; intermediate, under 17; junior, under 15. Contestants may enter in only one age group, except for relays in a higher grouping. Meet is for boys and girls and the events include the various dashes and runs up to a mile, different sorts of jumps, shot put, discus, javelin, softball throw, and so on. Two entries only from each school allowed for each event, while senior and intermediate boys cannot enter more than five. All entries in to Alex Sinclair at city hall by May 13.

Beat the Golf Champ

Royal Canadian Golf Association has named May 23 as national golf day for a sort of unique golfing event. All golfers in North America are asked to enter into remote competition with Julius Boros, U.S. open champion, who plays a round that day in Pittsburgh. All golfers who that day, with handicap, better the score made by Boros receive a medal stating they beat the champ. It's just for fun, but there's a fee of a buck and in Canada 50 per cent of all entry fees go to the Red Cross, the remainder being divided between the RCGA and the CPGA (pros) to further junior development golf programs in the provincial associations. Club officials will have the necessary info.

Annual meeting of the Provincial Women's Softball Union is Sunday in Toronto. Dot Millar of this city is treasurer of the Union. Which reminds us that the local lasses' league will re-organize next week, and every city or district club interested should be represented and ready to proceed. Play should begin in about three weeks, so it's high time the girls were lining up their teams and getting in shape — diamond shape, that is. Whether or not the loop again affiliates with the PSWU remains to be seen. President Bill Flint will announce the date of this important meeting the first of the week at the latest.

Cant' Beat the Hours

Did you notice that story yesterday dealing with Ted Reeve, Toronto columnist who has been 25 years on the job? One item interested us particularly, where Ted types about 1,000 words a day between nine and 10 a.m., and then he's through to poke around, visiting folks, drop in and observe (not cover) a game at night, and so forth. Golly, what a soft touch. Only 1,000 words a day and no typing after 10 in the morning. Strikes us that a lot of hard-working sports scribes could write a pretty entertaining daily column, too, if they had nothing else to do. However, this unique position is enjoyed by the Moaner because of his unquestioned ability as well as his grand sense of humor.

Scheduled Eastern League soccer match between Concordia and the local Merchants here this afternoon was postponed, due to the heavy dew. Instead, an exhibition tilt was arranged for 2.30 today in King Edward Park between two Peterborough teams, the Scots and the Merchants. Picton Gunners have a league fray with UEW in Morrow Park on Monday eve, but we haven't heard what time it starts. A soccer meeting will be held at eight p.m. Tuesday in the YMCA of the commission, local club representatives and Port Hope officials. Latter team is expected in the city circuit which will be organized at this Tuesday huddle.

Barrie Trips St. Boniface For Third Win

By AL VICKERY

WINNIPEG (CP)—Barrie Flyers are within one game of giving Eastern Canada its third successive sweep in the Canadian junior hockey final.

Hap Emms' Flyers Friday night downed St. Boniface Canadiens 7-5 for their third straight win in the best-of-seven series for the Memorial Cup, and the Flyers, who won the first two games 6-4 and 6-3, are odds on favorites to make it four in a row here Monday night.

If Barrie does take Monday's contest, it will match the 1952 performance of Guelph Biltmores and the 1951 Barrie aggregation. The Biltmores sidelined Regina Pats in straight games last year. Barrie set Winnipeg Monarchs down without a win in 1951.

PUT UP GOOD FIGHT

St. Boniface put up a game fight in the third contest, but every time they got within striking distance, the Flyers appeared to use little effort in regaining or strengthening their lead.

Barrie took a 1-0 lead in the first period and skated off with a 4-2 lead at the end of the second.

The Manitoba club climbed to within a goal of Barrie at 9:45 in the final session on a sustained attack, but once again Emms' well-oiled machine struck back just six seconds later to take a 7-5 lead, which they maintained until the final whistle.

After the game, coach Bryan Hextall blamed the officiating for at least three of the Barrie goals, due to uncalled off-sides or icing.

BETTER FINISH

However, neutral observers were inclined to credit Barrie's margin to better finish around the opponent's net. As in previous games in the rugged series, Canadiens failed to crack through for goals when they held one- and even two-man advantages.

Emms didn't say much, other than that he was happy, his club had come through, but he appeared convinced the Flyers would back up his earlier prediction of a four-straight series for the eastern champions.

Captain Don McKenney raised the count to 2-0 early in the second period. Canadiens roared back to even the count when Garry Blaine scored his first of two goals. Then Abbie McDonald counted on a pass from linemate Lee Konyk.

CHEERING SHORT-LIVED

The loud cheering of the 5,000 fans was short-lived, however, for McKenney notched his second counter to shove Flyers in front again 19 seconds later. Smooth-skating Orval Tessier restored the two goal margin for Barrie before the second period ended.

Tessier bulged the score to 5-2 after 45 seconds of the third period. McDonald tallied for Canadiens, then Johnny Martan for Barrie. St. Boniface's Blaine and Len Thornson cut the lead to one goal, but Tony Poeta broke their hearts with another Barrie counter within six seconds.

Canadiens carried the play for the rest of the way, but were beaten by their own lack of finish or the smart goaltending of Marve Edwards until the final whistle.

Arsenal Wins English Soccer Crown

LONDON (Reuters) — London's favored Arsenal defeated Burnley 3-2 Friday to win the English League Division I soccer championship with a superior goal average.

Arsenal finished the season with 54 points—the same as Preston North End. But Arsenal scored 97 goals to 64 against, compared with Preston's 85 to 60.

In the Second Division, Huddersfield Town defeated Plymouth Argyle 4-0 to make sure of accompanying Sheffield United in promotion to the First Division next season. They change places with Stoke City and Derby County.

Bristol Rovers lost 1-0 to Crystal Palace but finished at the head of the Southern Section of Division III with 64 points. The Rovers will compete in the Second Division with Oldham Athletic, northern section leader, next fall.

Southampton and Barnsley will be relegated to the third division.

KANSAS CITY, Kas. (AP)—Jack Kramer extended his pro tennis tour lead over Frank Sedgman to 44-32 Friday night with a 6-3, 6-4 victory.

Chicago Pair Fined $100

CHICAGO (AP)—Manager Paul Richards and outfielder Minnie Minoso of Chicago White Sox each were fined $100 Friday by the American League president, Will Harridge for unseemly conduct during Thursday's game which the Sox lost to New York Yankees 6-1.

The fines were announced after a conference at the league office attended by Richards, general manager Frank Lane and president Charles Comiskey of the White Sox, and umpires Jim Duffy, Bill Grieve, Art Passerella and Larry Napp.

Harridge said both men might have been suspended for three days for using bad language under a new league rule.

Minoso and Richards had protested umpire Duffy's ruling that Yankee Mickey Mantle's long hit which bounced off the bleacher wall had been interfered with by a fan and was a home run.

Happy Laughter Wins UK Classic

Happy Laughter, a 10 to 1 outsider, finished two lengths ahead of her stablemate, Tessa Gillian. Third was the favorite, Bebe Grande, who ran second in the Two Thousand Guineas two days ago.

The one-two finish brought trainer Jack Jarvis his third One Thousand Guineas victory. His two previous successes were in 1924 and 1934. The winner is by Royal Charger out of Bray Melody

Penticton Badly Crippled By Team's Many Injuries

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP)—Penticton V's, crippled with injuries as they prepared for the third game of the Allan Cup finals against Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen tonight, have been fitted with a sturdy crutch.

Bobby Gillson, netminder for Owen Sound Mercurys of the Ontario Hockey Association senior A series, will be in the nets, replacing regular goalie Ivan McClelland, sidelined from the best-of-seven Canadian senior hockey final with an injured right hand.

Penticton coach Bill Carse announced late Friday night that W. A. (Baldy) George, president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, had granted the V's permission to use Gillson.

This will be the third time that the starry Owen Sounder has faced the Dutchmen in the playoffs this season. He was on duty when Kitchener knocked the Mercs out of the OHA final. Then he was called on by Sudbury Wolves to replace Lorne Anderson in the third game of the all-Ontario final. That series went the limit.

OTHER PROBLEMS

However, Gillson doesn't solve all Penticton's problems. Carse said right-winger Angelo Defelice is out for the remainder of the series with a severe charley horse in the right leg. He was taken to hospital Friday. Centre Jack McIntyre is suffering from a pulled leg muscle and was taking treatments in hospital.

"But he is loosening up a bit," Carse said. "Although his leg is still swollen, McIntyre feels himself that he'll be ready for tomorrow night."

Doug Kilburn will replace Defelice on the forward string.

CRUCIAL GAME

The Penticton coach said tonight's game will "make us or break us."

The western representatives trail 2-0 in the series. They lost the first game Tuesday 5-2 and the second Thursday 8-3.

The odds here are that the Dutchmen can take the series in four straight games. After Thursday night's game coach Bob Rafferty said his boys had played much better hockey during the season, but compared to the V's performances, they have the edge.

Rafferty isn't predicting the outcome. "One game at a time, boy, one game at a time," he smiled.

DO YOU OWN A CAR?
When the man who developed Bardahl Rad Conditioner brought his car to a garage for repairs, the garage owner phoned to ask him what on earth had he put in his radiator. He said that when they drained his radiator the water was so thick with dirt it would hardly pour. The Bardahl Rad Conditioner had removed rust, scale and dirt untouched by a popular brand chemical cleaner. The garage owner immediately placed an order for their own use. Since then hundreds of thousands of car owners in Canada and the United States have used Bardahl Rad Conditioner. If you own a car you should try it too . . . if your car is new it will keep your radiator in permanently new condition . . . if you have been running your car for a few years you'll be amazed at the dirt, rust and scale it will remove. Dodgers Win 4th Straight Upset Chicago In Tough 6-5 Uphill Battle

By BEN PHLEGAR, Associated Press Sports Writer

Brooklyn Dodgers are fattening up again on the second-division teams. The Brooks won the National League pennant last year by feasting on the last four clubs. Today, after a 10-day absence, they're back in first place. A strict diet of the lower-placed teams did it. The Dodgers won their fourth straight Friday night, a 6-5 uphill battle with the fifth-place Chicago Cubs. Prior to that they had won three straight from the last-place Cincinnati Redlegs. And of their earlier victories three came over the seventh-place New York Giants and three over the sixth-place Pittsburgh Pirates.

On their only ventures against first division opposition, the Dodgers got spanked three times running by Philadelphia Phillies.

REESE STAR

A year ago Brooklyn won 67 games and lost only 20 against the four second-division clubs. It had a poor 29-37 record with the three other first-division outfits.

Friday night's Brooklyn star was Peewee Reese who in the eighth inning drilled a dutch Leonard knuckleball into the lower leftfield seats at Ebbets Field with a runner on base.

Russ Meyer picked up the victory which, combined with a 5-2 loss by the Phillies to Milwaukee, put the Dodgers in first place.

In other National League action Pittsburgh Pirates won their third in a row—their longest winning streak in almost two years—at the expense of Cincinnati 8-3 and St. Louis Cardinals edged New York 3-2 in the only day game.

LEMON DEFEATED

Boston Red Sox pasted the first 1953 defeat on Cleveland's Bob Lemon 8-1. Lemon had won three. Detroit broke a six-game losing streak at the expense of Philadelphia 7-3. Washington nipped St. Louis 6-5 as relief pitcher Sonny Dixon struck out the last three Brownies with the bases loaded, and Chicago White Sox weathered a series of late New York rallies to beat the Yankees 6-5.

Boston's victory at Cleveland was the fourth in a row for the Sox and moved them into fourth place.

The Athletics poked three of Ned Garver's flutterballs into the seats but each of the drives—by Eddie Joost, Gus Zernial and Cass Michaels — came with the bases empty. The victory was the first this year for Garver who had lost three.

WINNING MARGIN

Trailing 5-1 after six innings the Yankees rallied for a pair of runs in the seventh, two more in the eighth and filled the bases with one out in the ninth before Saul Rogovin came in to strike out Yogi Berra and get Billy Martin on a line. Jime Rivera, who walked, scored the winning run in the seventh on Chico Carrasquel's single.

Paul Pettit, Pittsburgh's $100,000 bonus baby of 1950, paid his first major league dividend as he got credit for the victory over Cincinnati. Pete Castiglione homered twice for the Pirates, singled and drove in three runs.

The fading Phillies, who now have lost four in their last five starts, were held at bay by right-hander Jim Wilson who contributed a home run to the 10-hit Milwaukee attack. Joe Adcock and Andy Pafko also homered for the Braves.

Lefty Dave Kelso of the Giants had one bad inning, the third, when St. Louis put together four singles after two were out to score three runs—all Gerry Staley needed for his second victory.

Organ Concert Spectacular, Well-Received

Richard Ellsasser's performance on the large four-manual St. Paul's organ Friday evening was spectacular both to watch and to hear. His audience was spellbound when it wasn't bug-eyed with astonishment.

The registrations were individual and dramatic. The technique was brilliant. Mr. Ellsasser's personal dynamism was abundantly and powerfully transferred into his organ interpretations. Under his hands the organ became a concert instrument of infinite variety and color, shedding its churchy legacy of solemnity, gravity and conservatism. It was sentimental, reflective, imitative, thunderous and theatrical by turns.

The youthful-looking organist has a tremendous repertoire, of which a sampling was given in his Peterborough concert (sponsored by the Kiwanis club). The first part of the program included Purcell's Trumpet Tune, Daquin's 'Cuckoo' (the first number where Mr. Ellsasser displayed his terrific speed), Thomas Arne's Flute Solo (charmingly played), and Bach's fantasia and fugue in G minor. The fantasia as a form allows considerable freedom, and the organist used it all. The fugue was taken at an amazing clip, gaining thereby an arousing sound but losing some of its thematic clarity.

KARG-ELERT PASTEL

Following the intermission came a movement from a Hindemith sonata (the second in E major)—it was a brave piece to introduce into the program; one of Karg-Elert's "seven pastels", of which more in a minute; Pietro Yon's humoresque 'Primitive Organ' (a clever, pleasing imitation); a fantastically-rendered composition by the organist himself, called 'Concert Study in D Minor' (the program note says it contains about 3,000 pedal notes to be played in three minutes); and finally an improvisation on a submitted theme.

Mr. Ellsasser improvised from first sight then and there on a theme written down by Christopher Gledhill, did it at some length and there was considerable interest in his ornament. Concert improvisation is an old art and we were glad to have this demonstration.

The Karg-Elert mentioned above has little musical value but a great deal of picture interest. It is called "Soul of the Lake", and describes the lake before, during and after a storm. Organists revel in storms, and so do their audiences. Mr. Ellsasser refused no stops in his dramatic description. The thunder rolled, the clouds grew big, the lightning flashed and . . .As before most of his numbers, the organist spoke briefly in introduction and explanation, graphically and well, to prepare the audience for what was coming.

The encores included Rimisky-Korsakoff's 'Flight of the Bumble Bee', and believe it or not, the fight and buzz was played on the pedal organ. Mr. Ellsasser's footwork has to be seen to be believed; there's nothing like it this side of Hollywood. (Mr. Ellsasser has been heard in movies.)

The large audience was enthralled by the whole program. A most interesting performance, and as has been said before, spectacular. A.J.T.

When Rebellion Shows Up Try Indirect Control

By NANCY CLEAVER

A mother who was constantly ordering her only son to do this and don't do that, was surprised and annoyed when he became rebellious and contrary. She asked a friend, who had brought up a large family successfully and happily, what suggestion she would make. What would she do if she had the responsibility of training this boy who was resisting her guidance? The friend said quietly, "Try indirect control!"

There are sometimes very poor reasons why adults order their children about. Two of the weak motives rise from parental pride and a desire to display their power. Indirect control is often to be preferred to verbal directions. This quiet control can frequently prevent antisocial behaviour. It can also help the child to substitute desirable behaviour for unsuitable or unsound actions. Control of any kind should produce peaceful social living and be a means of educating the child so that he can control himself.

BUSY CHILD IS HAPPY CHILD

This indirect control is used by a parent arranging the child's social and physical environment so that it is easy for him to be good. A busy child is a happy child and likely to keep out of mischief. Thus providing suitable play material is one way a parent indirectly controls his child's recreation, both indoors and outdoors. Good toys are never a waste of money, especially toys which keep a child interested and active—paints, crayons, plasticene, and blocks. To-day there is a large range of play material which a child can manipulate himself.

A child must always be safeguarded from harm. A small boy or girl living in a third or second floor apartment should have bars on the window to protect him from falling to the pavement below. No matter how often mother may give the command, "Never play on the window seat near the open window!" and no matter how constant is her watchfulness, a day may come when he is suddenly in danger.

Mother is called to the phone. Son has been trying to "fly" his light little glider plane. Unfortunately it flies out the window. He watches to see if it has been smashed to pieces—and there is just a chance that he may lean over the sill too far . . .

BEFORE CRISIS ARISES

An adult can often guess what is likely to happen! Imagination aids a parent to deal with a situation before a crisis arises. John and Billy have been racing on their tricycles for some time. Billy is the youngest and he cannot quite keep up with his chum. He is getting too tired and is becoming cross. Mother exerts indirect control by calling the two boys into the kitchen for a treat. She gives them a drink of fruit juice for a tea party with the other children in the family, which will not take away from their appetite for the next meal. Then mother hands the boys a rug to stretch out on and provides them with picture books to look at. Billy gets just the break in strenuous activity and the little rest which he needs.

It is a wise parent who avoids "head-on collisions" with a child as often as possible. It is so much more pleasant living in a home where conflict over obedience to commands or rules is not coloring the whole day. Many verbal orders and regulations can be dispensed with when parents utilize indirect control methods.

No one wants a spoiled child around and an uncontrolled child acts in an undisciplined or "spoiled child" manner. On the other hand, children are not consistent in their behaviour. They want to be good and they also want to be bad. Doubtless they find it a little monotonous always behaving in the appproved way! They long to have the thrill of danger, to discover just what Mummy will do when they are naughty!

Children also vary greatly. Some are much easier to discipline than others. Boys are likely to be more active and resist authority more than girls. But every child appreciates a parent reducing direct commands to a minimum. Do use indirect control whenever possible in guiding your child's actions!

Weekend Church Story:

Christianity And Idoltry In Conflict At Ephesus

BY WILLIAM E. GILROY, D.D.

Christianity began with devout Jewish souls expecting a Messiah and earnest disciples believing that they had found the Messiah. The atmosphere and environment of the land was already holy with the glory of Israel. Thus as Christianity spread throughout the Roman world, it soon came into conflict with the rites, literature and great, imposing shrines and temples of paganism.

Nowhere is that conflict so marked nor so vividly depicted as in the story told in Acts 19:23-41 of Saint Paul's preaching in Asia Minor and of the opposition he encountered in Ephesus through the commotion stirred up by worshippers of the Goddess Diana.

The story has an interesting modern aspect also. Fo ramong the worshippers of the goddess were the silversmiths who made silver shrines for her and who, like some today, were more interested in the material profits of religion than in any sincerity of worship.

When they saw Paul's mission succeeding, the silversmiths said among themselves, "Our craft is in danger." But seeking to conceal their self-interest from the peole, they cried, "Great is Diana of the Ephesians."

This, too, has its counterpart in modern times when some use the cloak of religion to stir up prejudices or advance self-interest.

That story in Acts 19 is instructive and it ought to be read again and again, not only for its account of Christianity in conflict with paganism, but for its warning against those who would take the noble things of religion and pervert them to their own ends.

Ephesus was the capital city of the Roman province of Asia. It was at the mouth of a river, three miles from the open sea. It was on the main road from Rome to the East, a flourishing route of trade and civilization. Corinth was the next great station on the road to Rome, so that Ephesus was a notable center of Paul's missionary work in a large area.

But it was here in the city that the conflict centered. Here was established a distinctive power of paganism and here Paul had lived for over two years (Acts 19:10).

The temple of Artemis, or Diana, was of enormous size. It was also used as a great treasure house and worship at its festivals brought great throngs from all over the province of Asia. It was easy, therefore, to stir up a riot by rousing the people with a warning of danger to their religion.

But in the narrative there is one notable figure apart from Paul and his companions who were attacked. That's the figure of the town clerk who kept his head and calmed the rioters. Would that there were more such calm-minded public leaders in every time and place!

FORM NEW BOXING BODY

PARIS (AP)—The heads of American and European boxing commissions agreed Friday to set up a four-man committee to iron out perennial disputes over rightful claimants to world championships.

The agreement is to be signed today. Then the committee can go to work on the outstanding current disagreement — the vacant world middleweight title.

The British Boxing Board of Control has recognized the Charles Humez-Randy Turpin fight in London on June 9 as a world championship bout. Robert K. Christenberry, chairman of the New York commission, has said that world championship billing must wait until the European champion is matched against the best American middleweight.

Selection of the best American middleweight, however, must await settling of a site and date for the proposed Paddy Young-Carol (Bobo) Olson fight sometime next month. Both fighters have signed contracts but for different sites and dates.

Since both Christenberry and J. Onslow Fane, chairman of the British board, will be members of the new committee, the middleweight problem will come up at once. The other two members will be George Barton of Minneapolis, president of the National Boxing Association, and Edouard Rabret of France, secretary of the European Boxing Union. Christenberry has been authorized to represent Barton and the NBA at the signing.

The agreement for the championship committee will be made formal in connection with a two-day meeting of the European Boxing Union. The EBU also will have to take a position on the Humez-Turpin fight. Advance indications were that the Britons would be voted down.

Attempt Fails To Block Hydro Service

Dr. G. R. Langley made a second unsuccessful attempt at Friday's PUC meeting to block installation of underground hydro service at the new Woolworth building at Charlotte and George Sts. until the voters had a chance to approve an overall plan of underground installations for the city.

Two weeks ago the commission approved the Woolworth installation at a cost of $18,150 with Dr. Langley in strong opposition.

At Friday's meeting, Dr. Langley again attempted to halt the project by introducing a motion to rescind the decision of the previous meeting and proposing that "the Woolworth store, for the time being, be serviced at minimum cost from the existing power line at present available in the rear of the store and that no further expenditures be made on underground electrical services pending preparation of an approved overall plan or plans with certain costs on which the approval of the citizens has been obtained."

SURVEY UNSUCCESSFUL

General manager W Howard Powell had previously reported that attempts to have a survey made had been unsuccessful because there was no data available in the province.

"We would probably have to bring a consulting engineer from the United States," Mr. Powell told Friday's meeting.

Dr. Langley said that, at a rough guess, cost of installation for the entire business section would be over a million dollars.

"We're starting in driblets on a big proposition and we don't know what it is," he warned. "That's all the more reason why we shouldn't go into it."

HEATED EXCHANGE

Commissioner Richard Raine, in a heated exchange with Dr. Langley, took the view that the Woolworth installation would fit in with whatever plan was later adopted by the commission.

"Not necessarily so," Dr. Langley objected. "Furthermore, I'm getting just a little bit tired of being told that things aren't feasible. I think we can get a competent consulting engineer."

"I think we have the advice of the best men in the province," Mr. Raine said, referring to a report from the Ontario hydro commission which had approved the Woolworth installation.

"You're contradicting yourselves," Dr. Langley said. "On the one hand you're accepting the advice of these people and on the other Mr. Powell said they haven't had any experience in this matter in the province."

Chairman Fred Hills joined Mr. Raine in voting against Dr. Langley's move to rescind approval of the Woolworth installation but agreed with the proposal to obtain a consulting engineer to advise as to costs of an overall plan for the city.

Kenner Collegiate Students Present 3 One-Act Plays

The members of the Dramatic Club of Kenner Collegiate gave their first public performance Friday evening with the presentation of three one-act plays in Queen Mary auditorium.

The three plays were: A Night in an Inn, by Lord Dunsany; The Princess and the Woodcutter, by A. A. Milne; and Box and Cox, by John M. Morton.

These young actors and actresses gave extremely creditable performances considering it was their first venture into drama and their efforts were enthusiastically applauded by a near-capacity audience.

Especially commendable was the acting of James Pollock and Raymond Johnston as Box and Cox in the farcical skit by the same name. Carol Menzies, as Mrs. Bouncer, their landlady, played a good supporting role.

This play was directed by A. J. Noftall as was the suspense drama of the evening, A Night in the Inn.

The four main parts in this second play, A Night in an Inn, were played by David Donaldson (A. E. Scott-Fortescue), James Pollock (William Jones), Michael MacDougall (Albert Thomas), and William Corner (Jacob Smith). The remaining members of the cast were Robert Hutchison, Lorne Hale and Tim Thompson, as the first, second and third priests of Klesh, the idol (Ronald Ward).

Robert Hutchinson was a charming woodcutter in the third play of the evening, The Princess and the Woodcutter. Both he and Jo-Anne Irvine, as the Princess, captured the spirit of this children's phantasy and sang their vocal solos and duet delightfully. Ronald Ward as the king was also good as was Ann Davidson as the queen and Michael MacDougall, Raymond Pullyblank and David Donaldson as the three princes. Phyllis Beebe and Rosemary Pooley were the king's attendants.

This play was directed by Mrs. D. Warner.

The dramatic club was assisted by Carol Ellison, Marilyn Scott and Dawn Keay, as prompters; Gordon White and Alan Pratt, who were in charge of lighting; Miss W. Barlow, in charge of make-up; Marlene Dyer, pianist; J. L. McColl and A. J. Arnott, in charge of properties; Margaret Robertson, publicity; and Miss Helen Lancaster, publicity.

IROQUOIS FALLS (CP)—A deputy game warden was fined $100 Friday for hunting moose without a licence.

Hector Brosseau, the deputy game warden and dog catcher for Timmins, was ordered to pay the fine and court costs. Police said he shot and quartered a moose last Dec. 7.

Sets British Record

OXFORD, England (AP)—Roger Bannister, Britain's great middle distance runner, set a British record today of 4 minutes 3.6 seconds in the one-mile run.

Bannister's clocking places him well up among the world hopefuls aiming at the legendary four-minute mile. It compares with Gunder Haegg's world record of 4:01.4 set in his native Sweden on July 17, 1945.

Bannister was competing in a meet between Oxford University and the British Amateur Athletic Association track teams.

Bandit Leader Has Surrendered

SAIGON, Indo-China (Reuters)—A Cambodian bandit leader who fought for the Communist-led Vietminh rebels has surrendered with 700 of his troops, the French Army announced today.

He is Putch Chhay, 40, leader of one of the roving Kehmer Issarak (Cambodian independence) bands operating in the region around the Cambodian capital of Phnom-Penh.

Bandit leader Putch offered to surrender earlier this month and French authorities sent emissaries to Cambodia to negotiate with him.

The French said he surrendered because of the growing success of the French campaign against the 8,000 Vietminh and their 3,000 Kehmer Issarak allies.

The French Army holds him responsible for several atrocities against French military and civilian captives, including three French Army women who were tortured and killed.

Blames Accident

JERSEY CITY, N.J. (AP) — Thomas S. Moulton blames his career in crime on a faulty automobile. In a $250,000 damage suite filed here Friday against the Packard Motor Company of Detroit, he said defects in a new 1951 car he bought caused an accident which left him mentally deranged and prone to crime. Moulton now is serving a term in prison.

Spring Tornadoes Leave Dead, Wreckage Third Day

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — A tornado took three lives in Tennessee today, raising the three-day death toll from twisters in the southeastern United States to 28.

Killed today when a tornado demolished their home near Decatur, Tenn., were Mr. and Mrs. Carl Harmon and their 14-year-old daughter, Doris.

Today's storm struck in the wake of tornadoes which earlier killed 25 persons and injured hundreds in Alabama and Georgia.

Friday seven persons were killed and at least 12 were injured in Alabama.

The deadly funnels of destruction danced along a 60-mile path in north-central Alabama, striking a shattering blow near Ashland where all the dead and most of the injured were counted.

The Alabama tornadoes struck one day after Warner Robins, Ga., was ravaged by a twister that left 18 dead. Between 250 and 300 persons were injured there, and damage was estimated at $15,000,000.

Two highway patrol officers saw a tornado appear near Calera, 33 miles south of Birmingham.

"We watched it form and begin to pick things up," related W. L. Allen. "When it got too close to us, we ran like hell."

A Negro mother and child were injured and "four or five" homes levelled in this section before the raging winds bounded toward the east.

The storm smashed a cluster of homes near Ashland just as night fell, killing seven persons in three family groups.

The blasting winds and an accompanying lightning storm knocked out all electric power at Ashland. The first injured brought to hospital were treated by candlelight.

Two of the dead and four other members of the family who survived, though badly injured, were blown from their home into a ditch.

Some 14 persons were caught in a concrete block store when the roof collapsed, but only one was injured. The roof fell upon a parked truck and gave the occupants space to crawl to safety.

Simonds Predicts World Danger For 30-50 Years

KINGSTON (CP)—Canada's chief of the general staff predicted Friday that the world will be "difficult, dangerous and unstable" for perhaps 50 years.

Lt.-Gen. Guy Simonds spoke at graduation exercises at Royal Military College. He stopped off on his way to Korea, where he will visit Canadian fighting men.

Gen. Simonds said:

"There will be a difficult, dangerous and unstable world for years to come, possibly 30 to 50, at least. It is up to you to make the best use of your training, should aggression make a showdown necessary."

INSPECTS CADETS

Gen. Simonds was inspecting officer for the closing exercises. He addressed the cadet body after the ceremonial parade and the prize-giving.

The ceremonial parade, under command of Cadet Squadron Leader J. A. P. Hantson of Brantford, was climaxed by the final march-off of the largest graduating class in the college's history—110 cadets.

6 Drummers Plan Emigrate To Canada

ST. CATHARINES (CP) — Six drummers from the famous Shoots and Dykehead Caledonia pipe band will emigrate to Canada soon and will take part in this city's Coronation Day celebrations.

The drummers, aged 17 to 25, decided to make the move after they got in touch with Hugh MacPherson of Edinburgh, once pipe major of the St. Catharines band, saying they wanted to emigrate.

Mr. MacPherson wrote his brother, Richard, pipe major at St. Catharines, who asked the drummers to make the trip.

InvestigateComplaints About Police Dept.

NORTH BAY (CP)—Leo Valois, a prominent citizen of Mattawa, said today he understands Ontario provincial police are investigating complaints he has made about the Mattawa police department.

Mr. Valois said he had placed in the hands of Crown attorney E. A. Tilley of North Bay evidence of irregularities in the department. He said the evidence was offered to town council six weeks ago but it was unable to arrange a date to meet him.

Caught In Furrow Boy Burned To Death

COCHRANE (CP)—A five-year-old boy, his foot caught in a furrow, was fatally burned Friday when fire set by playmates swept over a hay field at nearby Norembego.

Gerald Desjardins of Norembego, 22 miles east of here, died from burns covering most of his body. His six-year-old sister, Rosalie, who tried vainly to pull her brother to safety, received burns to her face and legs. She was reported in good condition in hospital.

Police said the fire was apparently set by children with three friends and spread out of control before the Desjardins boy could move to safety.

60 Canaries Prove Problem

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—Despite protests of police sixty canaries were among the belongings of a London family carried out onto the street Friday night in an eviction action executed by a landlord.

The tenants had overstayed their lease and the landlord, who occupies the other half of the duplex, had a legal right to evict them, police said.

While police consulted two lawyers the family's furniture was piled on the lawn. They found haven with friends for the night, but the canaries were still a problem.

Finally a neighbor consented to house all 60 of them for the night.

The tenant family consists of two children and their father and mother, the latter a partial cripple.

Family Of Six Left Homeless In Fire

WELLAND (CP) — A family of six was left homeless when fire destroyed a two-room home at nearby Port Robinson Friday night.

Donald Collings, 37, Welland steelworker, was asleep when the fire broke out but managed to escape. His wife and four young daughters were shopping in Welland at the time.

Sues Over Injuries

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Miss Harriet N. Werking, who paid $2 for a Derby admission last year and $2 for a canvas-seated chair Friday sued Churchill Downs and a caterer for $50,000. Her court petition claimed the chair seat broke and she fell, suffering a broken bone, a sprain, bruises and a spine injury.

New Robot Jet Launched In Australia

By LIONEL HUDSON

WOOMERA, Australia (Reuters) —Prime Minister Robert Menzies today launched the British Commonwealth's "weapon of the future" — a robot jet which can "smell out" and destroy enemy planes.

As he pressed a button, government ministers watched the slim pilotless plane rise from its base a mile away and streak across the desert wastes of the 1,200-mile Woomera range at supersonic speed.

Officials said the plane, the Jindivik Mark I, outclasses all previous pilotless planes in speed, performance and landing gear. It compares favorably with piloted jet planes, though only half the size. The machine is the baby of Ian Fleming, 40, one of Britain's top scientists.

An hour after it disappeared into space, the silence of the desert was broken by a reverberating blast as a deadly dart-pointed rocket shot aloft in a second test.

The experts would say nothing about the rocket, an offensive weapon. But it is no secret that the missile is a potential atomic weapon able to hit targets hundreds of miles away.

Both tests came at the end of 5½ years of experiment at the $65,000,000 Woomera range. It stretches for 1,200 miles over barren desert country and has an added 1,000 miles of open sea beyond.

Supply Minister Howard Beale, who gave details of the tests at a luncheon here, said 700 rockets and 40 other missiles have been released at Woomera since the beginning of 1950, scientists had also exploded 2,200 bombs.

Both Beale and Prime Minister Menzies said the tests, being carried out in conjunction with Britain, are vital for the survival of the Commonwealth if war should come. Menzies termed the work at Woomera the most important defence program in the Free world.

Blame Slick Pavement As Two Autos Crash

Wet pavement was blamed Friday in an accident on George St. when a car skidded into the rear of a second causing damages estimated at $500.

Donald Hendricks of Toronto, driving north on George stopped in a line of traffic. In attempting to stop, Wayne Orde of 247 Reid St., driving behind Hendricks, skidded on the pavement into the rear of the first vehicle.

Damage was set at $300 to Orde's car and $200 to Hendricks'.

Blackpool Wins Football Cup, Edges Bolton 4-3

LONDON (CP)—Blackpool today won the Football Association Cup —top prize in British soccer—by defeating Bolton Wanderers 4-3 on a goal in the final seconds by outside-left Bill Perry.

It was the first FA Cup win for Blackpool which has participated in four of the last six finals at London's Wembley Stadium.

A crowd of 100,000 saw Blackpool come from behind with a stirring finish after trailing 2-1 at halftime.

Blackpool's first three goals were all scored by centre-forward Stan Mortensen. Nat Lofthouse, Willie Moir and Eric Bell scored for Bolton Wanderers.

Cancer Drive Nets $6,000; $2,000 Short

Cancer Society fund chairman Frank Foster, QC, disclosed today that $6,000 has been donated to the society in its annual drive for funds. The quota for Peterborough County is $8,000.

Mr. Foster and his committee of Mrs. Claire H. Stuart, chairman of canvassers; Mrs. J. Dunkerly, Mrs. Eve Collins, Mrs. Ruby Brooks, Mrs. J. Perry, Miss Joan Austin and Miss Nora Gabutt, are very pleased with the results so far in the campaign. They report the volunteer canvassers are doing an outstanding job.

In Lakefield where the drive is under the direction of Mrs. D. Davis and Mrs. George Graham, over $700 has been received. Mrs. Davis reports that all organizations of the village assisted in the campaign and especially mentioned the work of the Lion's Club.

Unfortunately, other parts of the country are not organized for a personal house-to-house campaign but it is hoped that people will forward their donations to the Peterborough Headquarters. The local group is hoping for further donations from Keene, Norwood, Havelock and Apsley.

Even though the campaign has been in progress, the three-fold program of the local society is still being carried out.

Mrs. John Bradshaw, chairman of the welfare committee, has 15 groups making dressings at present and instructs these groups several afternoons and nights during the month. Additionally, 27 patients are being given assistance under the personal attention of Mrs. Maurice Holt, the president.

Some are being helped by being given dressings; others in transportation expenses to the clinic in Toronto; still others on expenses while in Toronto receiving treatment.

Under the Lay-Education program, Mrs. Holt travels to outlying areas dispensing information and literature on cancer. She has been assisted in many instances by local doctors and films.

Lack Of Care Main Cause Of Poor Floor Workmanship

There's very little more work to good workmanship than to poor workmanship—most often it's lack of care, rather than lack of skill, that produces a poor floorlaying job. Good looking, properly laid floors enhance the value of any home—improper laying methods and carelessness yield nothing but dissatisfaction to builder and owner alike.

Professional floor layers, as well as amateur builders, can check up on themselves to see if they're producing a workmanlike, high quality job. The following time-proven pointers tell how to get that kind of a job with hardwood strip flooring.

LAID OVER WOOD JOISTS

The subfloor. Subflooring should be of softwood, surfaced one or both sides, ¾ inch thick, not over 8" wide and well seasoned preferably kiln-dried). Green or wet boards are sure to shrink and open cracks between finish-flooring strips. Subfloor boards should be laid diagonally with at least two, preferably three, 2¾ inch nails at each joist and each board end. Firmness of floor depends on this. Pine, Douglas fir, spruce or hemlock are satisfactory. Subfloor can also be ⅝ inch plywood. Floor joists should be spaced 16 inches on centres and bridged at least every 8 feet. If subfloor is omitted (not recommended), 25/32 inch flooring or thicker should be used, joists spaced 12 inches on centres, bridged every 4 feet.

LAID OVER CONCRETE SLAB

If concrete is laid on grade, an underfill of cinders, washed gravel or the like is generally essential. To bar out ground moisture, a waterproofing membrane (two layers of 15-lb. asphalt felt) should be used. Butt the joints of both layers tightly and stagger all joints. Mop layers with hot asphalt and carry membrane at least 6 inches up walls behind baseboard.

Sleepers or screeds should be treated with preservative to retard deterioration; 2 x 2, 2 x 3 or 2 x 4 may be used, spaced 16 inches on centres (12 inches on centres if subfloor is omitted). Good results may be had if sleepers or screeds are laid in mastic.

Air circulation should be provided, especially if there is no basement.

FLOORING PAPER

Between subfloor and finish floor a layer of flooring paper or approved equal helps protect finish flooring from moisture that may arise from concrete slab. Tarpaper and ordinary building papers are not recommended, as they sometimes absorb moisture and pass it slowly to the wood floor above. Avoid sealed-in dampness. Proper waterproofing and good air circulation are essentials.

Laying of finish floors should be the last operation in building. Never lay floors in a cold, damp building Heat it for 10 days to at least 70 degrees regardless of the season, and store flooring, piled loosely, in the building for at least three days before laying.

After all plastering is done and all woodwork except base shoeing or quarter-round is installed, the finish flooring may be laid. If you do it earlier, the clean wood is almost sure to be scarred or soiled. Start laying flooring at one side wall, square with the room, face-nailing the first piece (base show will conceal nails). Leave not less than ½ inch horizontal expansion space at all walls.

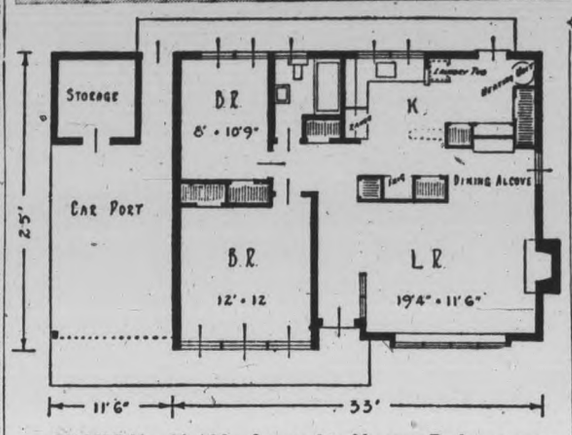
Continue flooring through from room to room. Usual practice is to plan flooring so strips run lengthwise through halls or narrow spaces and extend from one adjoining room to another with direction unchanged. Each lot of flooring contains a certain proportion of shorter pieces, depending upon the grade. These are useful in closets and for finishing out courses near end walls.

When it is necessary to cut a short length to finish out a course, it is well to cut it from a piece long enough so that the part remaining can be used to begin a new course.

Always use a waste scrap of flooring as a block when tapping home the edge or end of strip to avoid marring.

NAILING

Flooring is a carpentry specialty and calls for special nails, so don't use just any nails. For a fine, squeak-free floor, take the trouble to order and get the right kind of nails and use plenty of them. The average carpenter finds the screw-type nails more satisfactory because they eliminate splitting.



Drive the nails through the side tongue at an angle of 45 to 55 degrees. Don't try to drive them home, but sink them with a nail-set to avoid marring the flooring edges.

The first nail or two in each piece should be "toenailed" (slanted both vertically and horizontally)towards the preceding piece to which it end-joins to insure tight joints. Always break or stagger end joints in adjoining strips.

FLOOR SQUEAKS

The answer to floor squeaks is NAILS. Use plenty in both subfloor and finish floor. Loose sleepers (joists) often cause squeaks, so nail them tightly and use bridging generously.

HOUSE No. 61-108—Located in Norgate Park—a spectacular development of 480 attractive one-storey homes just over Lion's Gate Bridge from Vancouver—this trim home will appeal particularly to ranch-style enthusiasts. Large glass areas feature all Norgate homes. Exterior walls are of cedar siding. Important construction economies have been made possible by modular planning, reducing wastage of materials to an absolute minimum. A trussed roof permitted freedom of partition placement in the plan. Without basement, this home is built on an insulated concrete slab with radiant heating. For working drawings, write Home Building in Canada, 2842 Bloor St. W., Toronto.

Stratford Native Dies

TORONTO (CP)—Relatives received word Friday that Robert B. Verner, 35, former Toronto textbook company employee, was killed in a traffic accident in California Thursday while travelling to take up a new position in San Francisco. He was born and educated in Stratford.

Ask Guarantee For Reporters

BUENOS AIRES (Reuters) — United States Ambassador Albert Nufer sought a guarantee from Argentine authorities today for the safety of U. S. news correspondents here, criticized earlier by President Peron.

Peron asked Congress to investigate the activities of American news gathering organizations operating in Argentina.

He said Argentina's prestige abroad is being deliberately undermined by a group of foreign agents and press organizations.

Peron named the agencies as The Associated Press, The United Press and The International News Service.

The president's request was contained in his state-of-the-nation address at the opening session of Congress today.

Dr. S. Beatty New Chancellor

TORONTO (CP) — Dr. Samuel Beatty has been named by a special nominating committee as the new chancellor of the University of Toronto, it was reported Friday.

It is expected that his name will be forwarded to the university senate and the board of governors and will be officially accepted next Friday. He would succeed Governor-General Vincent Massey.

Dr. Beatty, one of Canada's leading mathematicians, attended Owen Sound Collegiate Institute.

Tank With Asphalt Explodes, No One Hurt

BARRIE (CP)—A 1,000-gallon tank partly filled with asphalt exploded Friday at the board of works building in the west end. The explosion could be heard a mile away.

Bert Cross, a workman, was leaning against the horizontal tank when it blew up. Town engineer Robert Campbell, walking toward the tank, was about four feet from it at the time. Neither man was injured.

New Colors For Hunters

TORONTO (CP) — Fluorescent reds and oranges are being tested by the Ontario department of lands and forests as a replacement for the traditional red clothing worn by hunters. Experiments have shown these fluorescent colors are four times as bright as ordinary red and orange in poor light. In the late evening or early morning hours, the fluorescent hues actually appear most vivid while ordinary colors fade.

Gas Plant Shuts Down

STRATFORD (CP)—The Stratford city gas plant, set up in 1875, stopped operations Friday when its antiquated equipment wore out. First operated as a stock company with $25,000, it was bought by the city in 1926. Consumers were notified recently that the plant would close about May 1 and were advised to switch to electricity or tanked gas.

Ballet Groups Told Broaden Their Horizons

OTTAWA (CP)—Eight Canadian ballet companies, which close out the week-long Canadian Ballet Festival here tonight, have been told to broaden their horizons

The advice came from Anatole Chujoy of New York, well-known critic and editor of the publication Dance News.

He told participants of the non-competitive festival Friday that Canadian dancers can stage a good festival each year but don't work hard enough between times and are too self-centred.

"There should be more continuity to your work between festivals," he said. "Most cities don't know enough about their own ballet companies. Try to become an institution.'

LAST PERFORMANCE

Critics for the Ottawa Citizen and Ottawa Journal chose it and "Maria Chapdelaine" by Toronto's Willy Blok Hanson group—a dance based on the famous French-Canadian novel by Louis Hemon—as the evening's highlights.

Three other works performed earlier in the week were repeated: "Daphnis and Chloe" and "Gershwin Preludes" by the British Columbia Ballet Company, and "Le Combat" by the Francoise Sullivan duo from Montreal.

See Coronation On TV

PARIS, Ont. (CP)—Residents will be able to see the Coronation on television sets to be installed in the Municipal arena, the Coronation Day committee decided Friday night. Local appliance dealers will lend and install the sets. The Coronation Day program will include a mass church service, a parade of children, sports, an outdoor concert and fireworks.

Reds Proud of Jets

MOSCOW (AP)—The Soviet Communist party newspaper Pravda reporting on Friday's Moscow May Day parade today described Russian jet fighter planes as "outdistancing the speed of sound" over Red Square.

Masonry Paints Stop Moisture Damage

It would be nice to start off this column with a classical reference like: "As someone once said, 'A paintbrush is man's best friend.' " Though such a statement may not be on record, you have only to look around your neighborhood to verify the truth of it.

The "lucky" guy with a brick or masonry home may not be in the thick of a painting spree, but human nature is peculiar. Even he, who could leave well enough alone, sometimes chooses to add new beauty to his home via the paintbrush route. This column is for him.

Besides adding new beauty to masonry walls, the many protective coatings available for cast concrete, brick, stucco, asbestos-cement siding, unglazed tile and aggregate block also render great service by repelling moisture.

As your neighbor with the masonry home well knows, prevention of costly damage caused by moisture seeping through porous masonry is quite worthwhile.

Regular house paint can be applied successfully to masonry surfaces as well as to wood, but there are paints especially for use on masonry. They include the cement-water paints, the resin-emulsion types and rubber-base coatings.

Besides these, there are special transparent, nonglossy coatings for brick and stone houses. They are moisture repellents.

The undercoat is of extreme importance in painting masonry. It should be a paint that is not affected by the lime that is always present in concrete, stucco and mortar.

Cement-water paint is especially suited to painting cinder, concrete and aggregate block walls and for walls of new structures that normally contain water-soluble salts. It may and should be applied to damp or dampened walls. Paint a new structure with this material not sooner than seven days after completion of the building.

Resin-emulsion paints for masonry are water-thinned. They may be used on most porous masonry, excepting magnesite stucco, and on asbestos-cement siding that has not been previously coated with a water-proofing compound. They have dry-film properties similar to those of flat oil paint and contain the same pigments as oil paints.

Rubber-base paints are considered particularly appropriate for painting asbestos-cement siding and shingles and will also seal in stains on old masonry. They will serve, too, as protective primers under finishing coats of resin-emulsion or oil-base paints.

Oil-base paints formulated especially for masonry surfaces provide a durable finish when two coats are applied. Depending on weather condition and on the thickness and porosity of the walls, oil paint shouldn't be used until three months to a year after a structure is completed.

Before any paint is applied, however, structural defects in masonry must be repaired. It must be "painted up" where necessary—joints and cracks in the masonry need to be filled.

SPECIAL MASONRY paints or transparent protective coatings should only be applied to walls that have been carefully pointed up.

News Of Counter-Attack Raised False Hopes For Release Of Prisoners

BY PHILIP DEANE
Correspondent of The Observer, London

(Ed. Note: This is the fourth of a series by Philip Deane, pen-name of Michael Gigantes, who went to Korea in 1950 as a war correspondent and was wounded and captured by the North Koreans in July of that year.)

After my three day interrogation and subsequent illness, I was kept in the North Korean capital, being fed milk, eggs and Coca cola, to recover. I was practically unguarded. During air-raids, the occupants of the house would scuttle off to the shelters without insisting that I should follow them. I didn't follow, because there were three radio sets in the house, none of which appeared to work and which I wanted to investigate. By changing some of the valves around, I got one of the sets functioning and the raids became an occasion for rejoicing. I would tune in to the General Overseas Service to the Australian Broadcasting Service and to the American Forces Network. Thus I heard about the birth of Princess Anne (Queen Elizabeth's daughter) and about the extra beer that was being given to the British forces in Korea to toast the occasion. That day a prisoner dring her little Highness' health in looted Coca Cola for there was nothing else. I heard also that the United Nations forces had stabilised the tiny Pusan bridgehead that they were holding. I heard the address of the commandant in Hong Kong to the British troops leaving for Korea. "Shoot straight," he said.

I heard of the tremendous preparations being made for the counter-attack, of two friends—Ian Morrison of the London "Times" and Christopher Buckley of the London "Daily Telegraph"—being killed, and I listened to baseball results, hoping that I would get the chance to tell some American about them. Once, over the ABC (Australian Broadcasting Service) came "Take It From Here" with Joy Nichols, Professor Jimmy Edwards and Dick Bently. For the first time since my capture hearing those dear fools of British radio, I laughed and laughed. I want to thank them for that. Most broadcasts I could not hear completely for as soon as the all-clear sounded I had to dismantle my repairs lest the Koreans discovered my secret.

ZOOT SUITS

The house I was kept in appeared to be a distribution point for loot. A succession of lorries would arrive with personal effects that had belonged to the foreign colony in Seoul and diminutive Korean police officers would try on American zoot suits that had on them an overcoat effect, surrealistic wallpaper ties, and rimless spectacles which completely distorted their vision. Then the alert would sound and in their outsize regalia they would solemnly and slowly leave the room. I watched them from the window. As soon as they thought they were out of sight they would run for the shelter, only to reappear after the raid to assure me earnestly that they had stood outside watching the planes all the time.

On August 31, 1950, I was taken back to the civilian internee camp and revealed that I had heard the radio. Bishop Patrick Burns, the apostolic delegate, who had collapsed after acute bouts of dysentery, managed to stand, come to the toilet and ask: "How are the Washington Senators (a baseball team) doing?"

I told him. He said he felt better after that.

Walter Eltringham, a kindly, gigantic engineer of the ECA (the former American Economic Co-operation Administration) staff, who had been cut off while in the field and captured, was still literally blue all over from the continued beatings he had received during the early days of his capture.

"Boy," he said, hearing the news of the preparation for the counter-attack, "when we hit them, these guys will feel so low they'll be able to sit on a cigarette card and swing their bloody legs."

Stealing paper from the guard's desk, and writing with home-made instruments, the French diplomats produced a card written in exquisite copperplate, complimenting Captain Vyvyan Holt (the interned British Minister) on the occasion of the Princess's birth.

On September 5, 1950, at six in the evening of an extremely rainy day, a short, fat little colonel, whom we called the Panjandrum, came and took us away in trucks.

DRIVEN TO JAIL

We were first driven to the Pyongyang gaol, where we stayed for an hour, then to the station. After squatting in the rain for an hour, we boarded a train, which was in complete darkness and seemed to be full of Americans: Brooklynese, Texas drawls and the soft accents of New England mingled in voicing imprecations about the guards.

The train rolled intermittently through the night. In the morning we left it and walked up the near-by hills to shelter from United Nations planes. Then we got our first glimpse of the American prisoners. They were indescribably dirty. They said that they had not managed to wash since their capture. They said that after the march from the front during which they had experiences corresponding to mine they were put in a large school near Pyongyang where they were not (repeat not) treated brutally and were fed bread twice a day, rice once, dried fish every day, meat three times a week, apples and sugar. They had not been able to wash and were crawling with lice. A large proportion of them had no shoes. They wore lightweight summer fatigues. They were travelling packed tight in open coal-trucks. Some had been given old cotton quilts but even they were bitterly cold during the journey.

Then the sick appeared. Thinner even than their "healthy" companions, those GIs walked like figures in a slow-motion film, helped along by their own medical orderlies and by Korean nurses. They were given medical treatment during the day, and some extra food which most of them could not keep down. One of them, a Roman Catholic, died, and Monseigneur Thomas Quinlan put up a tremendous and finally victorious fight with the commandant for permission to hold a burial service. Another died while the grave was being dug. The two GIs were buried in a common grave at the small village of Moran. A Christian villager, whispering, promised that he would tend the graves.

We walked back to the train at dusk to find it had been strafed by United Nations planes. The next day, the train commandant told us that it had been very troublesome capturing us. Why had we stayed behind to be captured? There had been no policy then, but now there was. We were to be treated kindly. We—the special group of diplomats and journalists—were to have sleeper accommodation. This was verminous but better than the open coal-trucks in which most of the GIs travelled and in which—it must be said—the Korean civilian passengers travelled also.

We reached our destination, Manpo, the frontier town of the Central Korean-Manchuria railway line, on September 11, 1950. There we were accommodated in what had been the quarantine quarters.

Judging by the standards of the neighboring villagers, we were living in the lap of luxury, with an egg a day, meat three times a week, sugar, oil. In the afternoon we could bathe in the river, and sit for as long as we liked on the sunny beach. We were allowed to go to town shopping with what money the diplomats managed to get out of the guards for their watches.

PNEUMONIA DEATHS

Dr. Kim Pyong Gu visited us daily, administered diarrhoea pills, and sang: "You came, I was alone, I should have known, you were a temptation, and I . . ." to a 16-year-old White Russian girl named Sagida. The doctor told me that he was losing two or three GIs every day from pneumonia, because he had no sulphapyridine, no blankets, no clothes and the prisoner-of-war barracks could not be heated until October 1. He also complained that many of their deaths were due to the fact that some of the GIs did not seem anxious to live. His statements were later corroborated by American prisoners of war with whom I talked.

During my stay in Manpo two American GIs attempted to escape. They were caught three days later. When, subsequently, I talked to them they assured me they had not (repeat not) been in any way brutalised. The only punishment meted out to them was deprivation of tobacco for a week.

At the well where we got our water, a 15-year-old Korean boy, a Presbyterian, daily handed us a written summary of the United Nations Korean broadcast. Thus we learned of the landings at Inchon and that the United Nations forces had invaded North Korea.

The information service, organised by Commissioner Herbert Lord of the Salvation Army, was not detected by the guards. Day by day we heard of the advances made by those we hoped were to be our liberators. Sweepstakes were started. Plans were made about freedom, about the gifts that we would buy for our relatives. That first telegram was mentally written and re-written. And at night we stayed up anxiously counting the trains rumbling over the International Bridge.

We could not see them, we could only hear them. Were they coming in or going out? In the day, high up in their sky, on their lovely silver wings flew the planes with the Western markings. Even when they were miles inside Korean territory the Chinese batteries fired at the United Nations planes.

On October 8, under heavy rain, we were told to move, taking with us our cast-iron cooking pots and all our stores. The mother superior of the Carmelites, suffering from a recurrence of her tuberculosis and unable to walk, was being carried on a home-made stretcher.

There were three false starts. We got thoroughly wet and finally left on the ninth for our next camp at Kosang Djin, having been unable to cook because the kitchen was dismantled.

At our new place, fifteen miles down the Yalu river from Manpo, we were settled in a schoolhouse and the Korean major in charge of camps was obviously trying, with the means at his disposal, to give us a good time. One day he came, gathered us around, and, looking very solemn, started speaking.

MAJOR EXPLAINS

"We are," he said, "a very small nation; very poor. We have been slaves of the Japanese for 50 years. After 1945 we started an independent life. You do not like our methods. You are anti-Com behind. We could not wait for normal development. We had to go faster. I have tried, on orders from my government, to treat you well. We are not savages, we are civilised people. Some of you had a bad time at the beginning, we know. This was not what our government wanted. Mistakes are made. You will be going to your homes. You will be in your rich countries, which would have not attacked to destroy. You must remember that we have tried to do our best."

We thought, having heard the major's speech, that liberation was near. "Any time now, any time now," said Father Cadars, a peppery little French priest of 72, who, after 40 years of the church, still showed he had been an artillery captain. Father Cadars had joined our group just before we left for Kosang Djin. He had been in Taejon when the Communists captured the town, and for many days afterwards no one seemed to bother about him.

He told me that just before the United Nations retreated from the town, in a forest clearing near his church, South Korean police had brought 1,700 men, loaded layer upon layer into trucks. These prisoners were taken out and ordered to dig long trenches. Father Cadars watched. Some American officers, Cadars said, were also watching. When a certain amount of digging was completed, South Korean policemen shot half the prisoners in the back of the neck. The other half were ordered to bury the dead. Father Cadars told me that horrified he approached the South Korean officer in command.

"Why are these men being shot?"

"Because they are Communist guerrillas who rebelled in the Taejon gaol."

"Have you tried them?"

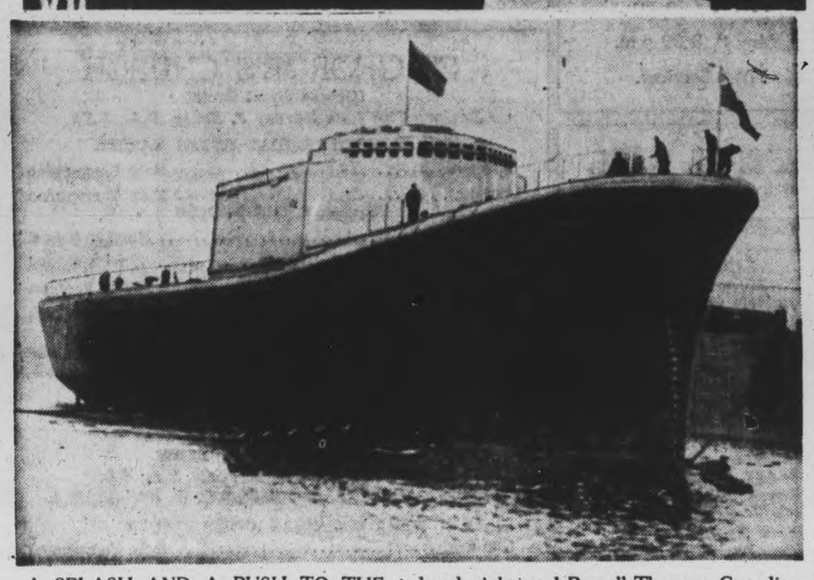
"Grandfather, it is better for you that you should not know too much about this."

And Father Cadars was roughly pushed away. Kneeling behind a bush, he prayed for those who were being killed.

Weeks earlier, in the Japanese villa in Pyongyang where I had been pressed to prove I was not a spy by speaking on the radio against the Americans, I had been visited by Alan Winnington correspondent of the London Daily Worker. He did not come to interrogate me, to indoctrinate me, or even to interview me. He came to be pleasant to a fellow journalist; he brought gifts; and I was surly. He did not even talk of the Korean war, except for one thing. He told me that near Taejon a mass grave had been discovered in which hundreds of South Korean Communists had been buried after being shot without trial. He said this had been done in the presence of American officers. I told him I did not believe his story. I did not believe it until Father Cadars repeated it to me.

Father Cadars was never to know liberation. Nor were we in October 1950. On the twentieth we heard the Chinese had come into the war. Our thoughts were with our families at home. We were afraid for them because we thought that the third world war was about to start.

Meanwhile the United Nations forces were advancing. We got conflicting, puzzling bits of news from well-disposed civilians, from guards who begged for our protection when our troops should reach the Yalu. They all—we know now—exaggerated the successes of our troops, and raised our hopes too high.



As our quarters were needed for the incoming Chinese, we were marched—internees and PoWs alike—over mountain paths to a remote mining hamlet, Chui Am Nee. There we were put in derelict houses. It was already freezing hard. Searching in foetid open sewers, the bare-footed Carmelites were looking for fuel. The tubercular mother superior needed warmth. The kindly major was not there.

Over the hills came small groups of ragged North Korean soldiers, battle-weary, wounded, dispirited and hostile. A Communist quarter-master captain opened the village warehouse and told the GIs to take what they wanted. There were old fur bonnets and gloves. There was also some flour. We had our first meal in 24 hours. Then the quarter-master disappeared. No one seemed to be in charge. Stragglers still came from the south going north. This, we told ourselves, was the debacle.

Some talked of organising a committee to run things now we had been left alone. Others talked of taking over the village. There were villagers who hoped we would do so. Lying in our cold verminous low-ceilinged rooms, or delousing by the side of the open sewers, we assured each other that these were the last days of hunger, that over the hills, after the stragglers, would come our own troops soon; that the Communists fleeing into Manchuria had brought us to the out-of-the-way valley so we would be liberated without risking getting involved in the actual fights. "Oh yes," said the villagers, "three more days, perhaps four, and they'll be here."

We were very hungry, very cold, but very happy.

A SPLASH AND A PUSH TO THE SEA—Mrs. H. G. DeWolf, wife of Rear Admiral DeWolf, of the Canadian Joint Staff, Washington, makes a perfect "strike" over the bow of HMCS Ottawa, as her husband, right, and Russell Thoman, Canadian Vickers official, look on. Below, the trim naval ship finally hits water after an extra "push" from shipyard workers. The Ottawa, one of a new RCN design, was built at the Vickers yards in Montreal.

Atomic Plans Given Boost In New Zealand

WAIRAKEI, New Zealand (Reuters)—New Zealand's atomic plans took a sharp stride forward when engineers "blew" a 2,020-foot deep experimental bore Friday, releasing a great jet of superheated steam which blasted 400 feet into the air above this scenic valley.

The jet roared out so violently that all recording instruments were shattered. Technicians quickly set to work to devise new ones able to withstand the enormous force.

The test bore, twice as deep as any previously sunk here, is the latest in a series probing the seething depths of this hot springs valley in the government's heavy-water project. If successful, the plan can speed atomic development in the Southwest Pacific area and provide new sources of wealth and health for the Commonwealth.

The discovery that the jet apparently consists of dry steam, suitable for direct use in power turbines, also spurs planning for a diversity of industries tentatively projected as a sideline to the atomic project. In previous borings only "wet" steam had been tapped from underground.

Officials stress that the heavy-water project is still in an experimental stage, but Commonwealth scientists including Sir John Cockcroft, Britain's top atomic expert, have already given cautious approval.

Even if the government should decide against building an atomic pile in New Zealand, heavy water could become a top export to countries more advanced in atomic development.

CANADIAN CORONATION EMBLEM—Artists Haydyn Martin, 20, top, and Philip Isern, 19, put finishing touches to a large-scale Canadian emblem which will adorn the massive quadrilateral stand in Parliament Square, London, for the June 2 Coronation of Queen Elizabeth. With emblems of other Commonwealth countries, it is being prepared at London's Victoria and Albert Museum by artists from the Royal College of Art. One big painting, bearing the names of the colonies, is 36 feet in length and 24 feet in width at its widest point. The art student on the floor is unidentified.

Report Wounded Man In Serious Condition

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—Howard Morton, 24, of Chatham, who was wounded Wednesday during a shooting on a street near downtown Windsor, underwent an operation late Friday.

Hospital officials said his condition is serious but declined to elaborate on nature of the operation.

Meanwhile, Detroit police are holding James Cooper, a United States soldier, for questioning before turning him over to Windsor police. Charges of attempted murder and of pointing a firearm have been filed against Cooper by Windsor police.

Judgment Reserved On Decertification

PORT COLBORNE (CP)—The Ontario labor relations board has reserved judgment on the application of Canadian Shoe and Leather Workers for decertification of International Fur and Leather workers as bargaining agent at the Humberstone Shoe Company Limited.

The CSLW claims to represent 165 employees and is affiliated with the Amalgamated Unions of Canada.

The dispute before the board concerned the date of the contract with the company.

Three cards were sent during the month. Plans were made for washing the curtains and Mr. Ed. Bell was engaged to paint the basement.

Mrs. Harold Ray had charge of the devotional and program. Two readings "Bitter Words" and "Try Again" were given by Mrs. Parcells and Mrs. Ray. A Bible quiz was held.

The meeting closed with the hymn "What a Friend We Have in Jesus" and repeating hymn 364 as a benediction. Lunch was served by Mrs. Arthur Payne, Mrs. George Dyson and Mrs. Ed. Bell.

Nearly 4,500,000 houses in the United Kingdom were destroyed or damaged by bombs in the last war.

Commission Cuts Gas Rates For Space Heat

The Peterborough Utilities Commission has amended gas rates for space heating and automatic hot water heating to replace the present charge of $2.25 for the second 2,000 cubic feet of gas by the standard rate for every 1,000 cubic feet over the first 1,000.

This reduction in cost is expected to amount to a saving of between 40 and 60 cents a month to special rate consumers. The PUC hopes that this will be a selling point in increasing the number of new installations of automatic space heaters and hot water heaters, thereby restoring any losses in revenue.

The new rates are now: for automatic space heating, service charge—75 cents a month, first 1,000 cubic feet—$2.50, balance — $1.45 per thousand cubic feet; automatic hot water heating, service charge—75 cents a month, first 1,000 cubic feet—$2.50, balance—$1.65 per thousand cubic feet.

At a congregational meeting Wednesday, R. Maskell and Wallis Thompson were elected church wardens. Cyril Barnes, lay-delegate, Jack Hamilton, envelope convener and Albert Orr, Sunday School superintendent.

Lakefield Boat Co. Produces After Fire

LAKEFIELD (Staff)—Lakefield Boat Co. is not presently planning to rebuild its plant, burned April 14 in a disastrous $150,000 fire. But the loss of their factory hasn't discouraged manager Paul Richer and his staff. Using the empty Sailcraft plant, they are now in limited production and the first boat is expected from the plant early next week.

Offers of factories — empty, partly equipped and fully equipped — have come to Mr. Richer. Offers have come from municipalities in the district, seeking the boat company for this town and that.

"I can't tell anybody anything yet," he said. "We'll just have to wait and see."

COULD BE WORSE

With that non-committal remark, he smiled and said that things could be a lot worse. They had a plant of sorts to operate in, basic machinery was available, and the employees were enthusiastic about keeping the business going.

One of them—Gerry Northey—was so enthusiastic that he loaned an almost complete set of woodworking machinery to Mr. Richer.

For that loan, Mr. Richer was generous with his praise. He was amazed, too, by the generosity of the Peterborough Canoe Co.

"They sent us several thousand feet of their prime lumber, and their manager, Jack Richardson, said if he wanted anything else just to ask for it." Over and above that, said Mr. Richer, Peterborough Canoe had loaned the firm molds for cedar strip craft.

All in all, he went on, people were good when Lakefield Boat Co. was practically down and out.

FIRE'S RUIN

Today the ruins of the burned-out plant are a sad reminder of the trim white factory that caught tourists' eyes as they drove through the village. Fire-softened steel beams are twisted in curious shapes, resting on ruined machinery, and bent in great bows.

Charred lumber is piled at the east end of the levelled plant, and the scorched and burned sides of the nearby rink testify to how close the firm came to losing much of its winter's production.

Did he want to leave Lakefield? Paul Richer reminisced a bit, then came up with his answer.

"I came here from the air force, you know. Before that I lived in Montreal, and when I got to Lakefield, it seemed dead. But I came to like it, and I don't want to leave it. We'll stay here if we can.

"Where else can you spend so much time at a cottage in the summer?"

Obviously a lover of what boosters of the Kawarthas call "the good life," Mr. Richer is determined to stick it out in the Sailcraft plant temporarily. Something, he hinted, might crop up in the village that would provide the company with a factory.

FRESH APPRECIATION

In the meantime, work goes on and on. The disaster, said Mr. Richer, had given him a fresh appreciation of the work of his staff.

"These boat builders are artists. They look at a mold, say the curve is wrong, and change it. That's something I hadn't noticed in the other plant."

Lakefield itself wants the boat company to stay; the staff and Paul Richer want to stay; and it is very probable that the Lakefield Boat Company will stay.

But that, as Mr. Richer said, is something for the future.

Confusion Said To Exist On Proposed Swing Shifts

How long will it last? That's the $64 question today as the strike of Quaker Oats Co. production employees enters its 10th day here and in Saskatoon with negotiations for a settlement still stalemated. Indications were that the strike would be a long one. While pickets patrolled outside the local plant in a steady downpour of rain today, union officials were making preparations for what they predicted would be at least a month-long strike and were devising ways and means of supplementing workers' loss of income.

ORGANIZE A RAFFLE

The strikers' welfare committee under Herb Hennessy have organized a raffle and assistance was being sought from the United Automobile Workers in Oshawa and all other CIO-CCL locals throughout Ontario.

Meanwhile, various merchants have waived instalment payments for the duration of the strike and bread and milk companies have said they are willing to give credit to the strikers. Free haircuts are being given by some barbers to strikers who are their regular customers.

The union takes the stand that the chief issues in the strike are their demand for basic wage rates of $1.39½ an hour, the equivalent rates for workers in the Robin Hood and Maple Leaf mills in Port Colborne, and time-and-a-half pay for working Saturdays.

STANDS BY OFFER

The company is standing by its offer to accept the recommendations contained in the majority report of a conciliation board which would bring the basic rate to $1.33½ by January 1, 1954, with a 40-hour week and swing shifts if necessary.

Employees of the Saskatoon plant are not affected by the conciliation board's recommendations. Their original request was for a general across-the-board wage increase of 10 per cent and a 40-hour week retroactive to February 1. The company agreed to a 40-hour week effective next September with no reduction in take-home pay.

SWING SHIFTS

Local company officials say that there seems to have been some confusion about the proposed swing shifts.

Swing shifts under the 40- hour week would involve no change in schedule in the package department, oat mill, puffed goods, cornflakes, muffets and paste good departments, bag factory, pipe shop and mechanical departments, the company said. The work week in these departments would be from Monday to Friday.

There would be no changes in the present schedules of the electrical and hydraulic departments and the boiler room, other than increasing staff to take care of reduced hours. The same would apply to night watchmen.

In the flour and feed mills, swing shifts will not be needed before the company has business for more than five 24-hour days a week.

Bulk storage is planned for the flour mill. When this is completed, very few employees will be involved in swing shifts, according to the company, and then only after the mill has run five 24-hour days in a week.

NEW FEED MILL

The company estimates that the new feed mill will be completed not later than December 31. When it is completed, swing shifts will not be necessary in this department.

There would be no change in the schedule of the shipping department unless the flour and feed mills operate six days a week. Employees handling products from these departments would then go on a six-day schedule. There would be no change in the elevator schedule except for employees delivering grain to the flour and feed mills, if and when the mills go on a six-day week, when one employee would also be required to work Saturday in the laboratory.

A six-day week would be maintained in the feed store where employees could usually choose what day off they wanted to make a five-day week.

PUC Won't Assume Cost Of Laying Main To Downer's Corners Area

Commission Rejects Plea From City Council For Second Time On $50,811 Job; Waddell Proposes Debentures For Project

Despite an earnest plea by a delegation from city council and a letter from Mayor Hugh Waddell, the Peterborough Utilities Commission has refused to assume the cost of laying a trunk water main to the Downer's Corners area. The PUC is sticking to the unanimous opinion expressed two weeks ago when it was reported the cost of water service to Downer's Corners and the surrounding community in or abutting the city would be $78,404.13. If the service were extended to include township residents in the area, it would cost another $29,425.

Biggest item in the project woud be a trunk feeder costing $50,811 which the city would like the PUC's waterworks department to pay for out of general funds with consumers in the area financing extensions to their property.

At Friday's PUC meeting the commissioners reiterated their previous decision that they were willing to undertake the project if the city pays for the trunk feeder main.

MAYOR SENT LETTER

In a letter read at the meeting Mayor Waddell proposed that the project be financed by debentures issued by the waterworks department and paid off out of the water rates. His personal opinion was that this method of financing would probably receive public support.

General-manager W. Howard Powell estimated that this would cost each consumer in the city about 60 cents a year.

City Clerk E. A. Outram suggested that, if city council asked the PUC, by a special resolution, to undertake the project as a favor, it would take the onus off the PUC of the responsibility for constructing the main on any other than a straightforward economic basis.

He admitted that the question had become especially urgent with the purchase of an industrial site in the area by H. B. McGinness but said that it was not a new problem.

"There is a group of people out there who have been part of the city since 1905," he said. "They haven't received the services enjoyed by other citizens but have been paying taxes. We hoped you would consider it a necessary development to round out the development in other parts of the city."

FIRE PROTECTION

Mr. Miller said that the people in the Downer's Corners area were mainly concerned with fire protection. He said they had no water for fire protection and he didn't think this was fair to them.

Both Mr. Outram and Mr. Miller were of the opinion that the area south of the highway would be developed if water was supplied to it and that Armour Rd. might also be developed. Mr. Chalmers said that if the main were laid along Armour Rd. there would be a demand for water west of the road.

"There's not a thought in any one of our minds that there shouldn't be water down there," Commissioner Dr. G. R. Langley said, "but we should not be the people who decide to take the venture. I think the city council are the people to do it and that means financing it."

"You have the full resources of the city behind you," Mr. Outram said, "and if it didn't work out then you could expect a portion of it to come from the general rate.

"We think that the water users are in a better position as water users than the same people as tax payers to pay for this. Thanks to the PUC, the city has the best and cheapest water service in the province. But taxes have gone up and people wouldn't mind water rates going up as much as they would taxes," the City Clerk said.

"I think there's an advantage in holding down water rates in attracting industry even if the tax rate was to go up a bit," Dr. Langley said.

When the delegation left, after an interview lasting more than an hour, the commission unanimousy carried a motion by Dr. Langley that the PUC continue its past practice of obtaining sufficient revenue to pay for any proposed expansion of services and left the question of financing the proposed project up to city council.

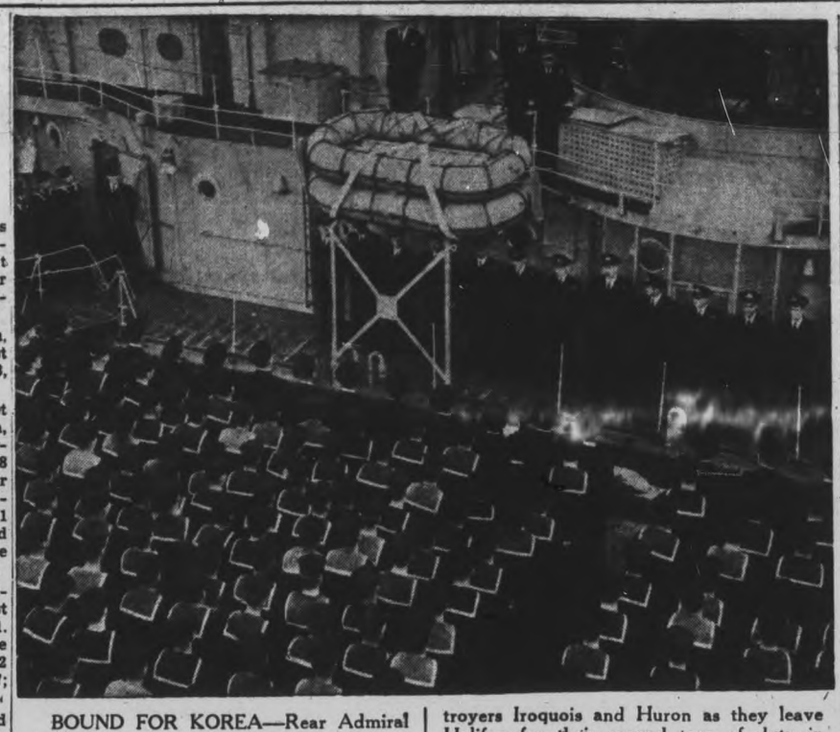
City Accidents Increase By 32 Per Cent



There were 352 traffic accidents in Peterborough last year, an increase of almost 32 per cent over 1951, according to statistics prepared by the Ontario Department of Highways.

Compared to Peterborough, Kingston had 611 accidents last year, Brantford 225, Oshawa 123, and Kitchener 467.

Total number of accidents last year in the district of Durham, Northumberland, Victoria, Peterborough and Haliburton was 1,978 or 3.4 per cent of the total for the province, 58,515, and an increase for the district of 15.1 per cent over 1951, as compared to the average increases in the entire province of 6.5 per cent.

There were three persons fatally injured in Peterborough last year compared to two in 1951. Figures for cities of comparable size of fatal accidents in 1952 were: Brantford, 3; Kingston, 7; Kitchener, 6, and Oshawa, 3.

Ninety persons were injured non-fatally in Peterborough in 1952 as compared with 83 the previous year. Other figures for 1952 were: Brantford, 82;; Kingston, 184; Kitchener, 230; Oshawa, 101. The total for the province last year was 8,977.

Prairies Begin Spring Seeding

Spring seeding has begun on the southern front of the prairie provinces and in that belt should be fairly general next week, according to the first weekly crop report by CNR.

Seeding dates are two weeks later than in 1952. The acreage of the five major crops will probably show little change from last year. Weather has been cool and cloudy in central Saskatchewan where seeding operations have commenced at various points on light soil. If conditions improve, seeding in Saskatchewan might be general by May 10.

Compared with previous years, moisture is somewhat below normal. Little work has been done in northern Saskatchewan.

Seeding has not been begun in central Alberta nor in the Edmonton and Peace River districts. Pratically no field work has been done in the Peace River.

Market Prices Climb Again But New Decline Foreseen

By HARRY KINGDON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

A few smiles appeared around the Toronto stock exchange this week.

For the first time in a month, stock market prices showed a healthy rise on the week. Industrials were up almost six points on the index compiled by the exchange and base metals showed a 3½-point rise.

But the question still remained: "How long will it last?"

The four indexes this week rose an average of 2.53 points. Between March 27—the Friday before the "peace scare" decline started—and April 24, the industrial, base metal and western oil indexes dropped an average of 16.23 points. Golds were up 1.33 in that time.

EXPECT FURTHER DIP

A few observers expect to see the market regain lost ground in a short time, but most look for a further dip or only a slight rise.

Some base their views on the possibility of a "return to protection" in the United States. They fear the U.S. will restrict imports instead of encouraging them.

The bulls—those who look for higher prices—say that the "corrective decline" has made so many stocks attractive in terms of dividends paid on them that a rise is inevitable.

They point out that about a month ago, the yield on industrial common stocks was about 5¼ per cent of the purchase price. The yield then on industrial bonds was about 4½ per cent. Dividends have remained fairly constant and stocks now should yield a higher rate, and attract investment money from bonds.

MILD RECOVERY

The mild recovery started last week continued Monday in Toronto and Montreal, but prices turned mixed in Toronto Tuesday while Montreal kept going. The rise continued Wednesday, turned mixed Thursday in both centres and moved on again in Toronto Friday. Montreal closed mixed.

In New York, a slow rise started Monday and continued until prices slipped Thursday.

From Friday to Friday the Toronto exchange indexes showed industrials up 5.71 at 308.38, golds up .56 at 79.03, base metals up 3.44 at 157.49 and western oils up .41 at 114.32.

In the Montreal averages banks were down .48 at 32.22, utilities down .1 at 92.9, industrials up 2.8 at 188.2, combined up 1.9 at 156.5, papers up 13.14 at 652.90 and golds up 3.26 at 62.71.

On the New York market, the Associated Press average of 60 stocks was up $1.60 at 109.00.

Fears National Health Insurance To Be Brought In By Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP)—George Hees (PC—Toronto Broadview), in a House of Commons exchange with Health Minister Martin, said Friday night he could only conclude that the government is going to bring in national health insurance by order-in-council between dissolution of Parliament and the next election.

He said he could only conclude that because the minister would not make a direct denial.

Speaking during a debate on health, Mr. Hees said he was surprised the minister has not called a conference with provincial health ministers and the medical profession to talk about health insurance. That is the only way a plan would ever be worked out.

DON'T WANT IT

He was convinced Canadians did not want "state medicine." The doctors were for health insurance of the right kind but not the "straightjacket" of state medicine.

Mr. Martin said he had a meeting with Canadian Medical Association representatives about five weeks ago.

Mr. Hees said then Mr. Martin should let provincial health ministers in on such conferences. The Ontario minister of health had told him that Mr. Martin had never talked it over with him.

Mr. Martin said he was sure the Ontario minister never made that statement.

Mr. Hees insisted the Ontario minister had told him Mr. Martin had never sat down and talked over health insurance with the provinces.

QUITE WRONG

"That is quite wrong," replied Mr. Martin.

Mr. Hees said then if there had been meetings, the Ontario health minister had certainly no impressions from it.

Mr. Martin said there was "continuous collaboration" on the matter, not only with Ontario but with other provinces. He had talked to a number of provincial premiers.

Mr. Hees said there were "rumors" the government was going to spring national health insurance by order of the cabinet between the time Parliament dissolved and the federal election, as it had done with some tax cuts just before the 1949 election.

He wanted a direct "yes" or "no" answer from the minister.

Mr. Martin said Mr. Hees should know "this government is not an order-in-council government."

Canadian Defence Buildup Still Necessity—Campney

MIDLAND (CP)—Apparently unimpressed by recent Soviet overtures, Associate Defence Minister Ralph Campney said Friday night the buildup of Canadian defence remains an urgent necessity and described Russia as a would-be dictator of the world.

In an address prepared for the opening of a new armory here, he didn't mention the Soviet overtures but did discuss Russia's policy in as tough language as a Canadian cabinet minister has used in some time.

He said:

"The strengthening of Canada's defences against aggression is the greatest and most urgent task that faces the Canadian people and the Canadian government today.

"The preservation of our way of life, of our democratic institutions, of our very liberty and freedom itself depends, make no mistake about that, solely on our ability, in collaboration with our Allies, to successfully repel aggression should we be faced with such a dire event. . . .

DESTRUCTIVE MENACE

"Communism is a destructive menace that is at one and the same time boring from within and pressing from without. I do not believe that this false doctrine will ever make headway in Canada because of the deep rooted instincts of our people and because in the free play of ideas and the free expression of thought, which operate in this country, truth will prevail over error and false doctrine. . . .

"But aggression from abroad is another matter. . . Should any foreign power resort to force to intimidate or overcome either ourselves or any other free nation with which we are associated, we are bound to resist such aggression by force and we must be prepared to do so effectively and successfully."

Fear Laos Invasion Threat To Malaya

By WILLIAM PARROTT

SINGAPORE (Reuters) — The Communist sweep through Laos has ignited fears here that its eventual objective is rubber-rich Malaya and conquest of Southeast Asia.

Failure of French forces to halt the 19-day offensive in Indo-China has already given a boost to Communist prestige in Southeast Asian countries.

Qualified British sources said the key to Communist intentions may lie in the formation two months ago of an "autonomous people's government" of Thai nationality in the South China province of Yunnan. This could serve as the nucleus of a Southeast Asian state embracing parts of Burma, Thailand, Indo-China and China.

HOLDS APPEAL

The sources said such a state might appeal to thousands of people of Thai origin scattered in this fringe area whose boundaries have never been clearly drawn.

On the map, the southernmost tip of Yunnan points a gnarled finger into Indo-China and south through Laos to Thailand and Malaya. Touching the finger on the west is the Burmese Shan state of Kengtung.

One source said the "autonomous government" will probably agitate for a "free Thai movement" in all the neighboring states and might even call upon the Vietminh forces of Indo-China to serve as "volunteers" in helping to liberate the area.

It was understood here that Britain has repeatedly warned the Thailand government in the last eight months to prepare for a possible Communist invasion. Earlier this week, Communist China's radio accused Premier Pibul Songgram's government of preparing to invade Indo-China under French and American guidance.

One Forest Fire Burning Near Sault

TORONTO (CP)—One forest fire was burning in Ontario today, in the Sault Ste. Marie district.

The department of lands and forests said that during the last 24 hours, six fires, including one 500-acre blaze in the Fort Frances district, were put out.

The department said bush travel increased today with the opening of the trout season, and warned fishermen to make sure campfires were extinguished.

NATURE SCHOOL—A school where a student can run off looking for birds' nests and wildflowers and not play hookey will be conducted this July—as for the past 14 years—at Camp Billie Bear in the Muskoka district 150 miles north of Toronto. Sponsored by the Federation of Ontario Naturalists, the instructors are biologists and university professors. The students, 50 to 75, have included locomotive engineers, farmers and taxi drivers. Here Ruth Stewart, Shirley Donely and Margaret Ghent, all of Toronto, study aquatic life.

Naturalists Plan School In Huntsville District

HUNTSVILLE, Ont. (CP)—At Canada's strangest school in this Muskoka district, 150 miles north of Toronto, students this summer will proudly bring snakes and dead mice to their teachers instead of apples—and the teachers will like it.

Toronto headquarters of the Federation of Ontario Naturalists have announced that the federation's 15th annual summer nature school will be held again this July at Camp Billie Bear.

A combination vacation and practical summer course in natural history and conservation, it is the only school in Canada where a student can run off looking for birds' nests or wildflowers and not play hookey. For it has no desks or formal classes. Most of its instruction is in the form of daily hikes through the bush with experienced naturalist guides instructing the students.

TWO WEEK SCHOOL

The school lasts two weeks. The instructors are biologists and university professors. The students, 50 to 75 each year, have included all walks of life from locomotive engineers and doctors to farmers and taxi drivers. Most of them are amateur naturalists. School teachers, scout leaders and camp counsellors who want the training to help them in their work with youth predominate in the classes.

Dr. W. W. H. Gunn, executive director of the federation, says the school was established when a survey showed that few school teachers and youth workers had the practical outdoor experience in nature study necessary to make nature training interesting for children.

Students learn to recognize plants trees, birds and bird songs, but the school's main lesson is an awareness of the vast inter-related pattern of growth and life which binds rocks, soil, water, plants, animals and man together into one broad inter-dependent unit, Dr. Gunn said. They learn that man is a part of nature, not an outsider who can ignore the processes that keep the world of nature in balance.

ACTIVE STUDENTS

There are courses for beginners and more advanced courses for students who wish to specialize in one field such as birds or botany. Many attend for vacation, but it isn't exactly a hammock-snoozing type of holiday. Sometimes the instruction hikes begin at 6 a.m. and the students take breakfast to cook on the trail. Sometimes there are after-dark hikes in search of owls.

The school doesn't try to make scientists out of its students, but it does strive to instill the scientific habit of basing judgments on verified facts instead of hearsay.

"False ideas regarding wildlife can spring up faster than mushrooms after a rainstorm," warns Prof. A. F. Coventry, the chief instructor.

"When you hear that snakes milk cows, look into the facts," he tells his class. "And one of the first facts you'll discover is that snakes have bony jaws fitted only for biting. They couldn't use their mouths for sucking if they wanted to."

The naturalists have been going to Camp Billie Bear for several years now, but Lt.-Col. William A. Kelsall, camp owner and host, a non-naturalist, still thinks they are an amusing lot. He says he'll never get accustomed to seeing attractive young girls wading up to their thighs in bogs catching aquatic insects, or skinning mice for museum specimens.

The strangest of all, he says, is the girl who periodically attends and spends most of her time crawling on her hands and knees in the grass holding a rubber syringe with which she is busily sucking up insects too small to be collected by her fingers.

No Country Greater Future Retiring Ambassador Says

By DOUGLAS HOW
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP)—The dean of Ottawa's diplomatic corps says six years in this capital have allowed him to watch the burgeoning of a new Canadian sense of national pride and confidence and a well-founded feeling that "this country is going places."

Rt. Hon. Francis Michael Forde not only thinks Canada is going places but, he said in an interview, she has lessons to teach his own Australia.

The 62-year-old former cabinet minister, school teacher and engineer came here in January, 1947, as Australia's high commissioner. He has done an able job of telling Canadians about Australia.

LEAVES MAY 15

He sails for home, by way of London, May 15, with the idea back of his mind of telling Australians about Canada; of trying to increase contacts between the two countries and of letting it be known that Canada has things to teach Australia, mainly industrial development.

His successor, Sir Douglas Copland, is due here May 19.

In his six years and four months, Mr. Forde has travelled throughout Canada and into the north, has spoken countless times to audiences ranging from provincial legislatures to church groups; has put three daughters through Canadian universities and has seen two of them marry here.

Few, if any, envoys have ever worked harder in making their country known to Canadians.

The son of Irish immigrants, he belongs to the Labor party and was Australian prime minister for a brief period in 1945. He has no immediate plans other than to attend the Coronation. As an imperial Privy Councillor, he and his wife will sit in the abbey.

His term here was extended—and by a Liberal-Country party government he had opposed for years before becoming a diplomat.

Mr. Forde said he and his wife and family now feel that although their first allegiance is to Australia they regard Canada as a second home and look upon it "as one of the greatest countries in the world."

"No country has a greater future than Canada," he said. "She has the culture of the old world and the vigor of the new."

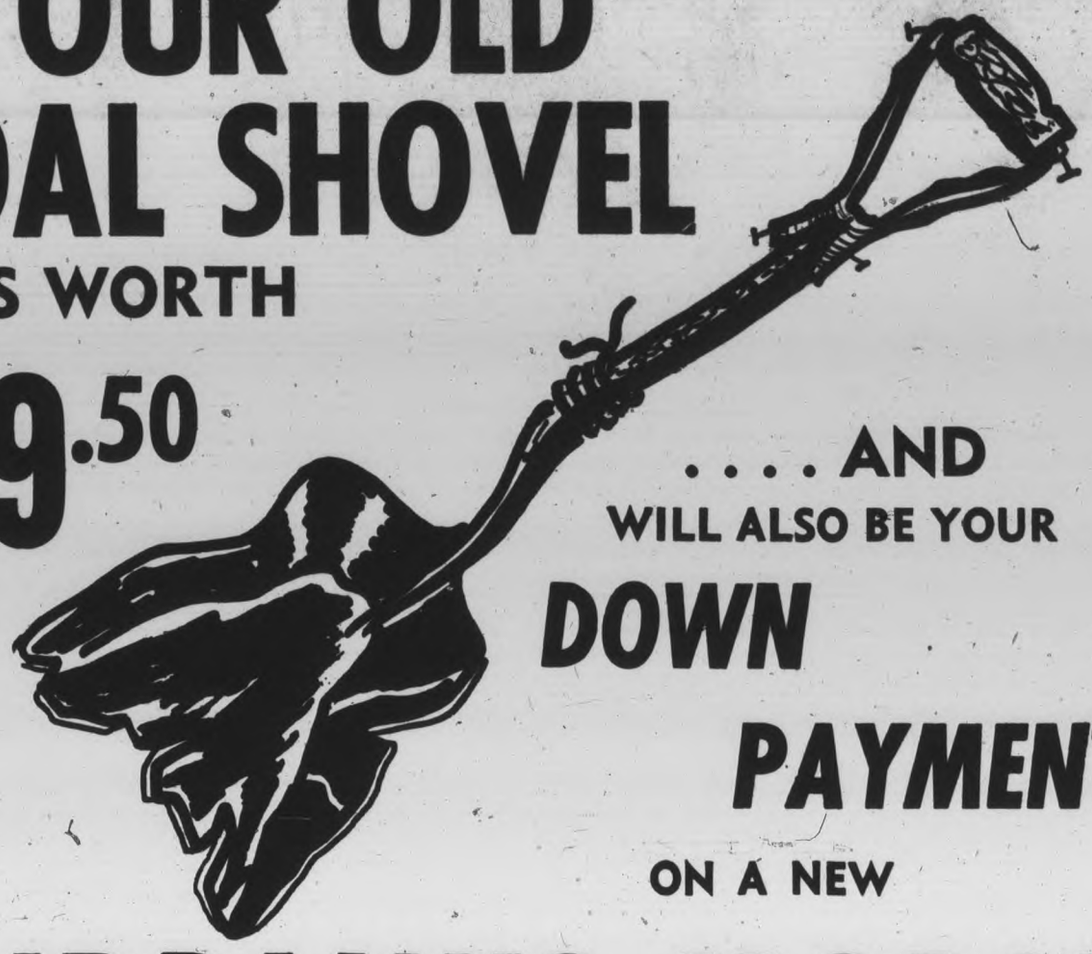
He has seen at first hand the historic events that have changed Canada greatly in the last six years; the oil developments in Alberta; the entry of Newfoundland into confederation; the passing of the Mackenzie King era and the industrial boom.

"PIVOTS OF FUTURE"

"Canadians in that time have developed a national pride and confidence and they rightly feel that they are going places. Their country and mine are the two pivots of the future of the Commonwealth. Canada occupies a unique position today and I frankly admit that Australia has something to learn from our older sister."

Mr. Forde even got so that he didn't mind the Canadian winters and he doesn't go for the theory that Canadians are dull. He indicated that no country that produces mayors with the color packed by Ottawa's Charlotte Whitton, Montreal's Camillien Houde, Toronto's Allan Lamport and Calgary's Don Mackay can be considered dull.

A daughter Marcia was married in 1951 to Alex Ferrier, an architect, and they are going to Australia with the family. Another daughter, Mary, was married in April to Dr. W. R. Thompson and they will live in Montreal. A third daughter, Clare, is also going home with her parents.



Their son, Francis Gerard, will remain behind briefly to complete his senior matriculation at St. Patrick's College.

DEAN GOES HOME—Rt. Hon. and Mrs. Francis Michael Forde are going home to Australia via the Coronation after more than six years in Ottawa. Mr. Forde, former Australian cabinet minister, was dean of the diplomatic corps in Ottawa for the last year of an extended term as his country's high commissioner.

YW Gym Work Displayed

Gym work at the YWCA has for the past season been in charge of new physical director Miss Bea Pelsis. On Friday evening, Miss Pelsis presented a revue of this work at the Brock Ballroom for an audience of nearly 900.

The program was titled "Fun and Frolic Around the World" and was designed to demonstrate the folk dances of various countries which she has been teaching. The costumes for these numbers were typical of the countries, but of them all perhaps the most appreciated were the American Indians. These war - whooping young people of the five to eight year gym class made a noisy entrance over slides typifying the hills of this country.

The audience applauded loudest for the Scandinavian style club swingers when they presented their routine in a totally darkened hall with only luminous club tips, bands on their tunics and ankle straps visible. This rhythmic number was by an advanced gym class which has had some years of experience in club swinging.

Advanced gymnasts were also good in a classic dance for which they wore Greek style bare shoulder tunics and gold leaf headdresses. They took part also in a gay folk dance of the Baltic States and in the grand finale they were having fun in a Virginia Reel.

The children were free and easy on the floor and did their parts very well. They perhaps drew the most attention in the French Minuet number when little girls in adorable off-the-shoulder gowns were brought onto the floor riding on little wagons drawn by their partners who were in tight, knee-pant suits to match. After they had circled the floor the girls dismounted and the couples did a pretty little dance. They are members of the five to eight-year-old dancing class.

Guests on the program were boys from the YMCA who did three acts. First was a strength and precision demonstration on parallel bars, which is practised in Denmark. This was by four senior boys, two of whom later demonstrated the art of fencing. Juniors appeared as clowns for tumbling directed by Fraser Wade.

Another number that was enthusiastically applauded was by the business girls' gym class when they donned divided skirts and Latin American headgear to make their hip-reducing exercises more entertaining.

Miss Pelsis was assisted in this presentation by the children's mothers, members of the Y health education committee and the Gym Auxiliary, and the Lions' Club provided ticket takers and ushers. Pianist was Mrs. E. G. Walton, violinist Mrs. Eveline Foster, and Ken Hotston was the drummer. The stage was hung with flags of many of the United Nations.

CARTWHEELS BACK

LONDON, Eng.—The cartwheel is back for wear with summer prints. The crown in some cases is folded to simulate the lines of a hub. These large models are made in lace to match an Ascot suit, in filmy pastel gauze straw, in firm pedal straw, in patterned prints of summer dresses, or in scarlet to match lining and accessories.

Shirley Wood Weds Kenneth P. Bell

At St. George's Anglican Church at seven o'clock Friday evening, Shirley June Wood, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Wood, of Peterborough, became the bride of Kenneth Percival Bell, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. V. Bell, of Lindsay.

The Rev. H. J. Scuse, rector, performed the marriage ceremony. A background of pink snapdragon with standards of ferns was at the altar. Wedding music was played by Mr. Keith Morden and during the signing of the register, Mr. Ronald Magahay sang "O Perfect Love."

The bride was gowned in white. Her full skirt had a sweep of Chantilly lace and net over lustrous satin and the lace was gathered in scallops at the sides to form a graceful Elizabethan flounce. The slim bodice had a long winsome Elizabethan collar and tiny covered buttons fastened it to the waist. Long sleeves were tapered to a point at the wrists. She wore a pearl-studded satin Juliet cap and a fingertip veil and she carried a white prayer book marked with lily of the valley.

Mr. Wood gave his daughter in marriage and she was attended by Miss Phyllis Bell. A simple gown of mauve taffeta covered with soft mauve eyelet was worn by Miss Bell. It was gathered at the waist with a sash and she wore a wreath of mauve flowers as her headdress. Her bouquet was of sweet peas and carnations.

The groomsman was Mr. Maurice Bell and ushers were Morley Bell and Peter Boothroid.

The bride's mother chose a gown in coronation blue and pink and navy accessories, and she wore a corsage of deep pink carnations. The groom's mother was dressed in mauve and she wore black accessories, and her corsage was white carnations.

After the reception, the bridal couple left on a honeymoon trip to points north including Chapleau. When going away, the bride wore a soft blue suit with navy accessories and a dainty pink flowered hat and her jewellery was an heirloom pendant.

They will make their home at 300 Wolfe St. on return.

Spring Brings Asparagus – Enjoy It

We have less appetite for heavy meals. For this reason, and because there is nothing that tastes so good to us as fresh asparagus, we may decide practically to make a meal of it. This is the time that we like it particularly well served on toast with a cream sauce. Of course, everyone likes deluxe Hollandaise sauce when the asparagus serves as an accessory to a meal.

While most people consider thick stalks the finest, others prefer the fresh thin stalks that are often less expensive. Just be sure that the tender heads are not bruised and that the stalks are not withered.

For cooking in the boiler, the trimmed stalks are re-tied and immersed in boiling salted water. The top of the double boiler is used as a cover.

For the skillet method, use an inch of boiling salted water in a large skillet. Arrange the stalks in this, cover them and boil over medium heat until tender. After draining, dress the asparagus with butter or with a sauce.

ASPARAGUS WITH CREAMY SAUCE

2 pounds asparagus
3 tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons flour
¾ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon paprika
⅛ teaspoon nutmeg
1½ cups milk
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 egg yolk.

Cook asparagus, according to directions, and drain. While asparagus is cooking, melt butter. Stir in flour, salt, paprika and nutmeg. When well blended, add milk gradually while stirring over low heat. When sauce thickens, combine lemon juice with egg yolk and stir into sauce. Yield: Four servings.

FOOLPROOF HOLLANDAISE

2 egg yolks
1 stick butter
1 tablespoon lemon juice
Dash Tobasco.

Break egg yolks into small saucepan. Add ½ the butter and the lemon juice. Stir over hot water, holding the pan over the water in a large saucepan. When butter is melted, add remaining butter and continue stirring just until sauce thickens. Beat in Tobasco and serve at once. Yield: Four servings.

Marion Rawson Is Queen Of P.N.S. Coronation Ball

Coronation year graduates of the Peterborough Normal School may well be recorded as having had the finest Spring Prom at PNS. Indeed, they are the first to have selected from their ranks a "Queen" and honored her with gifts.

Miss Marion Rawson was voted "Queen of the Ball" by her fellow students in a secret ballot taken Thursday. So secret was the vote that even she did not know of her good fortune until the crowning ceremony was due.

Principal Mr. Leo Copp placed the crown and presented the queen with gifts of flowers and a lovely compact mounted with the school crest.

It was most fitting that Miss Rawson be queen since she was responsible for the outstanding decorations prepared for this Coronation Ball. Ideas originating in current stories of the coronation proceedings to take place June 2nd were transferred to paper by art students and became four huge murals for the ballroom.

The murals portray the crowning of Queen Elizabeth II, her taking of the oath, the Duke of Edinburgh paying homage and a scene from the coronation procession. They are most colorful with all the royal robes and jewels represented.

A reproduction of Windsor Castle entrance as the stage setting was the final unique touch, and the orchestra men found themselves sitting on the "drawbridge."

Over-all was a contoured ceiling of red, white and blue streamers, and lighting was effectively arranged to show off the very charming young ladies in their formal gowns in this setting. Programs with blue and white covers inscribed in gold and decorated with flags were prepared by the students for souvenirs of the event. All of this work was done in spare time.

Miss Erma Burris, president of the Student Council, was on hand to receive the guests, assisted by her escort Mr. Ray Downey, Dean Mrs. H. C. Turner and Mr. Turner and Mr. C. E. Potts of the teaching staff and Mrs. Potts. On entering the lounge a welcome was given by Council members Miss Carol MacArthur and Gerald Edwards, Miss Evelyn Doherty and Ron Davidson, and they presented the programs.

Program conveners were Miss Ruth Foster and Robert Hill and Mr. Hill was master of ceremonies for the evening. Chairman of the arrangement committee was Gerald Edwards and he was assisted by Miss Doherty and Miss Marie Sharpe who is vice president of the council. Others on the decoration committee with Miss Rawson were Miss Helen Bowen and Mr. Eugene McDonald.

Refreshments were served at midnight in the third floor ballroom. Miss Kay Neilson was chairman of this committee with Miss Rosemary VanLuven and Miss Adele Sheehy her assistants.

The students and their guests attending were:

Miss Erma Burris and Roy Downey, Miss Rosemary Van Luven and Bill Vine, Miss Kaye Neilson and Bill Ramsay, Miss Sue Bowen and Hugh Sharpe, Bill Nicholls and Miss Joanne Curtis, Ron Davidson and Miss Evelyn Doherty, Carl Reid and Miss Anne Anderson, Jim Wagg and Miss Grace Nicholson, Miss Sylvia Dickens and Bob Anglin, Miss Marilyn Walker and Bob Purcell, Miss Ruth Foster and Doug Crawford, Doug Exley and Mrs. Exley, Miss Marian McKinlay and Sam Davidson, Miss Loreen Linton and Chris Beatty, Miss Joan Walden and Steve Kane, Miss Marie Sharpe and Murray Locke, Miss Greta Snowden and Carl Schwartz, Miss Shirley Austni and Carl Ingebertson, Miss Shirly Campbell and Morris Lord, Miss Audrey Newell and Don Wilson, Miss Shirley Creighton and Jack Hogarth, Miss Marion MacCrimmon and Howard MacMunn, Miss Elaine Jones and Eric Beebe, Gerald Edwards and Miss Carole MacArthur, Mrs. Keith Pilkington and Mr. Pilkington, Miss Evelyn Goheen and Keith Shackleton, Miss Mona Pierson and Ray Thomas, Miss Eleanor Crough and Bobby Young, Miss Barbara Allen and Jack Lynden, Miss Helen Cowper and Cecil Jibb, Miss Joan Brown and Paul Cowan.

DOROTHY DIX:

Girls Too Scarce In Bush Men Remain Bachelors

DEAR MISS DIX: You frequently say that girls and women outnumber men and boys, but I assure you such is not the case where I live. In British Columbia boys outnumber girls at least 5 to 1. I play for dances in two school districts, and in my 30 years' attendance at these affairs I've never seen enough girls to go around. Many classes in school are entirely male.

I guess the cities have more females, because women just don't like the rugged life of the country. I've always wanted to get married, but with girls so scarce I didn't have a chance. Now I'm 46 and I guess my matrimonial ideas can be given up.

L. D.

ANSWER: You are undoubtedly correct in your assumption that the ladies prefer urban convenience to pioneering in a wilderness, although the idea of being a sought-after female among so many men certainly should appeal to quite a number of women.

BRIGHT LIGHTS VS. COUNTRY AIR

Are you men doing anything to make your surroundings more appealing to women? Surely if you took steps to bring modern conveniences into the community, then did a good job of press-agenting your neck of the woods, some gals might be induced to forsake the bright lights of a big town for fresh country air.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: My son has been married to a fine girl for six years, and they have two children, a four-year-old and an infant of six months. My son has no patience with the old child. If the youngster doesn't obey instantly, or does something his father doesn't like, my son hits him on the head with open hand. He's been doing this since the child was able to walk. My son always had a good home life, and my husband and I can't understand this attitude.

MRS. M. W.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: If your son will listen to the opinion of anyone—doctor, minister, you or your husband—let him know that he's on the way to doing irreparable physical harm to his child. Hard slaps on the head might result in a boy becoming blind, deaf or even mentally deficient. The child's mother certainly should step in and take steps to force her husband to cease this senseless punishing. Her passive disapproval is almost as much to blame as her husband's temper. Soon he'll begin the same tactics on the baby, so measures had better be taken now to teach the man some self-control.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: Recently I wrote asking you for the name and address of a lady who had written to your column. You replied that her letter had been anonymous, and further information was not available. This I know to be an untruth, since papers never print unsigned letters.

J. D. N.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: I'm sorry you doubt my veracity, but nevertheless, my statement to you was correct. That particular letter, along with many hundreds I receive each week, was unsigned. It's true that certain departments of a paper will not print anonymous letters, but this rule does not apply to columns such as this. The very nature of some people's problems makes them wish to observe anonymity in writing to me, although, as I often state, real names are never used in this column.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: Please tell me who is wrong. I usually come home and ask my wife if she'd like to go to a show, or go to dinner and she always answers that it's up to me. She make me feel that the only reason she goes with me is to please me.

TOM B.

ANSWER: Your wife certainly should show some enthusiasm over your projects. She doesn't know how lucky she is to be invited out so often. There is a possibility that she thinks you're only asking to please her, and would actually rather stay home yourself. Try to iron out these differences with her and find out why she is indifferent. Probably it's just that a display of enthusiasm is not natural to her.

Readers' Saturday Column by Mary Moore

QUESTION: Can you put in your daily column a recipe for the syrup for honey-dipped doughnuts. I make raised doughnuts once a week for the family but can't get the syrup right. . . .Your Daily Reader.

ANSWER: You may be using too much honey. Try this.

GLAZE FOR HONEY-DIPPED DOUGHNUTS

To ¼ cup boiling water add 2 level tablespoons honey and mix. Now add 1 cup icing sugar and stir until mixed. While this glaze is warm dip the warm doughnuts in it. You may have to keep the glaze warm by standing the bowl in large bowl containing hot water. Allow glazed doughnuts to drain and dry on cake rack.

QUESTION: It was a pleasure to read the request and recipe for dandelion wine. . . since coming to Canada I have often been impressed by the scarcity of wine recipes and I wondered whether the Canadians were puritanical or the British decadent. . . I have not tried the accompanying recipe (see below) but I propose to do so this year. I have however, used a number of recipes from the same source with great success, and feel pretty sure that it is not a very mild wine.

DANDELION WINE

(Contributed by Helena J.)

Three quarts flowers, 1 gallon water, 3 lbs. sugar, rind and pulp of 2 lemons and 1 orange, 1 cake yeast, 1 lb. raisins (seeds in, if possible). Flowers should be freshly gathered, picked off stalks, and put in large crock. Boil water, pour over flowers and leave for 3 days, stirring each day. Cover crock with butter basin. On fourth day add sugar and rinds (only) of lemons and orange. Turn into pan and boil for 1 hour. Return to crock and add pulp of lemon and orange. When cool add yeast. Leave covered for 3 more days; strain and bottle. The bottles should be not quite filled, and the raisins are equally distributed among them. Do not cork tightly till fermentation stops. (Wine if made in May or June is good at Christmas.) Helena J.

ANSWER: Thank you very much Helena. I certainly think Britishers are anything but decadent, any good thing that is.

QUESTION: Do you have the recipe for Chocolate Cups? They are made from chocolate and shortening, moulded on paper baking cups. When solid they are filled with ice cream. Could you give me the amounts of each ingredient and the proper method of molding.—Mrs. H. O.

ANSWER: This was a new idea to me so I had to try it. I used semi-sweet chocolate—a ½-lb. bar. When it was melted I mixed it with a fork. I buttered small fluted paper baking cups and poured about 2 or 2½ tablespoons of the chocolate into each one and tipped them to make it coat the sides to within ⅛ inch of the top. Then I let them stand until cold. Pete was delighted to go and buy ice cream and try scoops of it in them. Thanks for a new idea. I hope this is what you had in mind.

QUESTION: I like reading your column and although I am diabetic I enjoy it just the same. I would like to know how you would put sauerkraut up in jars to use later on. I made too much and am afraid it will go bad before we can use it up. G. G. C.

ANSWER: Sauerkraut is unpredictable for so many different organisms are present due to the original fermentation and the bacteria present due to storage that it must be heated to above 180 deg. F. or preferably boiling in your case, and packed into sterile jars, with a headspace of ½ inch, sealed, screwing tops to within ⅛ turn of tight, and processed in hot water bath 20 minutes for pints, 30 minutes for quarts.

QUESTION: Would you please give. . . a recipe for pineapple Jam. . . since pineapples are now on the market may we have this as soon as you have time and space for it. Mary R. R.

ANSWER: Pineapple contains an enzyme which prevents jelling when it is raw, so be sure to follow the recipe exactly.

PINEAPPLE JAM

Two lbs. fresh chopped or ground pineapple (4 wellpacked cups), 7½ cups sugar, 1 8-oz. bottle commercial liquid pectin. Finely chop or grind pineapple saving juice, and add sugar to it. Bring to boil over very high heat stirring until it boils hard for a full minute. Remove from heat and stir in pectin for 1 minute. Skim off any scum and pour into sterile jars, and seal OR cover at once with new hot paraffin, adding second coating when cold.

MUNICIPAL CHAPTER

At the meeting of Peterborough Municipal Chapter, IODE, held Wednesday evening, Regent Miss Mary Medd gave a general report of the recent Provincial Chapter annual meeting. She spoke particularly of the need to continue educational work, stating there has been an increased interest in the adoption of schools with 34 new schools adopted in the province this year. Items placed in the schools by the chapters were valued at more than $4,000.

A high student aid total of $44,000 was mentioned in her report and this included assistance to 135 students, 167 bursaries and 93 scholarships as well as interest-free loans to students.

Miss Medd said that chapters are urged to be guided in planning next year's work by a proposed budget, allowing 35 per cent for education, 30 per cent for services at home and abroad and eight per cent for immigration and Canadianization. This is considerable increased support of educational projects she remarked.

The at home and abroad department had ended its first year since absorbing several departments and Miss Medd reported that voluntary services carried out were in clinics of various kinds, maintaining hospital cots and equipping some four-bed wards in hospitals, donating linens and other needed equipment to general, children's and veterans' hospitals, sanatoria and nurses' residences, etc., at home, and shipments of needed articles continue to go overseas.

Effort has been made by the IODE to provide means and occasion for newcomers to Canada to mingle with Canadian born and Miss Medd listed various of these activities by Ontario chapters. Wide interest had evidently been taken in Empire and world affairs at chapter meetings, she said. The Commonwealth and Empire department had spent more than $5,000 to assist in translating nurses' textbooks into Hindi for use of native nurses in India.

Empire and world affairs, Mrs. C. N. Geale; publicity, Mrs. W. C. Boate; films, Mrs. Gordon Langhorne; hospitality, Mrs. W. A. Burrell; services at home and abroad, Mrs. G. Groombridge; immigration and Canadianization, Mrs. J. L. Evans; commonwealth and Empire study, Mrs. D. W. Clarke.

Family Development Stressed By Pope

VATICAN CITY (CP)—The Pope, in a May Day speech to several thousand workers, said establishment of a "truly social life" and development of the family must accompany efforts to bring about European economic unity. The text of the Pope's address was released today.

"Only thus," he said, "can people with abundant families—such as in Italy—bring to European economy the important contribution of their richness in manpower and their potential for consumption."

The pontiff urged that an end be made of "the battle and hate of class" an that it be replaced with social justice that would assure—through labor—a tranquil and peaceful life.

Youth's Evidence Surprises Courtroom

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Student Richard la Force has been quoted in court as saying it's an 80-percent chance that he's the father of the baby expected by the wife of the friend he is accused of trying to poison.

The statement Friday rocked the crowded courtroom where la Force, a junior majoring in astrophysics at California Institute of Technology, is on trial.

He is charged with attempting to poison Robert Hayden, a former divinity student turned contractor's helper.

In another statement read to the jury, La Force was quoted as saying he wanted to kill Hayden "because I was in love with his wife"—pretty red-haired Joyce, who expects a baby in July. The prosecution says La Force made this statement Feb. 6, the night he was arrested.

Each of the principals is 19 years old.

SECOND STATEMENT

Deputy district attorney Joseph L. Carr read a second statement which he said was taken from La Force Feb. 9. It said in part:

"She told me that she and her husband had been thinking about having a baby. Some time after the first time I slept with her, she told me she had reason to believe she would be a mother and I would say that it was an 80-per-cent chance that I am the father of her child."

Joyce, outside the court, emphatically denied to reporters that she and La Force had been intimate.

"Hearing that read in court from his confession didn't surprise me, or Robert either," she said. "We'd read it before. Richard is like that—always imagining things. He's making all th[illegible]."

The Feb. 6 [illegible]ment also was admitted in e[illegible]ce. It quoted La Force as say[illegible]he poisoned soft drinks, milk and water in an effort to kill Hayden.

La Force, who pleaded innocent to the charge, has repudiated the statement.

Nehru Disputes Jail Cell Sign

Not that cell, said Nehru, but one near it. He was visiting a former British prison fortress here where he served a jail term from 1942 to 1945 for agitating against Britain.

Officials hastened to point out they had made a careful check of the records before setting up the commemorative plaque.

"I am the authority to say where I lived," Nehru exclaimed.

Not An Elopement, Wrestler Wins Bet

NAPLES, Italy — (AP)—On a recent moonlit Neapolitan night Tiberio Sibracciao, a Naples wrestler, clambered up a ladder to the bedroom window of Miss Ermine Gilda Ottavini, 54.

Then he carried her down to the garden in his arms, all 264 pounds of her.

Her father, a retired army general, awoke and came roaring into the garden with shouts for police. He accused Sibbracciao of attempted elopement without consent.

"Elopement nothing," the wrestler told the court today. "I made a bet I could carry her down a ladder to the garden—and I claim I won that bet."

Ermine said that was correct.

"Don't know about the bet," ruled the court, "but you've won your case. Dismissed."

Duplessis Sees New Towns In Wild Gaspe

QUEBEC (CP)—Premier Duplessis foresees the establishment of permanent communities on the sites of mining developments in barren, Northern Quebec and in the wild Gaspe peninsula interior.

He predicted Friday this will happen "in the not too distant future" when he announced the provincial cabinet had approved the site for a smelter plan which Gaspe Copper Mines Limited has decided to build soon near copper deposits about 60 miles west of Gaspe village.

Cost of the plant and the town now under construction will be about $30,000,000.

The Gaspe project is the second big development announced in two weeks at the premier's press conferences. He said recently Fenimore Iron Mines Limited plans to build a smelter, hydro-electric installations and a town near the northern tip of Ungava at a cost of $68,000,000.

Fenimore prospectors have proved 566,000,000 tons of high-grade iron ore in the area, about 300 miles northwest of the iron ore company's development of Burnt Creek in Ungava.

Mr. Duplessis said "at least one town will have to be built" when the 360-mile railway linking Burnt Creek and the St. Lawrence north shore town of Sept Iles is completed and mining starts in about a year.

Another town scheduled to be built is Labrieville on the site of Quebec Hydro-Electric Commission's $200,000,000 project on the Bersimis river.

Mr. Duplessis touched briefly on a proposed road between Abitibi and Chibougamau. He said Quebec business men from Western Quebec's mining region will present the government with a plan for the Abitibi-Chibougamau road shortly.

The premier also announced by-elections will be held simultaneously "at an appropriate date" in the ridings of Montreal Outremont, Matapedia and Portneuf.

Ancient Tarascan Capital Has Interesting Ruins

By JEAN E. STENTON

TZINTZUNTZAN — Formerly the capital of the great Tarascan empire, Tzintzuntzan (pronounced seen-san-zun and meaning hummingbird) is a most interesting village although it is now reduced to an adobe village where they make simple pottery.

Before the Spaniards it was the showplace of the region and extended over six miles. The remains of part of the city are still visible and there is an archaeological zone which has been partly uncovered in the last five or six years. The mounds run from east to west on the crest of a low ridge above the present village.

The pyramids here are quite different from those at Monte Alban or Teotihuacan. The one which has been partly restored is circular in shape. Many idols made of volcanic stone have been taken from the mounds as well as jewels and other objects. There is so much that has not been excavated that it is quite easy to find small relics.

UNCOVER BONES

To the right of the big pyramid where the kings were buried overlooking Lake Patzcuaro, was the sacrifical altar. Back of it were the small cells where the prisoners were kept and a huge trough surrounded the altar to carry off the blood as the victims were sacrificed. But the most interesting thing about this gruesome spot is several feet below the edge of the cliff.

Here there has only been minor excavation and there are piles and piles of bone fragments in holes. The bodies of the victims were apparently tossed into a huge pit. Today you can pick up pieces of heads, fingers and other fragments, well preserved. There must be many more under the surface of the soil because this was only one small hole.

Before Patzcuaro was founded, the Spanish used this old seat of empire. Here Don Vasco de Quiroga came and established the first chapel. It was an open air affair used in the early 1500's and still stands today. Behind the chapel there is a cross and an open air fountain which was used for baptisms and confirmations. Later this chapel was used as a small hospital.

OLD OLIVE TREES

In a huge walled square stands an ancient convent and the first church. The courtyard is lined with the first olive trees brought to America. Although they no longer bear, they are picturesque. In the first church there were no bell towers so the bell used to be hung between two trees facing the entrance to the house of worship. The ancient convent still stands, its crumbling walls showing fragments of mural paintings.

The interior of the parish church was destroyed by fire in 1944 and is now being rebuilt. A miraculous painting was lost there. Most residents declared that the painting was stolen nad the church set on fire to hide the theft. There was never any sign of it uncovered following the blaze.

The old convent is a perfect setting for the Passion Play which is presented here. The big fiesta to the patron saint—el Senor del Rescate—is celebrated the week before the beginning of Lent.

Dies In Highway Crash

BRANTFORD (CP)—Douglas J. Nicholson, 29-year-old hydro worker, was killed Friday when his car collided with a light delivery truck on No. 24 Highway, about two miles north of here. Harry Cornell of RR 1, St. George, driver of the truck, escaped with a hand injury. Nicholson, a worker with the Canadian Comstock Company in hydro conversion at Listowel, was en route to Scotland.

Bright Outlook

ST. THOMAS (CP)—Clayton Frey of Sarnia, hog producers' association director, Friday predicted a bright future for the Canadian hog industry during the next 12 to 18 months. Mr. Frey, conferring with Elgin county producers, said the problem now is to keep production up with domestic demand which in 1952 was increased to 57 pounds a person a year.

Two Canadian Prisoners Of War Not Mistreated By Chinese Captors, Pair Report

OTTAWA (CP)—L. Cpl. Paul Dugal of Quebec was struck in the head with a mortar bomb fragment in Korea last June. He came to in September, a prisoner of the Chinese Communists.

His reaction: "At least I didn't have to suffer through the heat of July and August."

Pte. Arthur Baker of Montreal was hit in the legs and arms by shrapnel Nov. 24, 1951. He recovered consciousness a week later and found himself a prisoner of the Reds.

His reaction: "Practically nil for I felt very weak."

The two Canadian soldiers, released recently in the prisoner-exchange, told their almost incredible stories of survival to a Canadian Army public relations officer in Japan while awaiting repatriation home. The first-person stories were issued here Friday by the army.

TOASTED BY ENEMY

Both men said they were treated as well as the Chinese and Korean sick and wounded all around us.

Dugal said he had to attend propaganda lectures on "the goodwill of the Communists to make peace."

Their stories:

"The wound caused paralysis of both my legs. The place (Chinese advance field ambulance post) was nothing more than a cave and my cell looked very much like the dugout I had occupied at the front with my unit. My straw bed was on the ground and I remained stretched on it until fall for my left side was completely paralyzed.

"Later, they (the Chinese) made me perform exercises every day which, although painful in the beginning, did help some in restoring the use of my left side. I was treated along with my American companion (Arthur Gregory of Cleveland) on an equal basis with the Chinese and Korean sick and wounded all around us.

"I had three meals of rice and bread with some sort of vegetable salad. I drank hot powdered milk and even though the quality of this food left much to be desired, quantity was at least sufficient. I never once during my term as prisoner suffered from hunger."

He later was transferred to two underground camouflaged hospitals, then to a village about 25 miles behind the lines, then to a place atop a mountain.

He was then sent to Pyongton hospital "where I met a number of my compatriots." (Dugal doesn't make clear whether they were Canadians). After hat, he was transferred to a prisoner-of-war camp when he was able to walk again.

"The sleeping quarters were bad. Eight men slept in a room six feet by six feet. At least it helped to stave off the cold.

"On April 13, a lucky day for me, I got the shock of my life when an officer told me to gather up my equipment. I was about to be freed. I was given new clothes. The same evening we had a bit of a party with prisoners and guards taking part.

"After travelling for three days in trucks I reached the village of Munsan and freedom. My only wish now is to get home to dad and mother and my good old home town of Quebec."

NEVER MISTREATED

Pte. Baker:

"Little by little my strength returned and I began to realize fully what a pickle I was in. My hospital companions were Chinese. I must admit in all sincerity that I was never mistreated. I was in hospital during the whole period of interment and was treated on equal terms with the Chinese wounded soldiers all around me.

only managed to survive to the numerous injections iven by the Chinese doctors. More than seven times the Communist surgeons operated on me with more or less rudimentary equipment.

"I was first lodged in a sort of cave. My bed was made of straw and clay under which I would build a small fire during the night to keep warm.

"It was only by the end of April that I managed to drag myself sufficiently to wash. By then my foot wounds were well enough for me to walk with the help of crutches made by the Chinese.

"I contracted some sort of sleeping sickness. At the beginning of this illness, I slept an average of 20 hours a day. During that period, I was fed by injections or by stomach tubes. At one time, in fact, I slept for 20 days and nights.

ATTACKS DECREASED

"On April 16, I was given new clothes and took my first bath in a long time. On that same night, prisoners and Chinese patients had a party. Then on the 18th we enjoyed a real goodbye party during which they served wine, beer and sake.

"I tipped the scales at 180 before my capture but now weigh only 145 pounds.

"What I have experienced seems like a nightmare now."

"Mans" Hose

WOODSTOCK (CP) — Maj.-Gen. F. F. Worthington, Canada's civil defence co-ordinator, donned fireman's togs Friday and grabbed the business end of a hose. The incident took place during a demonstration of seven pumpers being turned over to civil defence authorities by the Bickle-Seagrave Company Ltd. They are the first of 40 ordered by the federal department of health and welfare.

U.K. Jet Airliner Crashes In India 43 Aboard Killed

CALCUTTA (AP)—Search parties today brought in the last of 43 bodies from the scattered wreckage of a British Comet jet airliner which crashed 22 miles northwest of Calcutta late Saturday. Thirty-five of the dead were Britons, many of them on their way to attend the Coronation. The crash of the speedy plane—a few minutes after it swept into monsoon rains from Calcutta's Dum Dum airport on a Singapore-to-London flight — was the second fatal accident for Britain's famed Comets and the first on a scheduled commercial flight. The plane was operated by the British Overseas Airways Corporation.

Preliminary reports said a fire or explosion shortly after the take-off might have caused the disaster.

Search planes spotted the wreckage early Sunday morning in rough, barren country. A ground party reached the scene in the afternoon. The giant four-engine plane was smashed to bits and had been flung over a wide area Some bodies, burned beyond recognition, were found four miles apart

MOSTLY OFFICIALS

Most of the 37 passengers were British business men and officials and their wives. Eleven women were aboard including the plane's stewardess. A 13-year-old girl and an infant also were among the dead. The plane carried five crew members.

Three Americans aboard were identified as the Rev. P. Snead, a Methodist missionary stationed at Ipoh, Malaya, who was reported on his way home for leave and Miss Jean S. Cohen and Miss Anita Whistler, two teachers making a world tour after completing exchange teaching assignments in Rangoon, Burma.

Six minutes after the Comet headed into heavy rains on the scheduled three-hour hop to New Delhi, radio contact snapped off. Villagers who saw the plane go down said it streaked from the sky like a ball of fire.

The tragedy came on the first anniversary of Britain's dramatic 500-mile-an-hour jet travel service and shortly after the Singapore-London run had been opened.

Eleven persons were killed in a Comet belonging to the Canadian Pacific Airlines when it crashed at Karachi, Pakistan, on its delivery run to Honolulu last March.

Allies Name Pakistan To Take PoW's

PANJUMJOM (AP)—The Allies today nominated Pakistan as a neutral caretaker for Korean war prisoners who won't go home, and warned the apparently surprised Reds: Time is "fast running out" in the truce talks.

Although Pakistan was one of four Asian countries listed by the Reds as acceptable neutrals, the Communists sat mum.

Without even mentioning the Allied choice the Reds asked and received a recess until Tuesday, possibly to consult higher officials.

Lt.-Gen. William K. Harrison, chief United Nations delegate, nominated Pakistan at the beginning of the meeting and he told the Reds:

"We are obliged to tell you once again that we will not engage in protracted and fruitless discussion during the current negotiations," which began April 25.

RED SUGGESTTIONS

The Communists Saturday suggested Pakistan, Burma, India and Indonesia as acceptable hosts for the 48,000 Red prisoners who won't go home.

Pakistan was the third country nominated by the UN. First was Switzerland, which the Reds opposed. Then Sweden. The Communists insisted on an Asian state. They want the reluctant PoWs shipped to the neutral country for screening after an armistice is agreed upon. The Allies want a neutral country to assume control of them in Korea.

Harrison told reporters:

"The current negotiations are really no different from last summer." The Allies broke off the meetings Oct. 8 when the Reds kept stalling on the prisoner exchange question.

Harrison said no time limit has been set for the armistice talks, but twice inside the conference hut, he delivered an implied warning that he would end the talks again if the Reds did not begin to produce.

THEIR OWN IDEA

Harrison reminded the Reds that they mentioned Burma, Indonesia, Pakistan and India as suitable Asian neutrals.

He said that unless they had named these four for propaganda purposes, "we must assume that you consider each of the four" to be neutral and competent and therefore suitable.

"Based on your own statements, we expect that our nomination will be quite acceptable to you and will result in quick agreement on this issue. If so, then this will have been the first indication since these talks began that there may be some justification in our agreement to meet with you again. We hope that this indication may not be nullified by subsequent negotiations."

Mau Mau Wipe Out Home Guard Outpost

NAIROBI, Kenya (CP)—Some 300 Mau Mau terrorists attacked a remote Kikuyu home guard outpost today and burned and hacked to death 19 members of the pro-British unit.

Only one member of the post escaped to tell the story. The rest died in the burned ruins of their huts after their ammunition had been exhausted.

The Mau Mau men came out of their forest hideout to surprise the home guard outpost outside the village of Gatembire.

The lone survivor reported that the home guard held the attackers off for a while but retreated finally into a single hut. When their ammunition ran out, they were cornered there and slaughtered by the Mau Mau's long knives.

Charge 241 Soldiers With Baltic Mutiny

COPENHAGEN (AP)—Colonel C. Trampe, military commander on Bornholm, isolated Danish island in the Baltic, has decided to charge 241 of his men with mutiny, the army announced today.

This is the largest number charged in a single case in Denmark's history.

The soldiers rioted last February simultaneously with mutinies in barracks elsewhere in the country. The troops were protesting extension of the draft period.

The Bornholm mutiny was then considered the most serious one, and 10 leaders already have been sentenced to prison terms of from five to 12 months. The maximum possible term is four years.

Lindsay Girl Under Arrest

TORONTO (CP)—Police picked up a Toronto man and three girls in nearby Port Credit Sunday night and said the man is wanted for passing cheques in Canada and the United States.

Arrested after several shots were fired at a speeding car was Martin Clifton, 32. Police said he is wanted by the U. S. federal bureau of investigation and Canadian authorities on cheque charges from Toronto to San Francisco.

Police said they were also holding Joan Goodwin, 20, and Pat LeClair, 18, both of Edmonton, and Ann Hull, 27, of Lindsay.

Police said Clifton passed cheques to pay expenses of the four on a 7,000-mile trip through the U. S. and Canada.

They spotted the car near Port Credit, about 10 miles west of Toronto, and fired five shots at the vehicle before it stopped.

India Wants Diamond Back

Hope To Recover It From UK Crown Jewels

NEW DELHI (Reuters)—India is trying to get back the famous Kohinoor diamond which forms part of Britain's Crown jewels, deputy education minister K. D. Malbiya told the House of the People (lower house) today

He said the Indian government is trying to recover as many as possible of the jewels, art treasures and antiques of historical interest including the Kohinoor, removed to Britain from India

The Kohinoor weighed 186 1-16 carats when it was presented to Queen Victoria in 1850 and 106 1-16 after being re-cut. Its origins are doubtful. It may have come from an even larger stone, the Mogul diamond, [illegible] to have been in existence in the 18th century.

In any event it belonged to Nadir Pasha in 1739, the Rajjah of Lahore in 1913, and was presented to Queen Victoria by the East India Company, the commercial trading concern which exploited India in the first period of British penetration into the sub-continent.

The Kohinoor was incorporated into the crown made in 1937 for Queen Elizabeth, now the Queen Mother. It had been worn by all the queens of England since Queen Victoria.

The diamond is traditionally supposed to bring good luck to a woman who wear it, but bad luck to a man. It is in the centre of the great cross that occupies the front of the crown.

Fierce Hand Fighting Stops Reds

Princess Pats, RCRs Take Brunt Of Enemy Assault

SEOUL, Korea — (CP) — Canadian troops Sunday beat back 750 to 1,000 Chinese in a fierce 2½-hour battle inside Allied lines on the western front northeast of Panmunjom.

The 8th army said the 3rd battalions of the Royal Canadian Regiment and Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry took the brunt of the Red assault.

The Reds were driven off only after "intense hand-to-hand combat in the trenches," the 8th army said.

A Canadian spokesman said the Chinese attacked about 11:30 p.m. Saturday night after ambushing a Canadian patrol in no-man's-land.

SECOND PATROL SENT

A second patrol was sent out to rescue the remnants of the first. Then the Chinese attacked the main British and Canadian positions.

The Reds opened up with a 1,000-round barrage of artillery and mortar fire on the Commonwealth positions northeast of Korangpop between Little Gibraltar hill and the Hook.

Little Gibraltar and the Hook are 10 to 12 miles northeast of Panmunjom, where the armistice talks are being held.

HIT CANADIANS

The Chinese made a feint toward the British Royal Fusiliers with heavy mortar and machine-gun fire, and then hit the Canadians.

"They came in screaming, hurling grenades and firing heavily," one British officer said.

During the attack the second Canadian patrol returned and found the Chinese had overrun their forward trenches.

"One of our men came back to find Chinese looting his bunker," said a Canadian officer. "Two of them came out carrying his boots. He killed them, took his boots back to his bunker and put them under his bed."

Search Houses For Three Boys

TORONTO (CP)—Police started a slow house-to-house search of a downtown Toronto area today for three young brothers who disappeared three days ago when they went to buy some candy.

Police said there has been little trace of Henry Quigley, 10 Howard, 7, and Paul, 5, since they left their home Friday.

The Quigley family moved to a new house Thursday and the boys' mother, Mrs. Veronica Quigley, said she believes they returned to their old neighborhood.

A search of their former home indicated they slept there Friday or Saturday night. Police said they found blankets and two cardboard boxes on the floor of one of the rooms.

Dudley Says Gillson Able To Play

MIDLAND (CP)—George Dudley, secretary-manager of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, said today there is nothing in CAHA regulations preventing Bobby Gillson of Owen Sound playing as a replacement goalkeeper for Penticton Vs.

He was commenting on a Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen protest over Penticton's use of Gillson Saturday. The Kitchener club claims permission for his use was not gained from Owen Sound Mercurys, for whom Gillson played during the regular Ontario Hockey Association senior A schedule.

The Vs are down 2-1 in the Allan Cup best-of-seven finals against the Dutchmen. Their regular goalie, Ivan McLelland, is out with a broken bone in his right wrist.

DON'T NEED PERMISSION

"Once a club is out of competition," said Dudley— and the Owen Sound team has been inactive for a month—"no permission from the club is necessary before one of its players is picked up by another team."

Dudley said he had received a telegram from the Dutchmen protesting Penticton's use of Gillson Saturday night, but he did not expect the official protest—sent by mail—to arrive here until Tuesday.

He said he would then have to order an airmail vote of the CAHA executive.

Dudley declined to comment on a Kitchener complaint that a doctor's certificate concerning McLelland's wrist said he would be out of action only three days.

Will Investigate House Fire Where Two Died, 1 Injured

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—Provincial fire investigators will be called in to investigate a pre-dawn blaze that roared through a rooming house at 34 Stanley St., Sunday, bringing death to an elderly London woman and severely burning two others trapped on the second floor.

Burned from head to foot, Mrs. Mary Ann Hill, 80, died in Victoria Hospital three hours after she was rescued from an upstairs bedroom.

Two other women who collapsed outside bedroom doors on a second-floor passageway are in serious condition with second- and third-degree burns. They are Mrs. Mae Delfino, 45-year-old owner of the house, and Mrs. Maria Zorka, a boarder.

LONDON, Ont, (CP) — Mrs. Maria Zorka, about 35, died in Victoria hospital about noon today. Mrs. Mary Ann Hill, 80, died early Sunday, and Mrs. Mae Delfino, 45, remains seriously ill, after suffering burns when trapped on the second floor of a rooming house in a fire Sunday.

Eight people were in the rambling, 10-room brick house when fire of unknown origin swept a downstairs living room and burst up the centre stairway to the second floor.

SUFFERING SHOCK

Jack Murray, 34, suffered severe burns to both hands as he fled down the blazing stairway. Doreen Shields, occupant of a second-floor room, also fled down the front stairs but was taken to hospital suffering shock

Clarence Howe and Harry Brownlee, who shared two rooms on the second floor near the front, escaped by climbing through a window. Awakened by smoke they scrambled hastily onto a verandah over the front porch and were rescued by a fire ladder.

Fire chief R. C. McDonald, who arrived at the scene a short time after fire equipment, said he will ask the Ontario fire marshal to investigate the blaze.

Niagara Blossoms Ready This Week

ST. Catharines (CP) — Warm weather this week should unfold the plum and peach blooms in Niagara peninsula orchards just in time for Blossom Sunday, scheduled for May 10.

A few scattered orchards, particularly in the Queenston area, already are making a showing of early bloom. Plum blossoms are fairly well along, while the pink of the peach orchards is just starting to appear.

The cold spring and heavy rainfall held back the blossoms until now. Growers say they are not concerned, however, as too early blossoming always raises the possibility that frost will nip the buds before they are set.

Traffic throughout the peninsula was heavy Sunday. If sightseers were too early to view the blossoms at their best, they saw spring's bright green of the fields and trees, combined with gay splashes in tulip and hyacinth beds.

Living Cost Index Drops One-Fifth Of Point In March

OTTAWA (CP)—The new consumer price index—yardstick for measuring living costs—declined by one-fifth of a point during March to 114.6 from 114.8, the Bureau of Statistics reported today. It was the fifth consecutive drop in the index which had reached a peak of 118.2 in December, 1951. The decline in the index, based on 1949 prices equalling 100, was small, however, compared to the drop of seven-tenths of a point in February.

Lower food prices again provided the main power for dropping the index. The food sub-index dropped to 110.9 from 111.6, as prices eased for such fresh meats as beef, veal and lamb, as well as for potatoes and butter.

The rents were up, as well as electricit y rates and the cost of health care, but elimination of the federal $2.50 radio licence fee also helped cut living costs.

PUSHED BACK TO '51

With the March drop, living costs were pushed back to June, 1951, when the consumer price index also stood at 114.6.

Reflecting the same downward trend, the old cost-of-living index, based on 1935-39 prices equalling 100, eased three-tenths of a point to 183.9 from 184.2, with lower food prices also forcing the decline.

It was the second consecutive drop in the old prices barometer which had reached a peak of 191.5 in December, 1951.

The new index came into use last fall, but the new index has been projected back to 1913 on the new base of 1949 prices equalling 100. Officials said the current five-month-in-a-row drop was the most prolonged since 1932 when the index dropped eight months in a row.

While this was the first time in many years that the new consumer price index had shown a five-month-in-a-row drop the total decline of 1.5 point was small compared to the 2.3-point drop in the first four months of 1952. In that period, consecutive monthly drops trimmed the index to 115.9 in April, 1952, from the record high of 118.2 in December, 1951.

RENTS ADVANCED

Rents continued to advance during March with the new yardstick's shelter column moving up to a new high of 122.7 from 122.5.

The household operations column also increased to a high of 116.9

Duke of Edinburgh To Receive Wings

WHITE WALTHAM, England (AP) — The Duke of Edinburgh passed his final flight test today a few hours before he was scheduled to receive his wings at a ceremony in Buckingham Palace.

During a solo flight in a training plane he flew over Windsor Castle. He was up about 20 minutes and then brought the plane in for a perfect landing.

His instructor, Flt. Lt Caryl Ramsay Gordon, flew a second plane about a wing-span away from the Duke's aircraft. Afterward, Gordon said:

"His Royal Highness is easily the best pupil I have ever had. He is terrifically enthusiastic and loves flying aircraft."

The Duke now plans to learn how to operate multi-engined aircraft.

U.K. Optimistic Repatriation Issue Settled

LONDON (AP)—Prime Minister Churchill said today the involved problem of prisoner repatriation in Korea "may be overcome and it certainly is very near being overcome."

He told the House of Commons he thought the West might hopefully await further events.

Answering Labor questions on the prisoner-of-war issue, Churchill said:

"I think the matters of principle have been settled. It now is a question of method. I don't see why there should not be an agreement reached quickly on this and why we should not move forward to larger topics and larger questions in Korea."

BACK U.S.

Earlier Churchill's Conservative government gave complete backing to the way United States Lt.-Gen. William Harrison is handling the truce talks in Korea.

Labor members asked what the UN position was on accepting an Asian nation as the neutral to be temporarily in charge of war prisoners who declined to be repatriated.

Churchill said Harrison's position had been misreported here. He said the U. S. general had not refused to accept an Asian nation but had stated that until a specific country was named, the UN command had no option but to stand by the original proposal of a country such as Switzerland.

"Her Majesty's government would be glad to see these responsibilities assumed by India or Pakistan, and have made known their opinion to United States authorities," Churchill said.

Burma Decides To Keep Aid

RANGOON (Reuters)—Burma, softening her attitude towaro the United States, has reconsidered her abrupt decision to cut off American aid.

As a result, all current technical assistance programs will run until completion in this war-ravaged country.

Burmese government officials said some $17,000,000 worth of U.S. technical aid projects now will be fully carried out.

Only five weeks ago, in a move with international implications, the Burmese government declined further aid as of the end of June.

Burma was impatient at what she considered U.S. support for Chinese Nationalist guerrillas operating on her territory. The move also seemed aimed at bettering Burma's relations with her neighbor to the north — Communist China. Observers said Burma might have declined the aid to be one jump ahead of possible United States retaliation for Burmese rubber and scrap metal deals with the Chinese Reds.

Reminders of Many Defeats

Viennese Still Getting Fun Out Of Life

By I. NORMAN SMITH

This is the third in a series of articles by I. Norman Smith, who is touring Europe and will be covering the Coronation for The Examiner. He tells of arriving in Vienna. He will spend some weeks in Yugoslavia.

VIENNA (By Air Mail) — One shouldn't rush Vienna. The Viennese have a word which I won't try to spell which they say distinguishes them and indeed most Austrians from the Germans. In effect it means that there is always another half hour or a mile or two less or a pound more. To be precise is to be vulgar.

Just as you get indigestion if you rush Vienna's hot chocolate with whipped cream and pastry so it is impossible to meet the intellectual, artistic and emotional demands made by its history, architecture and atmosphere.

At least it is impossible in a five-day visit. The temptation is to give in to the general custom and just sit in the sun at a side-walk cafe and watch Vienna go by—while other Viennese sip coffee alongside and read the innumerable bound newspapers and magazines which every well dressed restaurant provides.

Perhaps a truly wise man would yield to that temptation, but a reporter-tourist instead summons up enough strength to climb into a horse-drawn cab and drive the storied "Ring" —that three miles of circumference that once bounded the glories of Vienna. From its richly laid out avenues of trees one looks upon an unending circle of the glory that Vienna was —but now is not.

SMILING PEOPLE

It is a cliche to say Vienna is sad. It is moreover a wholly misleading cliche if it suggests the Viennese are going around with long faces or are in desperate hunger or want. On the contrary, they are a smiling and philosophically happy people. Having lost the last two wars and being still in a sense occupied by the victors, the Viennese find comfort in present blessings of sunshine and music and enough food to go around. They have no great ability to plan far ahead and so look back to the past but humbled grandeur for their strength and pride.

The sadness of Vienna, seen from your carriage as it traces the paths of glory, is that here are all tombstones to the Hapsburg Empire. This city burgeoned forth to rule great parts of the world, withheld the Turk and restrained the Slav. As the empire expanded so did the city. Here are government buildings of size and grandeur to rule such an empire. Here are churches and shrines to bestow fitting thanks. Here are monuments to triumphant soldiers, to emperors and empresses, to statement. Here are museums possessing a good share of the world's art and treasure. Here are statues to Beethoven and Goethe and Schubert and Schiller and countless others who were a part of the great Austrian story.

MONARCHY FELL

But the Hapsburg monarchy began to fall in 1914 when the Crown Prince was assassinated at Sarajevo—it having reached unprecedented imperial glory after recovering from Napoleon's conquest —and since 1918 Austria has been but Austria, a tiny country that could be carelessly mislaid somewhere in Canada but whose 7,000,000 people must somehow work enough to maintain so much of all that unnecessarily large and expensive administrative set-up designed for greater days.

Today as you drive along the "Ring" you see two kinds of defeat. Besides the symbols we have been speaking of —the signs of an empire now gone— are buildings reduced to rubble by Russian gunfire in 1945 or Allied aircraft. The beautiful St. Stephen's Cathedral, the Oepra House— so many cherished edifices were damaged and 20 per cent. of Vienna's houses. War came to Vienna even as Vienna often took war elsewhere.

To the Viennese no doubt the more grievous signs of defeat that face them every day are the Allied and Russian troops and flags. Hitler took their independence from them in 1938. That is a long time ago. They have not yet got it back, for though Britain and France and the United States would sign an Austrian Peace

Hiding Out In Parliament

Tehran Officer Fears For Life After Order

TEHRAN, Iran (AP)—Gen. Fazollah Zahedi, leading opposition candidate to succeed Premier Mohammed Mossadegh, took sanctuary in the Majlis (parliament) building today after the government "requested" him to report to military headquarters.

Zahedi had been in hiding since the disappearance of Police Chief Gen. Mahmood Afshartus April 21. Afshartus was found strangled and Mossadegh's regime charged his murder was part of a plan to overthrow the government.

In a communique Saturday, the government charged the Zahedi's nephew, retired Brig. Gen. Nasrollah Zahedi, had been a leader in the plot. The uncle was asked to visit the police within 41 hours.

Iranian tradition prevents arrests or seizure of fugitives inside the Majlis building. Mossadegh, himself, has taken refuge there several times since he became premier, claiming his own life was endangered outside.

Fazollah Zahedi was arrested Feb. 25 on charges of plotting against Mossadegh but was released on March 17.

Another opposition figure, Labor party leader Mazzafar Baghaie, has denied government charges that he was connected with the plot against Afshartus and demanded a prompt airing of the case in Parliament.

Believe Tug Blew Up, 4 Men Missing

TIMAGAMI (CP)—An oil slick on the surface of a northern lake may help solve the mystery of the disappearance of the lumber tug White Bear and four men aboard her.

A fleet of red canoes scouring Rabbit lake is seeking such a slick or even bubbles of fuel oil from the diesel-driven tug's 200-gallon tank. Police say oil traces will probably afford the only hope of finding the White Bear, believed to have blown up last Thursday and gone down in 200 feet of water with all hands.

Missing and feared drowned are Leslie Taske, 23, captain of the tug; Fred Kozik, 21, of Ottawa, woods foreman of the Gillies Brothers Lumber Company; and lumberjacks Leonard Conroy, 19, and Edward Hamilton, 61.

Taske and Conroy came from Quebec province. Hamilton, whose brother Tom is in Sudbury, lived at Timagami more than 30 years.

Taske was in his third year as skipper of the White Bear. The tug had been in constant use since the spring break-up April 13.

TOWING BOAT

The tug was towing a 23-foot sixton steel boat when it set out Thursday on an 18-mile trip from the Gillies mill to a large log boom in the southeast bay of Rabbit lake, about 10 miles west of this Northern Ontario resort centre and some 65 miles north of North Bay.

It is believed all four men were on the White Bear, which had a cookstove and cabin facilities.

The men were expected back late Friday with 7,000 logs. When they did not return by Saturday, a casual search was made in the expectation the tug had merely been delayed by adverse winds. Sunday the concern became alarm and a search plane went out.

From the air, searchers spotted an oil drum and an aluminum pikepole floating on the lake. Then other searchers in canoes found a smashed stool on which Taske usually sat while steering the tug, as well as part of the White Bear's superstructure, two more pikepoles and another oil drum.

John Hunt, manager of the Gillies Lumber Company, then announced his belief that the White Bear exploded Thursday without reaching her destination at the southeast bay. He believes she filled with water and sank at once in the lake, which was swept at the time by a mixture of snow and rain, dragging the other boat to the bottom.

Anniversary Observed By St. Andrew's

The Rev. F. M. Bannister of Chalmers United Church, Kingston, was the guest preacher at both services.

The evening service at Trinity United Church was cancelled so the congregation could join in worship with the St. Andrew's congregation and hear Mr. Bannister. The Rev. Gordon S. Maxwell, Trinity minister, led in prayers and took the lessons.

Later there was a social gathering of the two congregations at St. Andrew's with the ladies serving refreshments. The Rev. Henry Cotton, minister of St. Andrew's, Mr. Maxwell and Mr. Bannister also spoke informally.

Apsley Driver Fined $75 On Driving Count

Involved in an accident Saturday night on Water St., Lorne Couch, of Apsley, was fined $75 and $2.50 costs on a charge of impaired driving in Magistrate's court today.

According to evidence, Couch pulled away from the curb of Water St., just below the intersection of King, into the path of a passing car. PC Victor McConnell, investigating, said the accused's speech was thick, his eyes glassy and he was unsteady on his feet.

Couch pleaded guilty to the charge.

Celebrate 120th Anniversary At St. Paul's

Anyone who knows the history of Presbyterianism in Canada, knows what part St. Paul's Presbyterian Church in Peterborough has played in it, said the Rev. Dr. C. J. MacKay, of Montreal, Sunday at the 120th anniversary celebration of the church.

Mr. MacKay went on to quote Paul's letter to the Galations, when he said, "Open your windows eastward; for there are four ways we can look at life and each of us is free to choose what direction we want. For our life is directed on how we look through the window of life."

One can look through a green glass and see spring and a red glass the sunset. For every day of our life we are looking out of one of these windows trying to recapture something which belonged to generations past. Because it seems children were more obedient and meat and bread were cheaper then.

When people look into the past and distance, it seems to be brighter, but one cannot look there for happiness. "For Jesus said this was a new day and you cannot live in the past."

"For time is like Old Man River, it just keeps rolling along," and the past is a guide, not a hitching post, said Mr. MacKay.

NO HOPE IN PAST

Our future, said Mr. MacKay, is open to the east and not to the past. For there is no hope in turning one's eyes to the past, except to learn.

The north window is the window of pessimism, the dark outlook and cynic's view on life, since our troubles look larger when we look through the north window, the window of pessimism and fear, which "is the sin of our time."

Today, true facts are bad facts, said Mr. MacKay. For we read so much news today which is bad. People begin to think that there is no good news and receive the one-sided view of the bad things which are published so often in the papers today. For good news is not news to the papers and our moods are governed by what we see and hear.

ADOPT OPTIMISM

Looking through the south window on life, one adopts the optimistic outlook and thinks everything is wonderful. But life is not like that and adopting the optimistic attitude is just as bad as the pessimist's cynical attitude on life.

Before the Second World War, we lived in an optimistic world and when it exploded before our eyes, all our hopes were punctured. "For escalators go up, as well as come down." Since happiness is not the goal of life, but holiness and the task of the church is to bring people to Christ.

"Open the window to the east. That way lies the dawn, for the dawning of the day is a fitting symbol to base our faith on," concluded Mr. MacKay.

Set Yearly Pay Union Objective

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—President Earl Watson of local 195, United Automobile Workers, (CIO), says in his latest newspaper column a guaranteed annual wage now has become a primary objective of at least four major unions.

Commenting in The Guardian, the bi-monthly, official paper of various UAW locals, he says the unions are making no fixed and flexible demands regarding the guaranteed wage.

"We do propose some general principles and management is asked to study the thing out cooperatively—with a view to adoption of a guaranteed wage plan that will be tailor-made to the needs and capacities of each industry."

Under the plan, union workers would be guaranteed an annual wage in place of the present hourly pay which is cut off if they are put out of work because of seasonal lay-offs or the like.

Ask Commission Be Set Up To Study Code

OTTAWA (CP)—The Commons criminal law committee today unanimously recommended the cabinet appoint a royal commission or joint parliamentary committee to study such subjects as abolition of capital and corporal punishment, defence of insanity and lotteries.

Don Brown (L—Essex West), chairman of the committee, tabled the report in the Commons today.

The report said:

"At various times during the course of its work, the following matters pertaining to the criminal law were directed to the attention of your committee, namely: The defence of insanity; capital punishment; corporal punishment; lotteries.

"Your committee is of opinion that these questions are of such paramount importance that they could and should not be dealt with merely as incidentals to the consolidation or revision of the present Criminal Code embodied in bill No. 93.

"The committee upon the material before it was not prepared to recommend a change in the present law respecting the defence of insanity, lotteries and the imposition of punishment by whipping and by sentence of death.

"But (the committee) unanimously has come to the conclusion, and so recommends, that the governor-general in council (cabinet) give consideration to the appointment of a royal commission, or to the submission to Parliament of a proposal to set up a joint parliamentary committee of the Senate and the House of Commons . . .(to) "consider further and report . . .whether any of these provisions should be amended and if so shall recommend the nature of the amendments to be made."

Pakistan Ready Take On Job

KARACHI, Pakistan (Reuters)—Pakistan will probably accept if asked to act as custodian of Korean prisoners by Allied and Communist truce negotiators, observers said today.

Prime Minister Mohammed Ali has said he sees no reason why Pakistan should not act as the custodian. Political circles believe the nomination would give Pakistan a new standing in the international field, as well as boost the prestige of Ali's new government.

India's Prime Minister Nehru said today in Bombay, India would "consider" a request that she take custody of Korean prisoners refusing to go home "when it comes before us."

India and Pakistan are two of four Asian countries the Red negotiators at Panmunjom have said would be acceptable as a neutral caretaker for the PoWs not wanting repatriation. The others are Burma and Indonesia.

Lucky Woman Didn't Die, Man Jailed For Five Months

Commenting, "It's only because of good luck you haven't killed her," Magistrate W. R. Philp sentenced Harry Jones, of Nick's Camp, to five months definite and one month indefinite in the reformatory on a charge of assaulting his wife, causing actual bodily harm.

According to his wife's evidence, Jones had "hauled off and let me have it" with a sharp instrument, possibly a poker or a hatchet. When police found her she was "very bloody."

The incident occurred last Thursday night.

Examination in the hospital revealed a head wound about two inches long plus several minor cuts incurred when the sharp instrument hit the window after Jones threw it at his wife.

Already sentenced to four months definite and one indefinite, Jones will serve the assault count concurrently. He had been given the first sentence Friday on a charge of drinking while on the interdicted list.

"Apparently the only way to keep you from being intoxicated is to keep you in jail," the magistrate told Jones in passing sentence.

A neighbor of the accused, Gerald Sweet, was also convicted on a charge of supplying liquor to an interdicted person (Jones).

In giving evidence on the transaction, Mrs. Jones appeared in pain as she put her hand to her bandaged forehead. She had to be helped from the witness box.

Mrs. Jones said she saw her husband give some money to the accused and saw Jones with some wine later when he returned.

Sweet was sentenced to one month in jail and his home was declared a public place.

The trailer and truck were hauled back into the East zone.

Duke To Resume Spanish Galleon Treasure Hunt

By DEREK JAMESON

LONDON (Reuters)—The Duke of Argyll said today he will soon resume the world's greatest treasure hunt for £30,000,000 worth of gold reputed to be locked in the sunken Spanish galleon Duque de Florencia.

The chief of the Scottish Campbell clan is the hereditary owner of the fabulous galleon, believed to have been the payship of the routed Spanish armada, which sank in 1588 off the Isle of Mull, on the rugged west coast of Scotland.

Men have searched the Bay of Tobermory at Mull for centuries in the hopes of an overnight fortunre but it was not until three years ago that scientifically equipped naval divers, commissioned by the 49-year-old duke, located the wreck.

Embedded in thousands of tons of mud about 28 feet beneath the dark waters of the Atlantic, the 50-foot galleon will not give up its treasure without a hard and costly fight.

TOUGH JOB

It took the Royal Navy seven weeks to bring to the surface a piece of charred wood and two medallions—with the figure of a reclining nude on one side — to prove that the galleon really existed.

The duke is holding back details of his plan to raise the rotting hulk. He has already spent several thousand pounds on the search since he succeeded his uncle as duke in 1949.

Charles I granted a Royal charter giving possession of the wreck to an early Duke of Argyll in 1641. Charles II contested the award in 1677 but the Scottish courts turned him down.

Since then the Bay of Tobermory has thrown up coins, swords, cannon and other relics from time to time, giving the local inhabitants tantalizing glimpses of the fortune at their doorstep.

LURES TOURISTS

But the spotlight of publicity turned on by the present duke has brought another kind of fortune. Picturesque Tobermory has become a thriving tourist centre, though there is nothing to see but the sullen waters of the Atlantic.

Villagers proudly tell visitors how the Florencia, fleeing from the English fleet with the rest of the armada, sought food and water at Tobermory but, after getting it, refused to pay the bill. So the mighty Mclean of Durat, a local chieftain, went aboard and threw a flaming brand into the powder hold, blowing himself up with the ship.

With him sank the payroll for Spain's troops waiting to invade England from Holland. There were also glittering gems intended to buy off English noblemen and a precious crown for the proposed puppet ruler of conquered England.

In Spain, the historians say the Florencia returned home with the treasure intact and Tobermory's pride-and-joy was another ship.

The dour locals and the duke are not convinced.

Charles Stephenson Chosen P.C. Candidate In Durham

ORONO—(Special to Examiner)—Charles E. Stephenson, retired Port Hope businessman and Conservative MP for Durham riding from 1945-49 was chosen by the Durham Progressive Conservative Association at a convention here in the town hall on Saturday night to again carry the banner in the forthcoming federal election.

Only two names were placed before the convention which nearly filled the 500 capacity town hall, those of Mr. Stephenson and Jack Reid, Orono farmer and horseman who withdrew in favor of Mr. Stephenson. Mr. Reid thanked the mover and seconder of his nomination but said he would decline in favor of Mr. Stephenson. "Mr. Stephenson served us with great distinction at Ottawa from 1945-49," he declared." The Durham Conservatives lost the 1949 election because we were over confident. Let us not make that mistake this time but put Mr. Stephenson back in Ottawa."

Mr. Stephenson thanked the convention for their trust and confidence in him and declared: "The election campaign is on right now as far as I am concerned." He asked the Progressive Conservatives of Durham to give him all the support possible in his campaign. "If you do this, we should have no trouble winning Durham for the Conservatives in the next election," he declared.

HATE CAMPAIGN

Pointing out that the Liberals are starting a hate campaign against Conservative leader George Drew, he urged his listeners not to help their cause.

"George Drew is a great and able man," he declared. "Ever since he gave the Liberals and CCF such a beating in the Ontario provincial elections, he has been the victim of their hate propaganda."

Scoring waste and extravagance in the present Liberal administration, Mr. Stephenson said the Liberals again would probably use the cry about not changing horses in the middle of the stream. "Perhaps we should have changed horses in the last election and let them go down the stream. The Liberals have proved to be expensive horses, almost as expensive as those at Petawawa." Mr. Stephenson also accused the Liberal administration of losing United Kingdom markets. "We must regain these markets," he declared, "we cannot export all our products to the United States for they will impose embargoes against them."

The Progressive Conservative candidate also scored the Liberals for having an inadequate immigration policy. "Their policy has not been large enough. We need people to develop our huge natural resources and we should bring in more British people to help us do it," he declared.

COLLECT TOO MUCH

Mr. Stephenson charged the Liberal administration with collecting far more in taxes than is needed to run the country. He pointed out that in 1939 the government collected only a half billion in taxes but this year will collect four and a half billions. "Then Mr. Howe asks in the House of Commons, 'What's a million dollars, anyway?'" He charged that Mr. Howe had also asked that if the Liberals wanted to pass something, who was going to stop them?

"I say to Mr. Howe that we in Durham County can help stop them and with your support I will try to do it."

FOOLING THE PEOPLE

Gordon K. Fraser, Conservative MP for Peterborough, and George C. Nowlan, president of the Progressive Conservative Association of Canada, were the other speakers. Mr. Fraser declared that Durham should be Conservative again and that it can be done if everyone gets out and works for Mr. Stephenson. The Liberal government has been fooling the people for 18 years, he declared. If we ran our private business the way the Liberals have we would either be bankrupt or in the hospital, he declared. The waste and extravagance of the Liberals could best be illustrated by Prime Minister St. Laurent's statement in the House one day that if a certain measure were adopted it would mean a saving of three million dollars. This attitude and the waste and extravagance that resulted from it must be done away with, Mr. Fraser asserted.

Mr. Nowlan said in the few months that he had sat in the House of Commons with Charlie Stephenson, he had been impressed with his ability and conscientiousness. We need him in Ottawa again, he declared, not as a member of the opposition but as a member on the government side of the House. The president of the National PC Association charged that C. D. Howe and Prime Minister St. Laurent had declared that there was no waste and extravagance on the part of the Liberal government. If that is the issue on which they wish to fight this election we are willing to fight them on it, he declared.

He cited the case at Farnham, Que., where even army buildings themselves had been stolen from their foundations. Watson Sellers, an official, not of the government, but of the House of Commons, has reported that there is waste, inefficiency and poor accounting in government departments, he asserted. Col. Currie said it in his report and the same account of waste and extravagance was given in the McNab report which the Liberals had denied existed, he declared.

Mr. Nowlan pointed out that at a time there were less than 100,000 in the Armed Services, the Government had purchased 1,700,000 neckties. We may not have had any radar or anti-aircraft defences to bring an enemy down, he declared but if we could get them down we could tie them hand and foot with these neckties to every tree in Durham County.

RESPECT FOR PARLIAMENT

The speaker charged the Liberal Government with lack of respect for Parliament. Parliament has less prestige and is treated with more contempt than ever before in this country's history.

This Government has been in power too long. The opposition knows it is beaten before it starts. Liberal members' march is like in the Reichstag under Hitler. They vote for the Liberal motion and their duty is done. We should never again have a Government with that great a majority. It is bad for the country, a bad thing for Parliament and for the Liberals themselves. He accused the Liberals of flouting Parliament by passing legislation by order-in-council while the house was in session. It is time for a change, new vision and a new approach, Mr. Nowlan declared.

Other speakers were, Hon. John Foote, MPP, Ontario Minister of Reform Institutions, Ollie Taylor, Cobourg Progressive Conservative candidate, Northumberland, Irwin Colwill, Newcastle retiring president of the Durham Progressive Conservative Association, and the newly elected president of the Association, Alex Carruthers Garden Hill.

Other officers of the Association elected were, 1st vice-president, Robert Sisson, Bethany; 2nd vice-president, Jack Green, Blackstock; 3rd vice-president, Mrs. Ruth Clarke, Port Hope; 4th vice-president, Mrs. Arthur Bailey, Blackstock; 5th vice-president, Mrs. John Wright, Millbrook; secretary-treasurer, R. R. Waddell, QC, Orono, re-elected.

Careless Driving Charge Adjourned

COBOURG — (ENS)—Charged with careless driving, Harvey Bradshaw, 57, Cobourg, was given an adjournment of one week.

Joseph David Smith, formerly of Cobourg, now no fixed abode, pleaded guilty to being drunk and illegal possession. He was fined $10 and costs on each charge or ten days in jail, consecutive.

Rosario Bedard of Port Hope appeared on a charge of driving while impaired by alcohol and debated whether he should plead guilty or wait until blood test results were back. Magistrate R. B. Baxter commented that it might be a gamble he wasundertaking as the blood test might support a drunk driving charge. Bedard decided to plead guilty to the lesser charge and was fined $50 and costs.

Students Drown Out Tim Buck's Speech

TORONTO (CP)—University of Toronto students drowned out a speech Saturday by Tim Buck, national leader of the Communist Labor-Progressive party.

The speech, at Queen's Park where the Ontario government building is located, was at a delayed observance of May Day.

Mr. Buck hailed Communist victories in British Guiana and in French municipal elections and said "victory is coming." When he asserted he wanted peace the students chanted "a piece of Canada, a piece of the United States."

New School Damaged By Weekend Vandals

4 Die In Explosion

SCRANTON, Pa. (AP) — Four workmen were killed Sunday in a powder blast which destroyed two mixing mills at a Du Pont company explosives factory at nearby Moosic. A Du Pont spokesman said about 600 pounds of black powder went up, ripping apart the two 20-foot square wooden structures. The blast was felt in a 20-mile radius but did no other damage.

Gas Jet Goes Out Father, Son Die

KITCHENER (CP) — A father and son died Sunday night when an illuminating gas jet went out in the son's home while the two men slept.

Police said they found the bodies of David Beggs and his son, Bert, shortly before midnight. They said Mr. Beggs, of nearby Drayton, was visiting the son during the weekend.

Police said they had not yet determined how the gas jet was opened.

They said the jet may not have been turned off tightly after the men had prepared dinner or that the gas had been turned on low and was snuffed out by a draft.

Cancer Specialist Sees Cigarette Smoking Danger

WASHINGTON (AP)—A cancer specialist says unpublished findings suggest a close relationship between lung cancer and cigaret smoking, but not cigar or pipe smoking.

Dr. Norman Topping told a House of Representatives sub-committee that a paper presented last month at the meeting of the American Epidemiological Society said "that there was a definite correlation. . .between cigaret smoking (and lung cancer), but there was no correlation between cigar smoking or pipe smoking."

He continued:

"The implication there is that it was not the tobacco necessarily which caused the cancer of the lung, but that something in the process or perhaps the peculiarities of the cigaret smoking were correlated with cancer of the lung, rather than tobacco per se.

"Otherwise you would find it in heavy cigar smokers as well, which they did not find."

PAPER NOT PUBLISHED

Dr. Topping added that "this paper has not been published." He did not say who presented the paper or what research preceded it.

He and other physicians testified on April 17 before a House appropriations sub-committee considering the budget requests of the National Cancer Institute. The committee made the hearing record public today.

Dr. Cornelius P. Rhoads, director of the Sloan-Kettering Institute of the Memorial Cancer Centre in New York city, said studies have shown that when the number of cigarets, smoked each day increases, the rate of mortality also increases "sharply."

"Smoking certainly is not the only cause of lung cancer, nor does in any sense everybody who smokes excessively get lung cancer, but there is a correlation between the smoking and the amount smoked and the occurrence of cancer of the lung, which is a problem of rapidly increasing proportions," he said.

MORE TENSE

Dr. Charles Cameron, medical and scientific director of the American Cancer Society, said another suggestion had been made by a District of Columbia surgeon whom he did not name.

"It has been suggested," Dr. Cameron said, "that people who smoked are more tense, more nervous, and have a different hormone composition from the people who do not, and that cancer of the lung and conceivably elsewhere may receive emphasis from this and not the mechanical act of smoking. . . .

"I venture to say that people who smoke cigarets are more nervous than people who smoke cigars."

Czechs Proclaim Amnesty Soviet-Style

VIENNA (AP)—A second Communist satellite — Czechoslovakia —proclaimed an amnesty in the Soviet pattern today for lesser offenders, both civilian and military.

Radio Prague said the clemency decree, signed by President Antonin Zapotocky, went into effect today.

The broadcast made no mention of AP correspondent William N. Oatis, arrested two years ago in Prague on charges of spying and now serving a 10-year jail sentence.

It seemed unlikely that Oatis would benefit from the decree. The Czech amnesty, like those proclaimed for the Soviet Union and for Communist Romania, specifically excluded all persons convicted of treason, espionage or sabotage.

The new Soviet regime proclaimed the first sweeping Red clemency on March 27 after Stalin's death. Romania followed suit April 4, and Western observers speculated that the other East European satellites — Czechoslovakia, Poland, Hungary, Bulgaria, Albania and occupied East Germany—would take similar action.

Russia's amnesty freed all persons serving terms of five years or less, cut longer sentences by half, and freed pregnant women, mothers of young children, persons under 18 and old men and women. Many pending prosecutions also were dropped.

Shed Gutted By Fire From Welding Torch

COBOURG (ENS) — Firemen were called Sunday to a fire one mile east of here at Mervin Greer's implement shed which was gutted by a fire caused when a welding torch ignited oil dripping from a car. Ken Greer was using the welding torch at the time.

Neighbors helped push out the car, which was badly damaged, and removed the acetelyne tanks.

The interior of the building, which is covered with sheet metal, was considerably damaged and flames ate through the roof.

Production Workers Strike In Buffalo

BUFFALO, N. Y. (AP)—Production and maintenance workers went on strike today at three Buffalo plants of the Twin Coach Co. aircraft division.

The 1,800 workers, represented by Lodge 1814, International Association of Machinists (AFL), struck at 6 a. m. in support of a demand for a 14-cent hourly wage increase. Production of aircraft parts was halted.

The lodge rejected a company offer under a wage reopening clause in the contract. The union said the offer was 3¾ cents an hour. The company said it was between five and six cents. Present wage scales were unavailable.

Gardening Delayed

COBOURG —(ENS)—Prospects of early gardens are fading with the continuance of cold weather.

Warm weather in April had started local householders thinking of getting seeds in and backyard gardens were ploughed and dug, ready for an early start. Then the cold came, plus rainy days, and hopes for getting on the land were delayed. However, wet weather has brought on the grass very rapidly. At least the lawn mower will make an early appearance.

Forgetful Driver

COBOURG — (ENS) — A car owner with a poor memory telephoned police that his car had been stolen.

Police took down the usual details and radioed the cruiser to be on the look-out. The missing car was not found by the officers but the owner who telephoned back that he suddenly had remembered he had taken the car into the garage for a grease job.

To Explain Canada To Washington

While the Prime Minister's visit to Washington this week is called a 'courtesy' visit, it is an official one of some consequence. Mr. St. Laurent will be accompanied by Mr. L. B. Pearson, and the Clerk of the Privy Council and other staff. The seniors will be put up at Blair House, reserved for distinguished official guests of the President. Matters of importance to the two countries will be discussed. Three principal items, it has been reported, are the St. Lawrence seaway; joint defence; American import restrictions on Canadian goods. Canadians will cheer the visit, realizing the importance of the mission. It is the first meeting between the two leaders since General Eisenhower became President.

* * *

The first problem—the St. Lawrence Seaway—is well known to our readers. The last time Mr. St. Laurent visited Washington, in September 1951, President Truman promised American co-operation to enable Canada to build the Seaway alone if Congress did not take action. The Congress took no action, and Canada proceeded with her own seaway plans. Now the Canadian government feels that the project once more will become mired in American politics.

* * *

The defence matters to be discussed will undoubtedly centre on the latest Communist moves towards peace, Canada's attitude towards these moves, and the disconcerting difference between Secretary of State Dulles' belligerent words in Europe and President Eisenhower's statement of American peace proposals. It will no doubt be made clear in Washington that Canada would like to see American peaceable action as well as hear American peaceable words.

* * *

The third topic for discussion is the most urgent, domestically. Recent American trade policies have had an ill effect on Canada, and this country is concerned about the trend. Both the Administration and Congress have indicated that there should be continuing authority, in one form or another, to limit foreign dairy products. This hurts Canadian cheese and milk producers. Bills have been introduced in Congress to ban imports of Canadian whisky and beer, to increase protective tariffs against Canadian lead and zinc, and to put a quota on imports of Canadian petroleum.

* * *

These restrictive American measures and Congressional bills are becoming increasingly oppressive of Canadian trade, and Canada is restive about them to the point of indignation. Item after item reinforces the fears in the Canadian Parliament, recently expressed by Mr. M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. leader, when he called the American government "unreliable and often short-sighted" because it blows alternately hot and cold on lowering United States trade barriers. One instance: a Canadian company's bid on a contract to build air-sea rescue vessels for the United States Navy was rejected, even though it was lower than any other bid. This tallies wryly with the United States' promise to buy military equipment reciprocally. Canada is taking hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of American equipment for the Canadian services.

* * *

Canada has a large trade deficit with the U.S. Last year this country imported nearly three billion dollars worth of goods and services from the U.S. (the figure is $2,977,000,000), but was able to sell the U.S. only $2,349,000,000. This lack of balance is causing anxiety, now that Canada is doing 65 per cent. of all its foreign trade, both export and import, with the U.S. Therefore any American bans and new restrictions can have serious economic repercussions in Canada. Never before has Canada been so vulnerable to economic and political shifts in the States. It is well that Mr. St. Laurent and his party are to go to Washington and talk with the President. We hope that they will put the Canadian situation and views as bluntly as diplomatic language and friendly conversation allow.

The High Cost Of Price Supports

The Federal Minister of Agriculture has told the House of Commons that the agricultural prices support board has seventy-one million pounds of canned pork still on its hands, twenty million pounds of beef, and large stocks of butter and powdered milk.

The theory of this sort of program is that it will stablize prices. The government buys the produce when its price falls below a certain level. This protects the farmer-producer from a complete break in prices. When the product becomes scarce (as butter does seasonally) and higher in price, the Government will put its stocks on the market again, thus protecting the consumer from sky-high prices.

This may be very well in theory, although we doubt even that. But in practice generally only one lever of the theory works. The farmer and producer get their protection and guaranteed price, the consumer gets little or no protection, and has to pay (as taxpayer) for the subsidy to the producer. The total loss incurred by the Government —using tax money—in the fiscal year 1952-53 was more than thirty-two million dollars. This was three times the loss on all price-support programs between the war's end and 1952.

Tit-for-tat, one may say. The Government (through the taxpayer and the consumer) subsidizes industry by means of tariffs. Why not subsidize agriculture? Incidentally, much of the loss incurred last year was due to protection given following the outbreak of foot-and-mouth disease and the closing of the American market.

Year Book Of Canada

The Canada Year Book for 1952-53 is now available from the Queen's Printer, Ottawa, at a cost of three dollars. It is one of the most consistently useful reference books prepared by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, and the most comprehensive. Its 1,266 pages include great numbers of statistical facts about most phases of Canadian life and economy, summaries of developments during the year and a half it covers, in industry, agriculture, transport, trade, finance, defence, population, public health, education and so on, done by chapters. There are many maps and diagrams and a detailed index. It is truly a mine of information about Canada.

The current edition is not really a year book; it is for a year-and-a-half. Its publication was postponed six months, resulting, therefore in its being called Year Book, 1952-53, and not only 1952. This delay made necessary the inclusion of more than one year's facts and records, nevertheless very few of its statistics are later than 1951. One reason for this time lag is that the volume takes many many months to assemble and then it has to be prepared for publication. We would prefer, for the sake of regularity and continuity, that the Year Book be issued each year, as is normal, and not occasionally as now to cover a year and a half or two years.

Among the most interesting items in the Year Books are the special articles. The current edition includes articles on game fish in the National Parks, a survey of Canada's external relations and growth in international status, an account of the development of public health and social security, an article on the pulp and paper industry, and a dozen other articles of special timeliness and wide scope.

Many fascinating tid bits of information emerge from its pages. Did you know that "The commercial fisheries of Manitoba, where there are 26,789 sq. miles of lakes and rivers, yield an annual harvest of fish in excess of 30,000,000 lbs."? Or that : "There has been a slow steady rise in municipal tax levies in recent years"? No? Well, you can inform yourself about them in the Canada Year Book.

Don't Rush Your Garden

Early and enthusiastic planting may bring a fine June garden, but it will not take care of September and early October, when it is pleasant to have plenty of bloom. The charms of autumn flowers are too often neglected, and gardens take on a dead look long before it is really necessary. Even the ordinary annuals which should be put out as seed or as small plants early in the gardening season, can be planted in such a way that they will not exhaust all their bloom in two or three weeks. There is nothing to be gained, and much to be lost, by planting all you intend to plant of a particular flower at one time.

Rushing a garden is of no use. Gardening is for patient people. Too early planting gains very little, unless you are racing with your neighbours to see who can produce the first blooms or vegetables. Useful planting can go on until the end of July, and the results will be better than anything that can come from enthusiastic but hasty planting in early spring.

NOTES AND COMMENT

John L. Lewis is still alive. Recently he testified against the Taft-Hartley law, thus: "discriminatory, punitive, restrictive, repressive, compulsive and oppressive." No garter is choking the windpipe of this knight of union miners.

The United Nations resort to bribery, says the Kingston Whig-Standard, commenting on General Mark Clark's offer of $100,000 to the first Red pilot who brings in an undamaged MiG-15. "A blatant suborning of treachery", says the Whig. A nice fat lure to woo the lucky fellow from wickedness to righteousness, we call it. You'll never convince a materialistic Red that virtue is its own reward.

Musical Notes

By PETER PIPER

FOR SOME TIME there has been a tendency in the concert world to exploit "personality" to the detriment of musical worth. This use of music as a vehicle for a glossy Hollywoodized glamour can have only a bad effect on the development of musical taste. I have the utmost respect for a personality that gently and quite naturally pervades the performance of a great and disciplined artist such as Elisabeth Schumann or Schnabel, to mention only two names.

Artists like these have no need of a spurious personality, for they have the genuine article in abundance. This is the gift to which Goethe alludes when he goes so far as to say:

"Hoechstes Gut der Menschenkinder Ist nur die Persoenlichkeit."

Owing to modern methods of salesmanship, which have invaded the concert world, a certain standarized personality appeal is being foisted on the public, especially the less sophisticated section.

Perhaps it is unfair to put the whole blame on concert management, for there is some evidence to support the theory that the public are getting what they want. One has only to listen to people talking after a concert to find out that a large number seem interested mainly in what the lady soloist wore and kindred topics. Yet there are many who feel vaguely dissatisfied when they are given something rather cheap and slick. The business of concert-giving has become so centralized that mass-production of artists seems as logical a development as mass-production of cars or refrigerators. Programmes are designed to cause as little antagonism as possible. As a result they are becoming too much alike and lacking in individual savour as the meals in large and fashionable hotels.

Ultimately the present trend will, I hope, defeat its own ends, and the public will see through the deception. There are still enough artists of proven artistic integrity who can pack houses and thrill audiences without adventitious aids; and audiences who have experienced that genuine thrill will be less likely to be fobbed off with catchpenny substitutes. In other words the public will become a little more discriminating.

I HAVE JUST been reading a most interesting book called The American Symphony Orchestra and subtitled A Social History of Musical Taste. Written by John H. Mueller, it contains interesting and surprisingly candid accounts of the histories of all the major and some of the minor American orchestras from their inception to the present day. There is the story of "Why Stickwangler left the Philharmonic" and other such details that are assumed to be common knowledge amongst those who wish to be "in the know." We may also learn that the Robin Hood Dell Orchestra, whose name sometimes appears on recordings, is virtually the same as the Philadelphia Symphony, which gives outdoor concerts in the summer under its alternative name. European musicians have for many years been dazzled by the opulence and virtuosity of the leading American orchestras, and this authoritative account, backed up with copious documentation, gives us an invaluable insight into one of the most significant and amazing musical developments of recent times.

WITH CERTAIN exceptions the modern American orchestras are the creation of the big American capitalists of the last century—the Vanderbilts, Rockefellers, Carnegies and some smaller (but still fairly big) fry. It was under this system of the patronage of wealth, supported in greater or lesser degree in various centres by civic pride, that they grew up. Annual deficits were the rule in the early days as much as they are now, and crises arose periodically when certain magnates died or withdrew their support, or imposed awkward conditions on their continued sponsorship. Quarrels between orchestras and conductors, conductors and patrons, public and orchestras marred the peace even in those balmy days, but by and large they were usually resolved satisfactorily because there was always enough money to pay for the best in conductors and orchestral musicians.

The present situation is not so rosy. Costs have risen steeply, and music-loving millionaires of the nineteenth-century pattern are increasingly scarce, due partly to higher taxes, partly to changing tastes amongst the remaining rich. Present-day conditions in the U.S.A. suggest that the burden of subsidizing these orchestras will fall on the general public. The distribution of wealth is so much more equal compared with former years that this appears to be the logical step.

The change is already taking place in some centres, and the choice lies between voluntary financial support and municipal grants. The response to the former has been on the whole disappointing, though this is the traditional American way of doing things. Municipal support, when available, is obviously apt to be more generous than the donations of an enthusiastic minority, and is probably less subject to fluctuation. On the other hand, where municipalities have contributed they have sometimes imposed conditions that have almost nullified the value of their contribution: by exacting a quota of admission-free concerts in addition to the normal series they have subtracted from regular paying audiences and necessitated more rehearsals, which increase operating costs and burden the orchestra with overwork.

THE PETERBOROUGH Kiwanis Festival opens today for the seventh consecutive year, and the auguries are good. To my mind the principal value in these festivals lies in the amount of young talent that they can bring to light and stimulate. I would not decry the entry of older and more experienced performers, for they can help towards maintaining the standards of the competition in directions where youth has still something to learn. But although the older competitor can and often does contribute towards the success of a festival his gains are somewhat slighter. He has usually "found his niche", and the possibilities for his further artistic development are slighter. Habits have been formed and become progressively more difficult to modify with the passage of years; besides this he is seldom in a position to allot sufficient time to practice. Yet on the balance our festivals would be poorer, not only financially, without the more experienced and seasoned competitors.

HIGH-TENSION WIRE

The U.S. Is Dependent On Canada

(MONTREAL GAZETTE)

"THIS is a critical year for Canada's foreign trade."

Such is the keynote of the brief submitted yesterday in Ottawa by the Foreign Trade Committee of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce.

As the brief points out, it is a critical year largely because the United States is soon to make certain extremely important decisions. The Congress of the United States must deal with the American Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act, which lapses in mid-June. President Eisenhower has recommended that this legislation be extended and studied. His recommendation is vital to all countries trading with the United States, particularly Canada.

More than this, President Eisenhower has asked Congress to pass the Customs Simplification Act. This would in itself greatly ease the way for freer exports to the United States. Its importance has been stressed by the Canadian Chamber of Commerce ever since the measure was first introduced.

This is also a critical year in Canada's trading relations with the United States for still another reason. The General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (commonly known as GATT) is due for renewal this year or early in 1954. Canada's experience with GATT has been disappointing. Several of the nations who signed the tariff agreements at Torquay in 1950-51 have violated their obligations, in fact or in spirit, and continue to do so. Unfortunately, as the Chamber of Commerce points out, the United States has proved to be one of the delinquents.

The Canadian Chamber of Commerce stresses that "governmental and private efforts must be made through all channels to promote a return to multilateral trade, a free flow of capital throughout the world and free convertibility of currencies."

In dealing with the United States, on her own behalf and that of other nations, Canada is in a position to exert a unique influence. It is not only in the position of a nation knocking on the door of the United States, asking that the door be left a little more open. It is also in a position to speak very much in terms of a close partner.

Undoubtedly a great deal remains to be done by Canada in publicizing in the United States the importance of this country to the American economy. A particularly striking example of the form this publicity might take was given earlier this year by Mr. M. W. Mackenzie, executive vice-president of the Canadian Chemical and Cellulose Company Limited.

Mr. Mackenzie was speaking at a conference sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce of Greater Philadelphia. He asked his audience to realize not only the great influence that the United States has upon Canadian trade. He asked also for a wider realization of the great stake that the United States has in the prosperity of Canada.

Mr. Mackenzie drew attention to three facts. They are facts that every Canadian might well memorize and impress upon his American friends on every suitable occasion.

The first fact is that Canada has been purchasing for cash nearly one quarter of the total export sales of the United States. This makes Canada by far the best customer the United States has.

The second fact is that almost a quarter of the capital invested by citizens of the United States outside their own country is invested in Canada. The value of this investment depends upon Canada's future prosperity.

The third fact is that investments made by the United States in Canada are already producing a quarter of the total cash income that Americans receive on all their foreign investments.

Therefore, if the prosperity of Canada is dependent upon greater freedom of trade in the world, the United States cannot overlook the fact that the prosperity of Canada will greatly affect about one-quarter of their total cash export sales, about one quarter of their foreign invested capital, and about one quarter of their foreign investment income.

When Canada requests that tariff and other barriers be eased, it is not making a request that the United States should heed merely for reasons of goodwill. It is making a request that the United States might well heed for the most practical reasons of its own.

This is a good time for Canadians to realize how great is Canada's economic dependence upon the United States. But it is also a good time to begin emphasizing the economic dependence of the United States upon Canada. For, in the end, most problems are solved only by the recognition of interdependence.

Dining With 6,000

(Ottawa Journal)

It was quite an evening when 6,000 sat down to supper with Cardinal Leger in Montreal. Arranged by the Lacordaire and Ste. Jeanne d'Arc temperance societies it gave "the ordinary persons" a chance to greet His Eminence. It was the largest gathering of its kind ever held in Montreal, and 5,000 others who sought admission could not be accommodated.

The "family party" in which the laity joined to honou: their spiritual father was typically French-Canadian in its friendly setting. Following joint recitation of the rosary there was an enjoyable meal during which the Cardinal led in the singing of favourite folksongs.

There was only one speech, a short intimate talk by the Cardinal in which he voiced appreciation of the honour accorded to him and voiced the wish that the same happy family spirit might actuate the world.

At 48, Cardinal Leger is the second youngest member of the College of Cardinals. His popularity was evident from the gathering.

Proceeds of the evening went to charity and in this spirit most of the food and service was donated.

Bible Message

(From the Authorized Version)

And the Lord God caused a deep sleep to fall upon Adam, and he slept; and he took one of his ribs, and closed up the flesh instead thereof; and the rib, which the Lord God had taken from man, made he a woman, and brought her unto the man. (Gen, 2:21,22.)

◆ ◆ ◆

Now the serpent was more subtil than any beast of the field which the Lord God had made. And he said unto the woman, Yeah hath God said, Ye shall not eat of every tree of the garden?

And the woman said unto the serpent, We may eat of the fruit of the trees of the garden: but of the fruit of the tree which is in the midst of the garden, God haith said, Ye shall not eat of it, neither shall ye touch it, lest ye die.

And the serpent said unto the woman, Ye shall not surely died: for God doth know that in the day ye eat thereof, then your eyes shall be opened, and ye shall be as gods, knowing good and evil. And when the woman saw that the tree was good for food, and that it was pleasant to the eyes, and a tree to be desired to make one wise, she took of the fruit thereof, and did eat, and gave also unto her husband with her; and he did eat . . .

And the Lord God called unto Adam, and said unto him, Where art thou? And he said, I heard thy voice in the garden, and I was afraid, because I was naked; and I hid myself.

And he said, Who told thee that thou wast naked? Has thou eaten of the tree, whereof I commanded thee that thou shouldest not eat?

And the man said, The woman whom thou gavest to be with me, she gave me of the tree, and I did eat.

And the Lord God said unto the woman, what is this that thou hast done? And the woman said, The serpent beguiled me, and I did eat. (Gen. 3:1-6, 9-13.)

Letters To The Editor

THE OLD GRAY-DORT

Sir:

Boys, spring's here agin and question is whom
Are you buying a car; any sort.
Though they're closed cars today, and lots on display—
My feelings go back to the Dort.

One crank she's away no matter the day
Whether winter or summer or spring
And all through the day along the highway
You'll just hear the old motor sing.

When you come to a hill, it would give you a thrill—
You never need change any gear
While other cars quit and sputter and spit
Which certainly seems mighty queer.

I drove her three years, and I'm giving three cheers
To the men who could make such a car;
If their company went broke it sure was no joke
That they couldn't keep on and go far.

The Ramblin Rose.

USE OF MORROW PARK

Sir:

I understand the will left by the late Harold Morrow states that the exhibition property must be used for agricultural purposes.

Apparently, this is the sticker preventing the Memorial Centre from being erected on that site.

How come then (Morrow Trust members and Peterborough Exhibition Board) that the park is used for—softball, soccer, football, air cadet training, boat warehouse, transport garage, sponsored carnivals and many other activities that are a long way from agriculture?

New Crown Will Appear As Queen Makes Change

By DOUGLAS HOW
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP)—A new crown is to come into use in Canada.

It is expected to emerge gradually in many Canadian military badges, buttons and insignia, on stamps, on coins, on the governor-general's standard or personal flag and elsewhere. It might even lead to the first alteration in the Canadian coat of arms in 32 years.

The reason is Queen Elizabeth's decision to change the heraldic representation of St. Edward's crown, the Coronation crown, which has adorned such things in Commonwealth countries for 52 years.

The change is relatively simple but its effects will range far and its significance is symbolic of the fluid political pattern of the countries that owe allegiance to the throne.

NEW QUEEN, NEW CROWN—A new crown is going into gradual use in Canada. For 52 years the crown on the right has been the one used on Canadian military badges and insignia, on coins, stamps, on the Governor-General's standard and elsewhere. It is called the Tudor crown and is a heraldic representation of the St. Edward's Coronation crown. Queen Elizabeth has decided to use a representation (left) which more closely resembles the actual St. Edward's crown. The main difference is in the pearl-studded arch which in the Tudor crown rises in a semi-circle but in the other dips at the centre.

OMITS IMPERIAL TOUCH

The representation of the crown that is going out had imperial significance. It stemmed from a decision of Queen Victoria to alter the heraldic representation to make it more in keeping with her status as an empress. Elizabeth, a queen but not an empress, is going back to a design that omits the imperial touch.

The difference briefly is this:

The four pearl-studde arcnes of gold—symbols of independent sovereignty—form a semi-circle in the design being abandoned. In the new representation, they go back to the downward curve—forming a kind of figure eight cut in two lengthwise—at the point of intersection. They dip at the centre as they do in the real St. Edward's crown.

The Queen also is changing the type of lettering in her royal cypher—E II R—to straight Roman style from the Italic script used since Edward VII. This also will mean changes in Canada.

Actually the crown that for years has graced Canadian badges, coins and the like has not accurately pictured St. Edward's crown. It was an heraldic representation, a licensed exaggeration and was known widely as the Tudor crown. The new design will be much closer to the real thing and will be called by the real name, St. Edward's Crown.

CORONATION CROWN

St. Edward's crown is the one which for brief seconds will touch the head of Elizabeth in Westminster Abbey June 2 and never be worn by her again. It weigns five pounds. The crown she will wear on state occasions in the future is the imperial state crown, which weighs about two pounds.

The Canadian armed forces plan to make the change gradually in their insignia. Broadly, the orders are expected to be that there is to be no sweeping immediate switch, that the change will take place as new badges, colors or other emblems come in or as old badges wear out and the dies or patterns would normally have to be replaced.

Thus two reserve force infantry regiments getting new colors—the Royal Newfoundland Regiment and the New Brunswick Scottish—are both to have the new-type representation of the crown in them. The Queen herself approved the colors but signified that they should bear St. Edward's crown.

Two army corps, the engineer and service corps, use both the crown and cypher in their badges and will get both changed. The crown that signifies the rank of army majors will be changed, too, and the same sort of alterations will make themselves felt in the navy and air force.

ON STAMPS, COINS

New stamps and coins bearing the likeness of the crowned Elizabeth are expected to bear St Edward's crown, too, and the governor-general's standard is also expected to abandon the Tudor representation for its successor.

What the cabinet will decide to do about the coat of arms, if anything, remains to be seen but it also is topped by the Tudor crown. The original, royally proclaimed in 1921, now hangs in the office of C. S. Stein, undersecretary of state, an ornate magnificence about four feet high. Reproductions are used widely throughout the country.

Some heraldry experts feel that if a change is to be made in the coat of arms—or, more rightly, the armorial bearings—the opportunity should be seized to make a general overhaul. They feel the present design is hardly compatible with the autonomy and eminence Canada has achieved since 1921.

In particular, they feel that the maple leaves which signify Canada are in a subordinate position hardly in keeping with Canada's present status.

But there is no sign yet that cabinet or its top officials are considering any change.

Coronation Route Is Rich In Historical Associations With Britain's Royal Family

LONDON (Reuters)—When the Queen rides in her golden coach to the Coronation in Westminster Abbey, she will travel along a five-mile route rich in historical associations of Britain's past.

There will be memories of Monarchs as unhappy as she is gay, ghosts of elegant fops, daredevil highwaymen and famous men of letters.

On leaving Buckingham Palace, the Queen will first drive along the mile-long mall.

She will pass Clarence House, the first home of her own as a married woman, where she lived before moving to Buckingham Palace.

Next to it is Marlborough House where Queen Mary died recently.

The Mall stretches up to Admiralty Arch, both made between 1903 and 1913 as a national memorial to Queen Victoria.

The procession then goes down Northumberland avenue to the Thames embankment past the Houses of Parliament and finally into Parliament Square and up to Westminster Abbey.

NOTORIOUS STAR CHAMBER

In Parliament Square once stood the notorious and feared star chamber, where offenders against the government were tried without recourse to common law.

After the Coronation, the Queen will pass the spot where King Charles I lost his head Jan. 30, 1649.

This was in Whitehall now the street of government departments.

The palace, where Henry VIII and Oliver Cromwell died, and where Queen Elizabeth I sometimes entertained her suitors, was destroyed by fire in 1698. Only the banqueting hall and a few adjoining buildings, now used as a war museum, stand today.

Near here at Charing Cross, heartbroken King Edward I erected one of 12 crosses to commemorate his popular wife, Queen Eleanor, after her death.

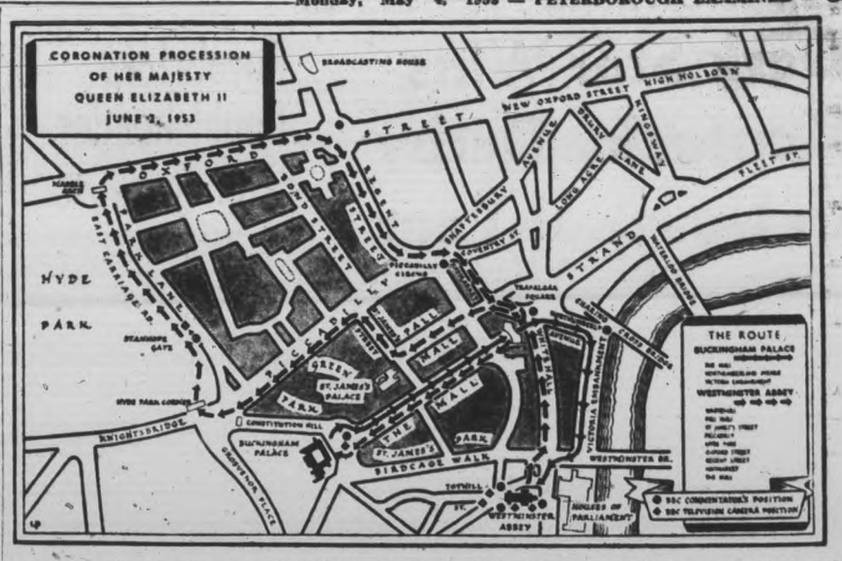
The Queen will then enter London's Pall Mall and St James street where literary giants, politicians and painters like Dr Johnson, Sheridan, Steele, Gibbon, Burke, Pitt and Reynolds used to discourse.

FROM FRENCH GAME

Pall Mall took its name from a French game called Palle Maille, a cross between croquet and golf, which leisurely dandies of the 1660s used to play there.



The Queen then drives down Piccadilly where, as a child she lived in a house near Hyde Park.

The procession will go through the park to Marble Arch, its northern gateway. This once was open country, and not far away masked highwaymen used to lie in wait to rob coaches coming from the north.

At Marble Arch stood Tyburn tree where crowds once gathered to see men hanged, drawn and quartered. In 1724 Jack Sheppard, most notorious of all highwaymen, was executed there.

After Marble Arch, the procession will wind into Oxford and Regent streets, lined with big department stores, before reaching the Mall again and so to Buckingham Palace.

Flags of all the Commonwealth and many other countries will fly along the Coronation route Buildings will be decorated with scarlet, royal blue, white and gold. Heraldic standards will flutter from the decorated lamp posts.

U.S. Auto Industry Hits Biggest Production Ever

DETROIT (AP) — The United States auto industry will produce an estimated $12,000,000,000 worth of civilian cars and trucks and replacement parts this year.

In addition it will account for several billion dollars worth of military goods, tanks, aircraft and aircraft engines, cannon and other weapons and an undisclosed amount in secret items.

The figures for civilian goods are wholesale valuations. They give emphasis to the expansion the car industry has undergone since the Second World War. The highest dollar volume attained by the car makers in the pre-war era was slightly under $3,500,000,000 in 1929.

That was the age of a larger dollar value; you could buy an automobile then for less than half what you have to pay for it today. Yet unit volume of vehicles and replacement parts today is running well over twice the average of the mass production years before the Second World War.

DON'T KNOW POTENTIAL

Probably nobody knows how many vehicles the industry could produce if put to the test. Right now its assembly lines are operating at a level that if maintained for 52 weeks could produce more than 8,500,000 cars and trucks. It is doing this with two-shift operations supplemented by Saturday overtime.

In the pre-war years the industry made production records with many three-shift schedules.

However, barring something unforeseen, the industry is not this year likely to better the record production mark of slightly more than 8,000,000 cars and trucks it made in 1950.

The factory sales managers do not agree that the car market could be oversold this year or next. They have been predicting that the new car market will require 5,500,000 units this year.

Normal transportation requirements, they say, will need that many cars annually for many years to come. Besides picturing an increase in total car requirements, they estimate that something like one-third of all the cars currently in use are over-age vehicles, many in need of replacement.

Three Boys Missing

They had not returned Sunday night and police searched for them, dragging the Don river and patrolling the waterfront. Missing are Henry Quigley, 10; Howard, 7; and Paul, 5. The Quigley family came here from Penetanguishene 12 years ago.

18 Die In Hut Fire

Dark Star Wins Kentucky Derby In Upset of Year

By JOHN CHANDLER

LOUISVILLE (AP)—One of the loudest post-Kentucky Derby post-mortems in many a year was spinning around mint julep town today after Dark Star Saturday gave the business to Native Dancer's unbeaten streak in the 79th edition of the run for the roses.

Did he best horse win? The consensus was that he did not—that the big grey Dancer should have copped the big three-year-old prize.

Dark Star, the brown Cain Hoy Stable colt who led all the way to score a terrific upset by beating the Dancer by a head at the wire in the $118,100 race, covered the 1¼ miles in two minutes, two sedonds.

It was generally agreed that Henry Moreno, the little jockey who rode Dark Star, did a whale of a job in the saddle. A lot of onlookers thought jockey Eric Guerin got a bit panicky and lost his head when Native Dancer got banged around by Money Broker on the first turn.

FULL OF PRAISE

"Our boy used his head, and couldn't have done better with a blueprint," said the trainer for Harry ". Guggenheim, master of the Cain Hoy Stable.

Hayward said he told Moreno to take it easy at the start, but when Moreno discovered soon after the start his horse was raring to go, he went on to the front and stayed there. Correspondent from California, Straight Face from New York, Native Dancer from the same place and the others all took a crack at him one time or another, but they never caught him.

Many observers thought Guerin was laying back too far in the first run past the stands, and was asking for trouble on the first turn. Native Dancer was seventh, where he might have been up with Dark Star, Correspondent and Ace Destroyer in that first quarter mile.

Dark Star paid $51.80 for $2 in the upset victory. He paid $13.60 to place and $7 to show.

Penticton Beat Dutchmen 2-1 Behind Gillson's Goal Work

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP)—Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen, seeking their first Allan Cup, Saturday night ran into a familiar and formidable obstacle—Bobbie Gillson.

Gillson, netkeeper of Owen Sound Mercurys of the Ontario Hockey Association senior A series, was taken on by Penticton Vs as a replacement for the injured Ivan McClelland, and his wizardry in the nets gave the western representatives a 2-1 victory, their first in the best-of-seven series Kitchener leads the finals 2-1.

The Dutchmen now are trying to get rid of this obstacle. Sunday, they filed an official protest with the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association. Club officials contended the Dutchmen should not be forced to play against an OHA goaltender that they twice shifted to the bench.

GIVEN BAD TIME

Gillson was in the nets when the Dutchmen faced the Mercurys in the OHA playoffs. Then he was called in by Sudbury Wolves in the all-Ontario finals and gave the Dutchmen a bad time.

In their protest the Dutchmen charged that the CAHA is not entitled to grant the replacement because the medical certificate for McClelland stated only that he would be unable to play for three days. Under CAHA rules, they say, a replacement can only be granted when a certificate is obtained saying the player is permanently out of action for the rest of the season.

Bobby Bauer, Dutchmen president, claimed McClelland will be ready to play in tonight's game, although the Penticton goalkeeper has a badly swollen right arm and is carrying it in a sling.

GREATLY PLEASED

"Gillson—he's one hell of a goalie," he said. "He's sensational. Both sides had a lot of opportunities but we got the most goals."

The Dutchmen fired 45 shots on Gillson, most at short range, and he let only one slide past him. Keith Woodall, between the Kitchener pipes, stopped 25.

Both teams went through a scoreless first period before Bill Warwick took Jack McIntyre's pass and slammed in Penticton's first goal at 1:23 of the second.

TIE IT UP

McIntyre scored the winner at 16:30 of the third period on an error by the Dutchmen. Oliver overskated the puck behind his defence and McIntyre pounced on it and sent a sizzler into the right corner.

The fifth game will be played here Wednesday night.

Royals Take Doubleheader From Syracuse

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Montreal Royals held on to their International Baseball League leadership during the weekend, winning two out of three games. They lost 5-3 to the fifth-place Rochester Red Wings Saturday, but won a doubleheader from Syracuse Chiefs Sunday, 5-2 and 3-2.

Royals now have a .714 average against 667 for Toronto Maple Leafs, their nearest rivals. Springfield at Toronto was washed out Saturday, but the Leafs split a twin-bill with the sixth-place Baltimore Orioles Sunday, dropping the opener 1-0 and taking the abbreviated night-cap 3-2. Springfield is in the league cellar.

Third-place Buffalo was similarly rained out Saturday against Baltimore, and similarly split a twin-bill Sunday against the seventh-place Ottawa Athletics, the Bisons walloping the Athletics 10-1 in the first and bowing 4-2 in the second.

DUMP ATHLETICS

Fourth-place Syracuse dumped the Athletics 8-2 Saturday.

In montreal Sunday, Syracuse starter Marvin Williams was pulled in the seventh for Lynn Lovenguth and charged with the loss.

Right-hander Ed Roebuck went all the way for the Royals, his first victory, and was tabbed for only four hits. Chico Fernandez hit three for three for the Royals, including a four-bagger.

Art Dyck went the route for the chiefs in the second and Bob Alexander pitched for the Royals, giving up four hits.

At Toronto, catcher Clyde Kluttz provided the margin of victory for the Orioles in the first game when he belted a seventh-inning homer with no one on. Dick Starr took the win and Vic Lombardi was tabbed with the loss.

THREE MEN HOME

In the second game, Toronto sent three men home in the first frame but Baltimore got two back in the third. Both starters, John Sandford and Jim Post, went the route. Post gave up three hits, one walk and struck out four and Sandford limited the Leafs to two hits, walked three and struck out six.

Buffalo's Keith Little drove in five runs as the Bisons took the opener and batted in two more as Ottawa took the second. He belted out two homers in each game.

Ken Johnson easily won the opener and Ed Burtschy racked one up as Ottawa took the night-cap.

Canoeists Plan Championships

MONTREAL (CP)—Plans for the first "true" championsnip meeting of North American canoeists were presented here Saturday at the annual meeting of the Canadian Canoe Association.

Gordon Jermyn of Gananoque, Ont., newly elected commodore of the CCA, and Harold McCarney, also of Gananoque, were appointed to discuss the proposed championships May 16 at Syracuse, N.Y., with representatives of the American Canoe Association.

Each CCA division would appoint a member to serve with Commodore Jermyn and Mr. McCarney.

Tentative plans call for the championship to be run Aug. 9, either at Mooney's Bay, near Ottawa, or at the Island Canoe Club, Toronto. In all, six events are scheduled — single, tandem and fours in single and doobles.

Commodore Jermyn succeeds Dan Ryan of Montreal's Grand Trunk Boating Club. Henry Farintosh, Toronto Balmy Beach, was named vice-commodore and John Muff, Carleton Place, Ont., second rear commodore.

Oshawa Woman Bowling Champ

TORONTO (CP)—Bea Ross of Oshawa won the women's open singles crown of the 27th annual tournament of the Canadian Bowling Association with a three-game score of 900 compiled during the weekend.

Edna Boyce and Edna O'Dale of Midland won the women's B doubles championship with their total of 1,194.

Hamilton's Central No. 1 defeated 47 other teams for the team championship with 3,351, 30 pins up on their closest rivals, the Motor City group from Oshawa.

The Georgians of Midland took first place in the women's B event Saturday with 2,863, the five from Bracebridge placing second with 2,732.

Sinclair Cut Stone of Hamilton paced the men's open team section scoring 3,634. Mine Mill No. 2 of Sudbury was third with 3,544.

Townsends of Hamilton edged Donaldsons of Oshawa by 87 pins to win the mixed team event with 3,557.

Confed. Boys Win

Confederation juniors took a 33-17 slugfest over King George in a School Softball League game late last week. The winners racked up five runs in the first frame, nine next time up, seven in the third and a dozen more in the fourth of a loose tilt. The losers got eight first time to bat, then three, four in the third and two more next stanza. Cullen and Sutherland went best for them, while Hewie and MacLellan stood out for the winners. Teams:

Confederation—Jackson, Doleman, Hewie, Brook, Westwood, Houselander, MacLellan, Rex, Stevenson.

By CEC. PERDUE, Sports Editor

Talking to Jerry Coughlin on Saturday and the one-time pro puck ace said he enjoyed reading of Harry Thornton and the 247th Battalion team of 1917 here. Jerry rounded up that team and was coach the first part of their season, quitting later to play professionally. However, he couldn't recall this team ever playing an exhibition with Montreal Canadiens. As a matter of fact, he said: "The Petes of the previous year would have stood a much better chance of beating Canadiens than the 1917 team had. That '16 outfit was a really outstanding club but it was thrown out by the OHA after two early exhibitions. They beat the Brampton team, OHA intermediate champs of 1915 by something like 23-2 and then trimmed the senior T. R. and A. (Toronto) Ontario champions by 18-3. The OHA then promptly suspended them as pros."

* * * * * *

Bill Tobin, manager of Chicago Hawks now, was the goalie here for the abbreviated 1916 season. On defence were Pete Spratt and the great Duke Keats. Freckle-faced Specks Bailey was centre—he scored nine goals against the senior champions that game—while Red Bryden was on left wing, Jerry Coughlin on right, and Monty Montgomery was the rover. An extra was Jack Spratt, later Father Spratt. They were a hand-picked bunch, many starring later in pro ranks (Keats was an outstanding NHL-er for years), and Coughlin being the only Peterborough man aboard. When the OHA tossed 'em out they drifted away to other spots, some stepping into moneyed hockey right away. They must have been something to see in their short span here.

Comes Lacrosse Again

Senior lacrosse Petes open their schedule in Orillia this Saturday night, and will have Mimico here either the following Thursday or Friday. At a Saturday meeting, player lists were passed and schedule okayed. Petes have all of last year's squad set, plus ex-juniors Groves, Hickson, Smith, Batley and Robinson, with Merv McKenzie promising to come here later in the season if he plays at all. And Keith Montgomery has been working out with the club and is considered a good prospect in about a month. Takes time for even a first-rate athlete like Monty to pick up lacrosse. Arn Dugan's transfer to Nanaimo hasn't yet been passed, but will come up at the next OLA meeting, possibly in a week or so.

* * * * * *

The committee okayed Toronto West Yorks moving to Orillia, but they must be known as a Toronto team, and they cannot use Orillia players. They've only got about 10 signed so far, and are peeved at Peterborough for objecting to their move out of Toronto. That'll mean hot rivalry betwixt these clubs this semester, commencing in the opener at Orillia this weekend. Meantime, the Petes drill nightly at 7.30. The wandering hockey brethren, Nip O'Hearn, Ike Hildebrand and Don Ashbee, are back, Harry Wipper is due in today, and Jerry Fitzgerald (who has a job here) will arrive this week. So, clear the decks, folks, for the big gutted-stick season coming up right away in the merry month of May.

Will Bobo Hold Hans?

Hans Hermann, who made such a poor job of helping Bobo Brazil in a tag team mat bout here a few weeks ago, now has the Red Mask on his side and they go against Bobo and Timothy Geohagen in the top scrap at the Brock on Wednesday night. Two horrible villains against two popular grapplers and that script should suit wrestling fans perfectly, eh? No dyed-in-the-wool mat follower wants to give out with even a faint cheer for a villainous character in the ring. The semi-final pits the unpredictable Pat Flanagan against rough Jan Gotch. In the prelim, it's big Bill Stack versus ex-gridder Abe Zvonkin of Hamilton. A tasty pro grapple program.

Our junior "A" baseballers are drilling hard now prepping for the opening of the Lakeshore League schedule on May 16 when Cobourg intermediates show here in a Saturday afternoon fixture. It wouldn't surprise us any to see Belleville seniors broken up and spread around in the intermediate Bay of Quinte loop, while Kingston might have to settle for a city circuit. Seems the proposed Border League down that way has folded before it started. Smiths Falls and Brockville are expressing no interest in such a league, while Watertown is ready to toss in the sponge. Senior ball seems to run in cycles in Central Ontario, we expect.

Delegates Revise Bylaws

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Hockey Association rolled up its sleeves for a little spring cleaning Saturday.

Some 130 delegates were on hand at the 64th annual meeting for a three-hour session trimming and polishing the constitution and by-laws of the body which governs amateur hockey in the province.

Most dust was raised when the Port Colborne Senior B club proposed that the Niagara peninsula district be classified as a metropolitan area. They suggested that no club within the area bordered by Lake Ontario, the Niagara river, Lake Erie and Dunn, Sherbrooke, Moulton, Canboro, Saltfleet and Barton townships, and including the city of Hamilton, be of lower classification than Senior or Junior B.

The proposal also would have forbidden either players resident within the area from playing outside or players resident outside from playing within the area.

"PACK TEAMS"

Jack Divine of Belleville said the proposal was designed to allow senior clubs in the area to "pack" their teams. Herb Parker of Stratford claimed it would mean "the rich clubs get richer and the poor get poorer."

The proposal was defeated almost unanimously following a spirited discussion.

Delegates passed an amendment to the by-laws permitting a player who plays not more than three games on or before Jan. 15 and then is released by a club to apply for permission to register and play with a club of the same or higher classification. Formerly such players were permitted to register only with clubs of lower classification.

Only one such registration, however, will be granted to a club in each season.

The executive was granted power to establish a new classification to be known as intermediate C and to give consideration to the reorganization of all classifications with concern to population.

The delegates elected a new executive: Dr. A. E. Smith, Collingwood; Ken McMillan, Georgetown; T. A. M. Hulse, Aurora and Herb Parker, Stratford.

TPT Team Drilling

An open practise of the T-P-T Petes has been called for at 6:15 tonight in King Edward Park by Buck Legrow, his team, representing the Petes of OHA senior "B" competition last winter, is entered for the summer in the men's City Softball League, and will use some of the good softball-playing pucksters, but is also open to any other player thinking he can catch a berth. As the league schedule will be opening in a few weeks, the T-P-T Petes have to hustle with their organizing and practising to be in shape for the season's start.

Jockey Hitches Wagon To Dark Star

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — "I hitched my wagon to Dark Star and rode to glory," says trainer Eddie Hayward, a former jockey born in Bordhagen, Ont.

The 50-year-old Hayward saddled a Kentucky Derby winner in his first try when Dark Star, a 25-to-1 shot, nosed out Native Dancer to win the $100,000-added classic Saturday.

Last winter Hayward was out of a job when the horses he trained were sold at Santa Anita, Calif. He joined the Cain Hoy Stable of Harry F. Guggenheim, owner of Dark Star, a few months ago.

JOCKEY AT 16

Hayward became a jockey at 16 and rode seven or eight years. He began training in the late 1920s and his first patron was the late James Norris, Sr., owner of Detroit Red Wings in the National Hockey League. Later he managed the stable of Mrs. John Payson Adams in California and was remembered on the West Coast for Miche, winner of the $100,000 Santa Anita handicap.

Hayward saw Dark Star capture the Derby trial and then win the Derby itself, a feat accomplished by only two other horses—Citation in 1948 and Hill Gail in 1952.

After the big race Saturday, his friends called him steady Eddie, because the stocky little trainer took it calmly and only became excited when he thought Native Dancer would catch Dark Star in the race for the wire.

Two Basketball HeadsRe-Elected

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP)—Harold E. Cochrane of Toronto and Helen Sim of St. Catharines were re-elected presidents of the Ontario Church Basketball Association and the Ontario Church Ladies Basketball Association respectively Saturday at the 24th annual meeting.

Among delegates to the meeting was Harley Moyer of Sarnia who founded the church loop. Charles Day of St. Catharines and Stan Burnes of Hamilton were named life members.

C. Wyatt of Welland and William Garrett of St. Catharines were elected first and second vice-presidents and Bobby Wilson, president of the Niagara Falls Church League, third vice-president.

In the women's section, Viola Mason of Hamilton and Joan Staff of St. Catharines were named secretary and treasurer.

INTERMEDIATE C

Delegates decided to create an intermediate C classification for Windsor districts of 4,500 and less and decided that overtime will be played in the event of a two-game, total-point deadlock.

Both the OCBA and the OCLBA passed a rule that makes overtime mandatory in all the senior best-of-three series.

Most of the boys' trophies went to Windsor with Central united seniors, Giles Boulevard United intermediate A, Westminster United Junior A and Shaar Hashomyim Synagogue bantam teams taking provincial and Eastern Canada laurels.

Other winners were St. Thomas intermediate B of St. Catharines, St. Paul's Junior B of Sarnia, Hamilton Zion United Juveniles, Hamilton First United Midgets and Welland Maple Leafs Mission minor-bantams.

Womber Wins Over Gavilan

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (CP)—Danny (Bang Bang) Womber, a former sparring partner of Sugar Ray Robinson, sprang the boxing upset of the year Saturday night when he won a unanimous 10-round decision from welterweight champion Kid Gavilan.

Womber weathered Gavilan's brief explosive spurts and won with a swarming attack that prevented the champ from throwing his famed bolo punch.

Both fighters were over the 147-pound welterweight limit. Womber weighed 152½ and Gavilan 151.

"I'd like to fight him for the title," said Womber after the fight.

But Angel Lopez, Gavilan's manager, said "We have no idea of fighting him again. Gavilan won the fight. He won six rounds easily."

Gavilan thought he won too.

"Womber is good," said the Kid. "He gives a good show. But I didn't think the decision was fair enough."

Sunday baseball was illegal even in New York until the first year after the First World War. In the first National League Sunday baseball game at New York 34 years ago today Philadelphia defeated New York Giants 4-3.

Boxing Union Rejects Plea On Turpin Fight

PARIS (CP)—The European boxing union Sunday rejected a British plea that the June fight between Charles Humez and Randy Turpin be recognized as a world middleweight championship match.

The decision was something of a victory for U.S. boxing interests. Before the vote, Robert Christenberry, chairman of the New York commission and empowered to speak for the U.S. National Boxing Association, said the bout could be logically considered only as the final European elimination, with the winner meeting the American champion.

Despite the EBU's decision, however, J. Onslow Fane, chairman of the British boxing board of control, said the British attitude would not change.

Paddy Young and Carl (Bobo) Olson are the finalists in the U.S. elimination tournament.

Amateur Boxers Stage Championship Bouts

MONTREAL (CP)—The cream of Canada's amateur boxers start tossing leather at each other tonight and when the smoke has cleared away Wednesday night champions will be crowned in nine weight classes.

More than 50 boxers, representing points from Halifax to Vancouver, have entered the meet with Quebec having the heaviest representation — 24 entries. Ontario comes next numerically with 13.

The heavyweight class has brought such names as Jim Saunders of Winnipeg, present national titleholder and member of Canada's 1952 Olympic team, Lee Donison of Regina and Calvin (Jumbo) Brown of Montreal.

28,000 Children Will Join In Legion Sport

ST. THOMAS (CP)—The Canadian Legion throughout Ontario programmed one of its largest sports seasons at a meeting of the provincial sports' committee here Saturday.

Some 28,000 children alone will participate in legion - sponsored sports in Ontario this year. This is in addition to the legion-sponsored leagues in which legion members participate.

Provincial tournaments will be conducted in soccer, lawn bowling, tennis, golf, softball, horse shoes, bridge, billiards, indoor bowling and darts. A public speaking contest is included, and final contestants will compete for the B'nai B'rith Trophy at Lake Ramsay in June, where they will be the guests of the legion for a week.

SPONSORS TEAMS

The Sudbury district legion is sponsoring 11 different teams in softball, hardball and soccer divisions this year. The Sudbury district presented the provincial committee with a $500 sterling silver curling trophy.

All zone series playoffs must be completed by June 15, all district playoffs by July 15, and the provincial finals must be finished by Aug. 30. Softball playoffs will be held in June with class A in Toronto, class B in Parry Sound and class C in Aylmer. The provincial indoor bowling championship which was tied between Wallaceburg and Welland in Welland will be played on neutral alleys in Galt June 6.

Cricket Matches Off Due To Poor Weather

Weather conditions Saturday forced cancellation of cricket matches by the local "A" and "B" teams here and in Lakefield. These matches will be played this coming Saturday with Grove School here and the Peterborough-Whitaker "B" team meeting Parkdale in Toronto, the same teams but on different grounds.

On May 16, regular council matches commence with the local "A" team meeting St. Simon's of Toronto at the Oval, and the "B" team playing Parkdale "B." The schedule runs till Sept. 5 with regular schedule matches here Saturdays.

On May 18, the fight for the Ontario county championship begins for the Matthews Trophy. The local team will meet Hamilton at the Oval on May 18. Peterborough won the trophy in 1948 and have done fairly well since in this competition. The next round of matches will be July 1. Peterborough and Oshawa are the only clubs outside of Toronto playing in the council this year.

Ben Hogan Wins Pan-American Open

MEXICO CITY (AP)—Bantam Ben Hogan today won the $15,000 Pan American Open with a two-under-par 286. It meant $2,600 in prize money for the Palm Springs, Calif., golf star.

Dave Douglas of Newark, Del., and Fred Haas of New Orleans tied for second with 289s and split $3,300, or $1,650 each.

Marty Furgol of Lemont, Ill., was fourth with 290 for take-home prize money of $1,150, before taxes.

St. Boniface Hopes To Salvage At Least 1 Memorial Cup Game

By AL VICKERY

WINNIPEG (CP)—St. Boniface Canadiens, their backs to the wall, hope to salvage at least one win in the Memorial Cup final against Barrie Flyers.

Hap Emms' Flyers, carrying a 3-0 lead in games, can wind up the best-of-seven series with a victory in tonight's fourth game. They won the first three games by scores of 6-4, 6-3 and 7-5.

After a St. Boniface workout Sunday, manager Larry Desjardins said:

"We're in a tough spot and against a tough team, but we've come close. If we had received a few breaks, the scores could have been reversed."

The fiery French-speaking Canadian said wingman Ken Busby will get into his first Memorial Cup game tonight, "but that doesn't mean we're giving up. Ken is a keen competitor. The boys respect him and he may be just what we need to get rolling."

HASN'T DECIDED

Desjardins didn't know who would be dropped to make way for Busby. He said it could be a defenceman and that Canadiens would go along with only three rearguards.

That's a strong possibility, as coach Bryan Hextall could always drop hard-rock Garry Blaine back on the blueline. The hard-working right-winger often plays that position when the opposition is short-handed. And despite the extra work, Blaine has scored two goals a game against the powerful easterners.

At Sunday's practice, the Canadiens loosened up their legs after the layoff since Friday night's contest. They also worked on a few power plays, something lacking in previous games. In each of the first three games, the Habs have had, at one time, a two-man advantage, but never scored. Their lack of finish around the Barrie net also has cost many other good chances of adding to their scores.

SPIKES REPORTS

Meantime, Emms spiked reports that Flyers already have their bags packed for the return trip home after tonight's battle.

"Anything can happen in hockey," said the Barrie mentor. "I don't know where these radio reports come from that have been quoting me as saying I'll be 'mighty surprised' if we don't end the series tonight. Canadiens have a real good club, and the series won't be over until the final bell."

The Flyers, who don't work out on Sundays, practised Saturday night.

The Roman Catholic members of the club attended mass in the morning. The Protestant members attended the Trinity Baptist Church at night, where the pastor, Rev. Garbutt Smith, a former Barrie resident, entertained the players and officials at a social after the regular service.

Reds Lash Browns 14-5 To Win Sixth Straight; Pirates Pound Cards 8-2

By JOE REICHLER, Associated Press Sport Writer

It wasn't so long ago that everybody was feeling sorry for Boston's Red Sox and Pittsburgh's Pirates. These "poor" Pirates were a near-unanimous pick for the cellar while the "raggedy" Red Sox weren't picked much higher. But look at these two clubs today. Red Sox, with six victories in their last seven games, are the hottest team in the American League. They won their sixth straight Sunday, walloping St. Louis Browns 14-5 in the opener of their doubleheader, but were nosed out 6-5 in the nightcap.

Pirates pounded out an 8-2 National League triumph over St. Louis Cardinals to climb within a game of the first division. The Red Sox are in fourth place, hard on the heels of the American League leaders.

The pace-setting New York Yankees rallied for four runs in the ninth to nip Detroit tigers 6-5. Cleveland's second-place Indians took two from Washington, 7-0 and 4-3, and Philadelphia Athletics moved into third place with a pair of triumphs over Chicago White Sox, 4-2 and 10-6.

EDGE BRAVES

Brooklyn registered its sixth straight, edging out Milwaukee Braves, 4-3. Philadelphia's Phillies deadlocked the Dodgers for first place in the National League, whipping Chicago Cubs twice, 5-1 and 2-0. The scheduled twin bill at New York between Cincinnati and the Giants was rained out.

It took a three-run eighth-inning rally by the Browns to snap the flaming Red Sox' winning string. Boston blasted out 17 hits to win the opener as rookie centrefielder Tom Umphlett cracked four hits, scored three times and drove in two runs.

Rookie outfielder Frank Thomas walloped his third home run of the season and rapped a double and single to lead the Pirates' attack on three Redbird pitchers as 36-year-old John Lindell won his first game in the National League.

Pinch hitter Irv Noren's two-run single followed by relief pitcher Art Houtteman's wild pitch climaxed the Yanks' winning outburst in the ninth against Detroit.

TWO-RUN HOMER

A two-run homer by Larry Doby gave Cleveland's Mike Garcia the margin of victory after Early Wynn had pitched a three-hit shutout in the opener over the Senators.

Southpaws Bobby Shantz and Alex Kellner teamed up to give the Athletics their double win. Allie Clark batted in three runs in the nightcap that featured a seven-run second inning by Philadelphia. In addition he whacked a two-run homer in the opener.

After Robin Roberts had limited the Cubs to six hits in the opener for his fourth straight victory, Curt Simmons, his southpaw pitching mate, bettered that performance with a five-hit shutout.

SNAPS TIE

Junior Gilliam's seventh-inning single scored Don Thompson from second with the run that snapped a 3-3 tie and gave Brooklyn its victory over Milwaukee. Billy Loes won his third game against one defeat while Ernie Johnson, who relieved starter Max Surkont in the fifth, lost his first decision.

In the American League Saturday, Chicago edged New York, 8-7, Boston defeated Cleveland, 5-1, Philadelphia defeated Detroit, 4-1 and Washington topped St. Louis, 5-4.

In the National League, Pittsburgh blasted Cincinnati 12-4, while rain and cold knocked out the rest of the Saturday schedule.

Gilliam Rates Best Leadoff Man Since '47

Manager Chuck Dressen is high on the talented Montreal grad, who has been on base in every one of the Brooks' 16 games with 18 hits and 18 walks.

"I said down in Miami that he can help us if he can hit .260," said Dressen after Sunday's sixth straight Brooklyn victory.

"He's hitting .310 now and I think he'll be even better.

"Most important, he gets on base. I don't care how he does it as long as he gets there."

In 16 games Junior has been up 58 times. He has one double and one triple among his 18 hits. Opposing pitchers, still probing for a weak spot, have struck him out only four times. It was the same last year at Montreal—100 walks, 18 strikeouts. So far he's up there leading the league in runs scored and stolen bases.

Gilliam came through Sunday with a game-winning single in the seventh to beat Milwaukee 4-3.

On the fielding side, Gilliam has been making plays to his right that Jackie Robinson never would have made last year, let alone this year.

Dressen is well pleased with the infield shift of Robinson to third in order to make room for Gilliam.

U.S. Jet Fighter Pilots Demanding Better Planes

(Who is building the best fighter planes in the world today—Russia or the United States? Control of the air, is vital to victory, and on it can hang America's future. Debate on this question raged through the Second World War. Today the debate rages again in Korea over much the same point — light fast planes versus slower, safer ones. Following is a roundup of the latest views in this controversy, comparing the latest American planes with the Russian MiG by AP's aviation writer.)

By VERN HAUGHLAND

WASHINGTON (AP)—American jet fighter pilots in Korea believe they could just about double their 11-to-1 combat score over the Communists if they had better equipment, says air expert James H. (Jimmy) Doolittle.

That's the newest development in the long-standing debate over which is the better air weapon—the Russian-built MiG or the American F-86 Sabre jet.

Famed flier Doolittle, special assistant on technical matters to Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, air force chief of staff, recently conferred with 12 combat pilots newly returned from Korea.

Doolittle says it is undeniable that air force equipment is becoming costlier, heavier and more complex.

"Actually, the enemy determines how complex our equipment must be," Doolittle said. "It must be better than his. Much of it must be able to operate in any part of the world, from the poles to the equator, at any time, under any and all weather conditions."

F-86 pilots say the lighter and faster MiG can outclimb and outmanoeuvre the Sabre jet at high altitudes. Its cannon pack a heavier wallop than the Sabre's machine-guns.

Vandenberg concedes that the MiG-15 has a slight advantage over the F-86 in rate of climb at all altitudes, is somewhat faster than the F-86 above 25,000 feet and has a higher service ceiling.

The MiG has a larger projectile and a slower rate of fire.

It is undisputed that the F-86 is superior to the MiG-15 in range, at all altitudes. Up to 25,000 feet it is just as fast, handles better and can out-dive the MiG.

The F-86 has six .50-calibre machine-guns and can carry two 1,000-pound bombs, with 16 five-inch rockets under the wing.

Armed with two 23-mm. and one 37-mm. cannon, the engine thrust in the MiG-15 is greater than the 5,200-pound-thrust engine of the F-86A and E models.

"We are not satisfied," says Vandenberg, "but the whole F-86 armament installation, with the present sighting mechanisms, is the best in the world today."

Some pilots have suggested that the F-86 do away with its forward armor plate "because the MiG fire, when it gets you, usually gets you from behind."

Others say that armor plate protection fore and aft tends to make the pilot more sure of himself and thus more aggressive.

The air force nevertheless is looking for a stripped-down fighter which can meet the need for a lightweight jet with unchallenged superiority over MiGs at any altitude. At least three companies are working on "day superiority" fighter designs.

Russian designers have better MiGs coming along. Well-verified reports on the product of these and other designers include:

1. The twin-jet MiG-17, designed primarily for day interception but with enough radar equipment for all-weather duties, has a top speed of 670 miles an hour, armed with four belly-mounted cannon, not yet encountered in battle, but has been seen in eastern Europe.

2. A twin-jet Delta-wing fighter now in production has a top speed of more than 650 miles an hour.

3. A twin-jet swept-wing all-weather fighter now in large-scale production. Top speed, more than 600 miles an hour; operating radius 600 miles.

The U.S. air force has supersonic fighters on the way, but more important for the present, it recently put into operation in Korea the F-86F.

One recent proof of the new power of the F-86: A Sabre shot down a MiG at 50,000 feet. Nine and a half miles up, it was history's loftiest battle.

Main Street Topics

GEESE GO NORTH

Several flights of wild geese were spotted winging over the city this morning on the way to their summer homes in the north. The first was reported around 7:30 and the last at about 8:30.

HOSPITL COST $14.48

Daily average cost per patient was $14.48 a day in 1952 as reported by Oshawa General Hospital, an increase of $1.28 over 1951. The board is planning a 100-bed extension this year. Wages and salaries amounted to $643,000, an increase of $110,000 over the previous year.

PAY UNTIL MIDNIGHT

The parking meters on the city square are now collecting from 9 a.m. until 12 p.m., and not just during the daylight hours as in recent practice. City council has appointed a second attendant, and with that help the toll-time has been stretched to midnight. The public is being reminded that this change is now in effect. Otherwise, they leave themselves liable for a fine.

HOLD CHURCH PARADE

Peterborough Oddfellows and Rebekahs, numbering about 100, paraded to the Salvation Army Temple for a church parade Sunday evening. Col. Gilbert Best, field secretary for the Salvation Army in Canada, spoke on the aspects of power such as electrical and atomic power and then that of God. Music was supplied by the Temple band and songsters, and by the timbrel band, six women from North Toronto.

TWO-CAR CRASH

Two cars in a row of five that were travelling along the Lakefield Highway late Sunday afternoon collided when they tried to miss the first car that had slowed and pulled to the right before making a left turn. Jack Pritchard of RR 3, Lakefield, received $150 damage to the front end of his car when he collided with the rear of the car of Kenneth Broadhurst of 576 Charlotte St. The rear bumper and trunk lid of Broadhurst's car received about $25 damage. The collision occured at 4.30 p.m. during a period of heavy traffic, a mile and a half south of Lakefield.

FIRE AT COURTHOUSE

A gaggle of bicyclists, excited children and motorists followed the heavy fire trucks that labored up the steep Victoria Park hill at 6.30 p.m. Sunday to cope with a fire reported in the courthouse building. However, the big equipment wasn't needed and there was nothing to see because the small fire was confined to a closet in the living quarters of Jailer Stanley Johnston. A child had emptied an ashtray with a lighted cigarette butt on it into the garbage pail. Fire broke out and scorched the inside of the closet and damaged a few clothes. The inside of the closet will have to be repainted. Total damage is estimated at $60.

Theft Victim Remains Critically Ill

Seek Fingerprints Of Attacker On Hammer, Spike

Charles Smith, 79, of Lakefield, is semi-conscious and still in critical condition as he lies in Civic Hospital, three days after a brutal beating about the head by a thief who attacked him and robbed his wallet of an estimated $150.

Mr. Smith, a pensioner from the Quaker Oats Co. and a First World War veteran, received a fractured skull and severe cuts on the head after a brutal beating Friday morning in the A. J. Hudson second-hand store on Queen St., Lakefield. A claw hammer and a heavy spike are being examined by police for fingerprints and bloodstains.

Chief Constable Price Morris, of Lakefield, said today that no arrests had been made in connection with the assault and robbery. Though more coherent than he was, Mr. Smith is still in a semi-conscious condition and is unable to give police a detailed account of what happened.

OPP headquarters in Peterborough and OPP Constable Jack McKendry, of Apsley, are assisting Chief Constable Morris in the investigation.

TAKEN FROM WALLET

After beating the elderly man over the head and leaving him lying in a pool of blood in a small room at the rear of the second-hand store, the thief took the money from his victim's wallet. It is believed to have contained about $100 of his personal money (mostly his Quaker Oats and Old Age pension cheques cashed the day before), and another $50 of business money.

Mr. Smith was found, possibly an hour after the attack, wandering about in a dazed condition in the rear of the Hudson store which is on Queen St., 200 yards south of Mr. Smith's home. His head, face and shoulders were a mass of blood from the beating but he was able to talk and able to walk to his own home.

Until he gets well enough to remember what happened to him, police are having a difficult time making progress on the case.

RAYON AND SILK CLOTHING

A new policy has been announced by the Peterborough branch of the Grenfell Mission. They have been informed that gifts of second-hand clothing which customarily have been sent out to the Labrador mission are no longer required. Instead, old silk or rayon materials that could be used in rug making are welcome. Nylon is not used. The silk or rayon clothing can be left at the home of Mrs. B. D. Hall, of 11 Fleming Place. For 20 years or so, Grafton's store has been a receiving point for mission clothing donations, but it is thought that this gesture of good will is no longer necessary and the clothing can be left directly at Mrs. Hall's home.

START FOREST OF RED PINES—Lakefield and District High School's 4-H Forestry Club started planting 15,000 red pines today on the CGE property bordering the highway at Nassau. Short-Circuit Fires Hydro Pole In Crash

When his car failed to make the curve of Water St. by the Kawartha Garage Saturday morning, Ronald Smith drove off the road, hit a pole and smashed into a fence, demolishing his car and starting a minor fire as the result of a short circuit.

In court this morning, the Port Hope man was sentenced to seven days in jail on a charge of drunk driving

According to PC William A. Scott, damage estimates totalled $1,500.

City firemen were called out to extinguish the hydro pole fire.

City Man President Of Deaf Bowlers' Club

William Mayfield, of Peterborough, was elected president of the Ontario Bowling Association for the Deaf Saturday at its annual tournament in Kitchener.

The meet was won by a team from Brantford who racked up 3,358 points in the 14th annual gathering. Next year's tournament will be held here.

Break Up Crap Game

TORONTO (CP)—Police broke up a busy crap game Sunday and scooped up $5,000 from some fancy, felt-covered tables. They booked John Marco, 40, and Dennis Smith on charges of keeping a common gambling house and 27 other persons as found-ins.

Lakefield 4-H Club Plant Trees On Nassau Ski Hill

The ski hill in Nassau was the site picked for the planting of red pine trees today by members of the Lakefield High School 4-H Club, sponsored by the Peterborough Junior Farmers.

The property is owned by the CGE. In co-operation with the Department of Lands and Forests and the Lakefield High School 4-H club, the company has supplied the land and trees for the planting of 15,000 trees a year over a 10-year period, during which they will replant more than 200 acres, with a total of 150,000 pine trees.

Ken Best, assistant agricultural representative for the Peterborough district, opened the reforestation program. He thanked the high school for letting the pupils out for the occasion, and the CGE for supplying land and trees.

FOREST WAS DANGER

Harry Hamilton, president of the 4-H club, introduced the Hon. H. R. Scott, former Minister of Lands and Forests, who explained to the students that when the first settlers came to the area, they were afraid of the forest and set about cutting down the trees, because the forest was a danger to them.

Mr. Scott went on to say that there are thousands of acres in the province today with scarcely a tree. It is because of this that fishing in Ontario has declined and speckled trout are beginning to disappear. Speckled trout live in water which isn't warmer than 65 degrees, and the trees supply the shade to keep streams and

War Bride Saves Son From Fire

Neighbors Use Water From Rainbarrels To Quench Flames

A 28-year-old Dutch war bride, mother of four children, rescued her six-weeks-old son from the kitchen of her four-room cottage Saturday noon when flames of unknown origin swept up the east wall of the frame dwelling.

Not more than $50 damage was done to the building at the rear of McCaw's service station on Highway 28, 1½ miles south of Lakefield, occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Wesley J. Weaver and family.

Mrs. Weaver had gone to the well about 200 feet away to get a pail of water when her four-year-old daughter, Elsie, came running from the cottage shouting: "The house is on fire."

Mrs. Weaver returned and found the east wall of the cottage in flames. She rushed in and grabbed six-weeks-old Dennis, ordering the other two children, Gwendolyn, 2, and Wesley, Jr., 1, from the house.

She ran with her baby to the house of the owner, A. J. McCaw, who got the help of some neighbors and put out the flames with water from rain barrels before extensive damage was done. In addition to the damage to the wall, a chair was scorched and some groceries in a cupboard were ruined.

Weaver, who is on the maintenance staff at the Peterborough Armory, was at work when the fire occurred. He served overseas with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment during the Second World War and with the Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders in the Canadian Occupation Force in Germany after the war.

He re-enlisted with the 2nd Battalion of the Royal Canadian Regiment in the 25th Brigade on August 10, 1950, and served at Petawawa and Fort Lewis, Wash., but was injured in a motor accident and discharged March 10, 1951. He is a bombardier with the 50th HAA Regiment and receives a small disability pension.

The Weavers are living with next-door neighbors, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Edwards, until repairs to the cottage are complete.

Geese Go North

At the crack of dawn wild geese in flock after flock were seen flying over the district to northern Ontario. Alf Fletcher of Keene reported 19 flocks over Keene in 45 minutes while Lakefield residents saw 13 flocks in 70 minutes. Reports from city residents told of flocks flying over in large numbers from 7 a.m. to 8:30. The flocks were still northbound by mid-morning.

Code Modifies Standards For Plumbing

Plumbing standards are modified in a new provincial code which comes into effect on Wednesday May 6, Plumbing Inspector A. G. Metheral mentioned to the Examiner today, stressing several of the changes as indicating the scope of the regulations issued by the Ontario government.

"Since 1920 our Peterborough by-law requiring tile pipe has been altered to call for cast iron four-inch pipe from the street line into houses where plumbing jobs were done," Mr. Metheral said.

"The new code permits choice of these materials for that detail of work; asbestos-cement pipe; bituminized fibre; cast iron; concrete; non-ferrous metals or vitrified clay. The last of those materials practically means tile pipe.

"In our experience we aimed at trying to provide permanent value of plumbing, and I feel that we can say we had the approval of the trade. For example, in 1950 our records show that 34 tile pipe lines were replaced by cast iron, between the house and the street. The tile pipe had became chocked by intrusion and growth of roots of trees.

"In 1951 there were 37 of these cast iron replacements, and in 1952 the number was 38. Cost of one of those jobs might be around $150 to $200.

"Instead of being held to iron pipe under the new regulations, builders of houses have the choice of pipe material just mentioned.

April Permits Reflect Building Drop

Total Down $45,000 As No Major Construction Starts

April building permits amounted to $330,641 as compared with $375,088 for the fourth month of last year. Totals for the four months were $931,648 from Jan. 1 to April 30 in 1952 and $714,781 for the corresponding period this year.

The largest item last month, bolstering the building record for April, was in the number of dwellings for which permits were issued. There were 35 of them, and most were on single applications, as distinguished from multiple projects of most of the recent springs.

The 35 houses now in early progress represent new value of $330,641. In April last year there were permits for 17 houses, amounting to $143,700. Average dwelling value reflected in those facts has changed but little in the 12 months.

The 17 new houses in April last year averaged $8,450, and the 35 permits last month averaged $8,215.

The miscellaneous column holds all the disappointment in that statement from City Engineer Chalmers' department. Seventy-six permits labelled miscellaneous represented $40,656 last month, proclaiming an absence of major undertakings. That was one of the lowest miscellaneous totals in a long time, relating particulary to spring time periods.

Last month's permits were: nine garages $2,485; 35 houses $287,500; 76 miscellaneous $40,656; 120 permits, total $330,641; and for the four months of the year: to the end of April, $714,781.

Figures for April last year were: seven garages $2,985; 17 houses $143,700; 110 miscellaneous $228,403; 134 permits $375,088. Total for four months $931,648.

DIP GASPEREAUX — Vernon Turple dips gaspereaux from the Shubencadie River at Enfield, N.S., as Wilfred Dillman eyes his catch of the plump, silvery fish, cousin to the herring. Nine Democrats Urge Safeguards

WASHINGTON (AP)—Nine New York Democrat members of the House of Representatives urged Sunday that any legislation authorizing development of St. Lawrence river power must also protect the public interest.

A statement issued by Representatives Emanuel Celler, Abraham Multer, Isadore Dollinger, Louis Heller, Adam Powell, Charles Buckley, Sidney Fine, Lester Holtzman and F. D. Roosevelt, said the resolution by Senator Herbert Lehman (Dem.-N.Y.), now before the Senate foreign relations committee, contains such safeguards they advocated its adoption or inclusion of its provisions in any measure passed.

"The issue of whether we should authorize the construction of the seaway (apart from the power development) is largely academic," the statement said. "A seaway is going to be built by Canada alone unless we join in a partnership with Canada so as to preserve for the United States a voice in the management of the seaway."

"Safeguards include preferences for municipal bodies, defence industries, rural co-operatives and rural consumers, and for consumers in general."

Mass Cancer Detection Survey Planned

By RUSS BRUCE

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP)—A vast experiment in mass cancer detection, already saving many lives here, may expand into a country-wide project equal in scope to the TB X-ray program.

Dr. C. C. Erickson, co-ordinator of the project, says the Memphis cancer survey, which he reports is the first program of its type in the United States, has "fulfilled all hopes and expectations at this level."

The Memphis survey expects to screen 125,000 women for cancer of the uterus in the next two years. July, 28,000 have been examined and more than 100 women are being treated who never dreamed they had cancer.

"By far the majority of these women will be completely cured and continue to lead normal, useful lives because their cases were discovered early," said Dr. Erickson.

The cost-free detection process is quick, simple and painless. Fluid is removed from the vagina with an instrument similar to a medicine dropper. The specimen is studied under a microscope.

If cancer cells or other suspicious looking cells are seen, a confirming surface biopsy (small slice of tissue) is taken from the vervix

The vaginal fluid technique, which weeds out non-cancerous patients, is primarily an aid to daignosis. Final diagnosis of all suspicious cases is made by examination of the surgically removed tissue.

ANSWERS QUESTIONS

The Memphis experiment is expected to answer two big questions:

1. Will the cost of a country-wide program be prohibitive?
2. Will public response warrant such a program?

A test for uterus cancer normally costs from $3.50 to $7.50. Officials have not yet made an estimate of cost under the mass survey experiment.

"Response has been excellent," says Erickson. "The women, physicians, heads of industries nd department stores, all have sworn co-operation."

The survey has been widely advertised through newspapers, radio, posters and individual letters.

QUICK TESTS

The tests, which take less than five minutes, are being made by private physicians and hospital clinics and at large plants and stores.

The survey is financed by the U.S. public health service. Facilities and personnel are provided by the University of Tennessee medical school here and the Memphis health department.

The survey has confirmed that uterus cancer, which can prove fatal in one to five years, occurs in three women out of a thousand. It kills about 14,000 a year.

Waiting For Spring Run Of Nova Scotia Gaspereaux

HALIFAX (CP)—They're waiting for the big spring run of gaspereaux on the coastal rivers of Nova Scotia.

So far the plump, silvery fish, a portly cousin to the herring, have been coming only in dribs and drabs. But when the big migration starts, there'll be action aplenty with the dip nets.

At the height of the run, when the fish swarm from salt water up to the freshwater lakes to spawn, catches run as high as 4,000 in a day.

At Enfield on the Shubenacadie river, the dippers have had their eyes peeled for more than three weeks, but it was April 16 before the first gaspereaux was taken.

LOOK APPETIZINIG

They look appetizing, but relatively few of the gaspereaux end their days on the dinner table. They're tasty but full of bones.

Most of the dippers are out for lobster bait rather than seafood. They build stages across the streams and pluck out the teeming fish with long handled nets.

Catches are kept in individual ponds, ringed by the stagings, and removed when needed.

Managing Editor N. Wilkinson Dies

FORT ERIE (CP)—Nelson Wilkinson, 69, former Toronto newspaper man and one-time managing editor of the old Buffalo Evening Times, died Sunday. He had been in hospital since April 25.

He moved from Toronto to Buffalo and rose to be managing editor of the Buffalo Evening Times while it was owned by Norman E. Mack, formerly of Port Hope. In 1944 the Scripps-Howard group bought the Times and replaced Mr. Wilkinson with another managing editor. When the Times folded in 1946, Mr. Wilkinson retired.

100 Prisoners Fell Dead During Long March As Chinese Entered War

By PHILIP DEANE
Correspondent of The Observer, London

(Ed Note: This is the fifth of a series by Philip Deane, pen-name of Michael Gigantes, who went to Korea in 1950 as a war correspondent and was wounded and captured by the North Koreans in July of that year.)

The kindly major re-appeared on October 26, 1950, and ordered us to move. He would not say where we were going, and he would not answer questions. Then he left us The GIs went ahead. Those who were too sick were left behind. We do not know what happened to them The civilian internees were in charge of the quarter-master captain who had opened up the Chui Am Nee warehouse to the GIs.

"Walk slowly," he said. "Walk very slowly." We marched at less than a mile an hour. The quarter-master captain asked me to go to the front and to walk even more slowly. We nearly marked time. We were going back to Kosang Djin. During the day we negotiated a snow-covered pass, and reached a farmhouse a quarter of the distance to our destination.

"We shall rest here," said the quarter-master captain, "for some time. You must be tired." somehow he produced carrots and beans and he fed us; then he expressed the desire to communicate with the diplomats and journalists.

"Those of you who are fit," he said, "why do you not go south? Take a walk. Find out about the situation. And perhaps you can come and report to me. See how the sick are in Chui Am Nee. If you don't come back, I shall understand. My sergeant and one guard want to come with you. If you meet any of your important friends, tell them about me. Remember I've been good to you. Perhaps, if you meet your important friends, you can tell them about the fate of the others who cannot walk with you because they are not young. Perhaps something can be done for them."

ESCORT FRIENDLY

Astonished, we set off south in the company of a sergeant who carried a tommy-gun and a soldier with a rifle. The two North Koreans were friendly. Through the Japanese speakers among us they assured us that they personally had always been against any idea of ill-treating us. Would we please remember that if we met important friends"

We passed a Korean official who never questioned our right to be where we were escorted. At the top of a second mountain pass, a Korean policeman stopped our sergeant and they had a long conversation together Then the sergeant said: "We must go back."

"Why?"

"The Chinese have won a great victory" my friend said. "They now hold the whole road. It is very difficult to go south. It is better for me to stay with my people. The great Chinese nation is helping us. We will have a good life when we win."

With consternation we heard the translation. That little Korean sergeant was offered a British Council scholarship, a guarantee of free studies at the Sorbonne, large sums of money. For a time he bargained. He wanted more and more. Could his friend also have a scholarship? Of course he could. All the time he kept his tommy-gun pointing towards us with the safety catch off. Finally, he decided he was not prepared to take the risk of passing us through the Chinese lines. We went back, feeling once more, that we had perhaps come very close to freedom.

After rejoining the other internees, we went on to Manpo. We spent the night of October 30 in the open, warming ourselves by a straw fire. A Korean officer came and kicked it out. The babies wept the rest of the night because of the cold.

George Blake, the British vice-consul, made an attempt to escape that night. After an exhausting march over steep hills, he had the bad luck to fall into the hands of Korean prison guards who the next day brought him back to us.

The quarter-master captain said he felt ashamed that people like us were going to be treated the way we were going to be treated. He would not say any more—just goodbye.

The next morning we understood what the quarter-master captain had meant. A group of prison warders came up to us, headed by a major, who said he was now in charge. This was our first glimpse of the man we later came to call "The Tiger".

We were lined up and ordered to empty our pockets. We had to surrender all pen-knives. The old people had to surrender their sticks. Odd bits of straw matting had to be dropped.

"I," said the Tiger, pulling down an epaulette, "am a major of the People's Army. I am to be obeyed. I have authority to make you obey. You will march to another place now."

SLEPT IN FIELD

We marched nearly throughout the night, passing the town of Manpo and taking the road to Kangai. We stopped in an open field to sleep. It was freezing hard. The mother superior of the Carmelites was having a haemorrhage. The babies were weeping. Yet we slept because we were exhausted.

In the morning our beards were white, with our frozen breaths. In a pile, some distance away, were the naked bodies of the GIs who had frozen to death during the night.

The march continued during the day after a meal of boiled corn. The 82-year-old French missionary was being carried by Monseigneur Thomas Quinlan. Miss Nellie Dyer, an American Methodist missionary, was carrying Sister Mary Clare, the Anglican nun, in her arms. Father Hunt, suffering from gout, was being dragged along by his companions. Commissioner Herbert Lord of the Salvation Army, the column's official interpreter had tied a rope around the waist of Madame Funderat—a 70-year-old White Russian—and was pulling her along. Two White Russian women walked with crying, cold, hungry babies on their backs, holding their other young children by the hand. The children who were not being carried had to trot because the pace was too quick for their gait. Two Carmelites were coughing up blood. They were shod in rough wooden sandals they had made themselves. Norman Owen, pro-consul at the British Legation, Seoul, had as his only footwear Father Hunt's chasuble divided in two with half for each foot. The septuagenarian French fathers who were obliged to stop because of their dysentery, were egged on by the guards, who fired on their rifles near the old men's ears.

Ahead, the GIs, in a long, straggly column, still in summer fatigues, a large proportion with no shoes, marched in a column of threes; soon many were being carried. Frequently the exhausted carriers would drop their charges and we would pass creatures, hard to recognise as human, prostrate on the road.

During the morning of November 1, too many dropped out. The Tiger called the American platoon commanders together. Speaking through Commissioner Lord he said: "No one must drop out. I order you not to allow anyone to drop out." He pulled down his epaulette. "I am a major of the People's Army. I am to be obeyed. I have authority to make you obey. If you do not, I will punish you with extreme penalty of military discipline. Even the dead must be carried."

The march was resumed. Before noon men had dropped out of every platoon. The Tiger stopped the column and called the platoon leaders together. A crowd of North Korean soldiers gathered. Speaking through Commissioner Lord he said:

"You have disobeyed my orders. I have authority to punish you." He pulled down his epaulette. "I am a major of the People's Army. I will now shoot you all."

MAKES PLEA

Commissioner Lord, in the Korean he speaks so flawlessly, started pleading for the lives of those young Americans. The Tiger pulled his pistol and put it to the head of Commissioner Lord.

"You," he said, "are only an interpreter. If you do not stop talking I will shoot you." The Commissioner did not stop talking. I do not know what he told the major, but the latter did not shoot; instead, he asked for the officer from whose platoon the greatest number had dropped out. Lieutenant Cordus H. Thornton took three steps forward.

"Why did you let those five men drop out?" asked the Tiger.

"Because, sir, they were dying."

"Why did you not obey my orders and have them carried?"

"Because, sir, that meant condemning the carriers to death from exhaustion."

"You did know I had ordered no one should drop out?"

"Yes, sir," Lieutenant Thornton's answer rang out clearly.

"In wartime the penalty for disobedience is death. You disobeyed orders. I will kill you. That is what would happen in the American army also, is it not?"

"In the American army, sir," and the voice of Lieutenant Thornton never faltered, "there would be a trial."

The Tiger turned to the assembled Korean soldiers. He pulled down one of his epaulettes. "I am a major of the People's Army," he said. "I have authority to kill him. He has disobeyed orders. What must I do?"

"Kill him," screamed the soldiers, "kill them all."

"You see," said the major to Lieutenant Thornton, "you have had your trial, a People's trial, people's justice, now I will kill you."

"In Texas," said Thornton, a tone of contempt in his voice, "We call that lynching, not justice."

Commissioner Lord, who had gone through three and a half years of imprisonment in the Japanese prison camps, who had selflessly wasted his strength to pull other people along, with tears running down his cheeks, fell on his knees before the Tiger begging for Thornton's life. Th Tiger put his pistol on the Commissioner's head. "I will shoot," he said, "if you do not stop talking. You are only the interpreter."

"Commissioner," said Thornton, "there's no sense in two of us dying. The others need you."

Someone pulled the Commissioner away.

"Tell him," said the Tiger, pointing to Thornton, "he must turn about."

ON PARADE

Lieutenant Cordus H. Thornton was on parade. His shoulders squared, head up, chin in, arms firmly at his sides, he turned about like one does during a drill. His eyes did not flicker. The Tiger took a handkerchief and bound Lieutenant Thornton's eeys. Then with his pistol, he shot him in the back of the neck.

A toll, blond sergeant jumped forward and caught his officer's body before it touched the ground. Tenderly, as if carrying a child, the sergeant took the lieutenant's body to the ditch.

We marched on.

That night, the Tiger made a speech and told us that those who had dropped out were being cared for in the People's hospitals. Five minutes later, he called Commissioner Lord to one side and made him sign a certificate that those who had dropped out had died of heart failure. That night more GIs froze to death.

In the morning before the march the Tiger said that those who could not walk were to drop out. He said they would be taken to the People's hospital. Eighteen exhausted soldiers could not walk. Speaking to the village headman in Korean, in the presence of Commissioner Lord, the Tiger said: "As soon as we are gone, bury them without mounds."

That night, the Tiger made another speech, in which he said that all this was happening to us because of the capitalists. The capitalists were making us suffer and the People's government in its mercy had put another 18 stragglers in the People's hospital. Minutes later, Commissioner Lord had to deal with the death certificates of the 18.

The next day we were told to stop carrying Mother Superior Beatrice, aged 77, of the Order of St. Paul. She had devoted all her life to Korean orphans. We were told she would be taken to the People's hospital. A few minutes later there was a shot. That night Commissioner Lord, a pistol to his head, dealt with Mother Beatrice's death certificate. We wondered how the Commissioner kept his sanity.

DIE IN BLIZZARD

On November 4, we crossed a mountain pass in a biting snow blizzard. More and more GIs were dropping out. They lay by the side of the road, mutely looking at the departing column. A young, red-headed kid who could still walk, was trying, weeping, to carry his dying pal A guard kicked him on. He stumbled off sobbing. We heard many shots.

At one point of the serpentine road, stopping because of dysentry, I looked down to the lower bend. The Tiger was pushing one of the dying with his foot into the ditch. When the GI was completely off the road, the Tiger shot him. I saw two more killed this way on the lower bend of the road before the guard kicked me on.

I rememberd sometime I had read in the Soviet writer Constantine Simonov's article "Struggling China" in praise of Mao Tse Tung's army: "... and a few miles away, in the zone still occupied by the enemy, a man, driving before him a herd of wretches with a gesture rendered nonchalent by long practise, put a bullet into the neck of someone whose only fault was that he could no longer walk ..."

People who live in glass houses ....

We marched on, arriving at our destination Chung Kang Djin, on November 8, 1950, having left behind 100 dead, buried without mounds "in People's hospitals."

The moment we arrived, the Tiger said that because of the recalcitrant attitude shown by all during the march, he was going to tighten discipline, and immediately there was half an hour of PT (physical training).

The next morning at seven the internees were ordered out for exercise. Everyone had to come out. Father Paul Villemot, 82, was dying. The Commissioner told the Tiger the old man could not stand. "You," said the Tiger, cocking his pistol and placing it on the Commissioner's temple, "are not obeying orders. I am going to shoot you."

Police Arrest 29 Members Of Peron's Opposition

BUENOS AIRES (AP)—Police arrested 29 members of the opposition Radical, Socialist and Communist parties Sunday on charges of rumor peddling and distributing literature against President Juan D. Peron.

The series of raids was staged in Buenos Aires and Cordoba provinces. Seven women were among those rounded up. Hundreds of others are reported to have been seized recently since Peron charged publicly that the opposition had launched a campaign of rumors in an effort to discredit his regime at home and abroad.

Federal police, meanwhile, continued their complete silence on the progress of investigations into recent bombing incidents in the capital. Six persons were killed when explosions went off as Peron spoke to a giant rally April 15 May Day was punctuated by a series of seven bomb explosions, one of them going off while Peron spoke at the opening of congress No one was hurt in the latter incident The pro-government press has insisted that the bombing incidents are the result of an anti-Peron campaign led from abroad—particularly the United States.

In his May Day speech to Congress, Peron bitterly accused a "foreign power" of fomenting unrest in Argentina. He charged the three U.S. news agencies—The Associated Press, the United Press and International News Service—with distributing lies about his government throughout the world. Peron demanded that congress launch a thorough investigation of the three agencies.

Italy's Montecassino Abbey Will Show No War Scars By 1955

By JAMES NORRIS

ROME (Reuters) — Montecassino Abbey, which 400 tons of Allied bombs reduced to rubble in 1944, is rising again and by the end of 1955 will show no scars.

It is being rebuilt on the same spot where at various times during its history it has been pillaged, demolished by earthquake and at last completely destroyed by aerial and artillery bombardment.

Italy's ministry of public works has already spent more than 2,000,000,000 lire (about $3,220,000) on the first seven stages of the reconstruction, and will spend another estimated 1,000,000,000 lire (about $1,610,000) on the last three stages.

Some 400 workmen and scores of craftsmen are working on the project, under the direction of an architect who is himself a Benedictine monk, Don Angelo Pantoni.

Although the abbey as an institution is 1,400 years old, none of the buildings was of earlier date than the sixteenth century.

OLDEST ART RELIC

The oldest art relic was the great bronze door of the cathedral church which was forged in Constantinople in 1066. It survived the bombardment.

Books and archives were sent to the "open city" of Rome for safe keeping during the war, but many frescoes and paintings were destroyed. All that was left was the crypt and the tomb of St. Benedict who founded the abbey in 529 A.D., and his sister St. Scholastica.

For seven months the German army held the 1,700-foot hill on which the abbey stands and blocked the Allied advance on Rome. Germans and Allies faced each other across the narrow River Rapido, because a chance of strategy had turned the old abbey into the key fortress of the German "Gustav" line.

HAD TO ATTACK

No army could advance up the valley towards Rome without holding that hill, and after months of bitter fighting the Allied high command concluded that the abbey itself was held by the Germans.

In February, 1944, Allied bombers bombed the abbey, and throughout the rest of the campaign bombs and shells churned up the rubble left by that first attack.

The Germans burrowed into the hillside, and stayed there until Polish troops claimed the hill in May, 1944.

10 PoW's Bitter At Charges Of Red Training

PHOENIXVILLE, Pa. (AP)—Ten gaunt, tight-lipped men stepped into the public spotlight at Valley Forge military hospital to deny they had been tainted by communism while prisoners of war in Korea.

They were bitter—and they made it plain they felt they had reason to be.

The stage for their tense drama was set Sunday at the hospital here. It had its origin in the circumstances surrounding their flight home after release by their Red captors.

While the 10—and 10 companions—were en route from Tokyo by plane last Thursday, an air force spokesman said the defence department had ordered a veil of secrecy thrown around the flight "because of the position taken by the army and others that these men may have been misled under conditions of duress and hardship during the period of their captivity."

10 READY TO TALK

The 20 reached the hospital late Friday night, rested for a day and then were asked if they were ready to meet the press. Ten said they were anxious for the chance. Four refused bitterly. The rest were too ill or just didn't want any publicity.

The 10 interviewed were brought into a small auditorium two by two. Cpl. Vernon L. Warren, 22, St. Louis, and Pte. Roger Herndon, 20, Jacksonville, Fla., said they felt they got "a dirty deal" in being labelled Communist sympathizers.

Cpl. James L. All, 21, of Bellburn, W. Va., said: "This Red label makes us feel like criminals. We are all completely innocent." And, after a slight pause, he added: "I never ever heard the term 'Brain-wash' before I got back."

EVERYONE CONFUSED

Some of the staff officers at the hospital seemed as militantly confused by the situation as the men themselves.

"I don't know where this idea started," said one army doctor, "but there's one thing for sure—we're not running a damned laundromat here."

Another officer, who asked—like his fellow staff member—that his name be withheld, said "there has been a big foul-up somewhere along the line."

Competition for the final trophy and the $1,000 prize which goes with it ends in Victoria, B.C., May 9.

Ancient Lacquer Secret Held By Patzcuaro Man

PATZCUARO—The last man to know the secret of the ancient Tarascan lacquer work lives quietly in Patzcuaro, his beautiful pieces filling Mexico's museums. He is Sr. Salvador Solchaga.

If he wished, Sr. Solchaga could live in Mexico city and reap all the glory that goes with his fine work and knowledge. But he prefers his home in Patzcuaro where he was born. He has trained six carefully selected people in the secret process so that when he dies the art will not be lost.

This man learned his lacquer technique from the last master, Don Julio Vazquez who died in 1903. For a time it was feared the lacquer art had been completely lost. Then Sr. Solchaga accidentally found a paper of Vazquez with the secret process recorded. He began classes in 1922 for the Department of Monuments and from there he chose six of the most brilliant pupils to teach the special technique.

Although he does private work in his lovely studio, this artist also works for the National Institute of Anthropology and History. His lacquer work is pro-Columbian style and all the designs are his own. To do this work successfully, he says you must be an artist first. He does beautiful gold inlay work. Sr. Solchage was doing a large jewel box when I was there which he said it would take a month to finish. The lacquer work and gold inlay were superb. Other big trays were indifferent stages of completion.

WORK IN MANY COUNTRIES

At one time Sr. Solchaga was on the staff of the art school which is now the Escuela Vasco. His work is featured in the Museum of Popular Arts and the Palace of Fine Arts in Mexico City. It has also been taken to Brazil, Spain, England, France, Havana and Holland to mention a few places. He enjoys knowing that Mexico's art is being shown to the world more than any personal glory he receives.

Sr. Solchaga is one of the last members of one of the first Spanish families which Don Vasco de Quiroga brought with him from Spain when Patzcuaro was founded. Quiroga wanted to wipe out the bad impression the Conquistadores had made on the Tarascans and he chose only the best Spanish families to accompany him. This man has an impressive family coat of arms.

The lacquer expert points out that there is some Chinese influence in Mexico's lacquer work. In the early days all traffic from the Pacific had to pass through Patzcuaro. It was a border control point where all foreign goods had to be checked. The Asiatic merchants from Acapulco and Zihuatanejo often had Chinese goods and the Tarascans began to adapt some of the designs for their own crafts. There is also still ivory work to be found in Michoacan which has a Chinese influence.

STARTED IN PERU

"I believe that this fine lacquer work had its beginnings in Peru," Sr. Solchaga told me. "In my opinion the first Tarascans came from the south and brought their dyes and crafts with them.

"Here in Patzcuaro we used to have another very fine art—things made from the feathers of the humming bird. Except in the museum and private collections there are no longer any good examples of this work in Mexico. The art has died. The best examples are now housed in the Vatican at Rome and there is a little of it in Vienna.

"It was a beautiful art which the Tarascans developed. They made lovely pictures from feathers that looked like paintings. One of my late uncles did very fine feather work and he taught some artisans. But their work is not too good. Only humming bird feathers can be used, because in Michoacan these birds are all colors and even the smallest feathers are utilized.

"My uncle's last work was a picture of former president Diaz. Even the gold chain of office and his sash were reproduced in feathers. Every time you moved the picture the feathers showed different shades. One of the important things is that artists used to take their time to do beautiful work. They really loved it and this added greatly to the results."

EVERYONE AN ARTIST

Not only the Tarascan emperor but even the workers in the field used to be skilled artisans, Sr. Solchaga recalled. They were never conquered by the Aztecs and they used to make beautiful feather clothes and the best jewelry and pottery. The jewelry found at Monte Alban and in Michoacan is almost the same.

He said that the Tarascans had so many things the Aztecs lacked that the latter were always importing goods from the west. Their copper work and fine wood work was in constant demand across Mexico. The Tarascans used to have copper needles while the Aztecs had only bone and that became an important trade item. The Michoacan people developed a process of making copper hard like iron which none of their neighbors knew at that time, this artist declared.

Canadians have a very high place in Sr. Solchaga's esteem. He said that the United States has too much machinery and too much money now. But he feels that Canada offers a fine field for art and that Canadians have an artistic understanding which can appreciate the good things in the medium of art.

One tribute which has been paid to this man said that it was only through the efforts of the National Institute of Anthropology and the patient efforts and laborious teaching of Sr. Solchaga that the lacquer art has been saved and the production of articles in the authentic local style redeveloped.

Find Business Reviews Have Optimistic Tone

By FORBES RHUDE
Canadian Press Business Editor

Current views of the business scene:

Canadian Bank of Commerce commercial letter:

"Canadian business activity has remained relatively stable at a high level, and month-to-month fluctuations in economic indicators have largely reflected seasonal factors."

Greenshields and Company:

"Most production and consumption figures available for the first quarter of 1953 are well ahead of those for the comparable period of 1952, and, when allowance is made for seasonal factors, the figures compare favorably with the preceding quarter.

"The output of electric energy in January and February showed an increase of 6.6 per cent over the same period of 1952. In January the index of industrial production was nearly 10 per cent higher than the same month last year, while industrial employment on Feb. 1 was the highest on record for that date.

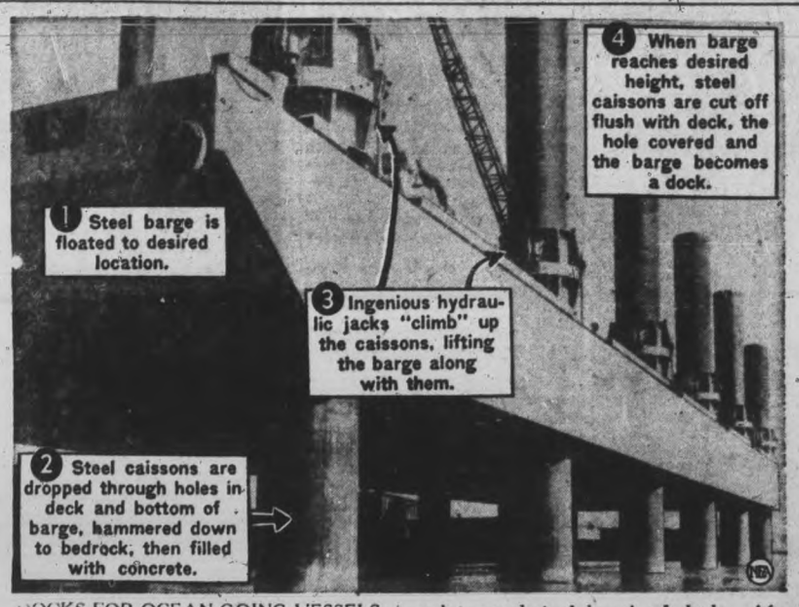
"With average weekly earnings in industry up seven per cent and the retail price index down nearly two per cent, consumer demand was maintained at a high level, and the total value of retail trade in the first two months of the year showed a gain of 8.4 per cent over the comparable period of 1952. . .

UNFAVORABLE RETURNS

"In contrast to the buoyant features of the economy, railway and foreign trade returns so far compare unfavorably with last year's figures. In Canada, the decline in railway loadings in the first quarter compared with the first quarter of 1952, which amounted to approximately 10 per cent in tonnage and six per cent in number of cars loaded, was centred mainly in coal and pulpwood. . .

"With the opening of navigation and with Canadian stocks of wheat oats and barley at a post-war high, the prospects are for an early rise in exports and eventually for a surplus over imports in the coming months.

"Here, the trend in world prices for grain, wood products and base metals, as well as the availability of dollars in countries outside the United States, will be the determining factors."



Wood, Gundy and Co., Ltd.:

"Over the years, Canadian securities taken as a whole, have proved beneficial to individual investors and to the over-all economy of the nation.

"Continued savings for investment are essential to ensure Canada's further growth and strength in the free world."

Plunges To Death

VENICE, Italy (Reuters)—Thousands of spectators watching a parachute display at Venice airport Sunday saw 32-year-old Salvatore Cannarozzo plunge 10,000 feet to his death in a nearby cemetery.

DOCKS FOR OCEAN-GOING VESSELS can be put up in jig time, thanks to American ingenuity and know-how. The huge dock-barge above is pictured at U.S. Steel's Consolidated Western Division in Orange, Tex. Barges can be placed end to end to make any desired length of dock. After being floated into place, they are raised to height dictated by tides and ship-deck levels, usually more than 50 feet. Six barges now being fabricated at Orange for the Army will be almost twice the size of this unit.

Making Your Own Greasing Gadgets

You can make a handy kit for greasing the gearcase of your outboard motor from discarded auto accessories. First, locate a discarded battery tester (hydrometer) and take out the rubber bulb and remove the float, then replace the bulb. You now have a handy syringe that can be filled with gasoline and inserted in the grease filler hole of the gear case to flush out old grease and dirt. To repack the case you'll need a grease gun, and an old plunger-type automodel gun can easily be converted to do the job. Find a bolt with threads to match the grease-hole plug, drill a hole one-eighth of an inch or larger if possible through its shank and solder the shank on the nipple of the grease gun. The gun may now be threaded tightly into the filler hole to force in grease under pressure. Be sure to remove upper vent plug from gearcase so as not to build up pressure inside.

Firmly Tie Up Boat Before Moving Motor

Outboard motors are sometimes dropped overboard by persons attempting to place them on or take them off boats. Nearly all of these cases could be avoided if the boat is always held securely in position when the motor is being transferred.

If there is no one around to hold the boat while the motor is being moved, the boat should be securely and closely tied to the pier or landing at both bow and stern. Anyone who tries to take off or put on a motor while the boat is drifting around at the mercy of currents and waves is not only likely to get the motor wet, but to drop overboard himself.

Next Atomic Tests May Include Hydrogen Blasts

By ELTON C. FAY

WASHINGTON (AP)—The next series of atomic tests in the Pacific probably will include hydrogen explosions of unprecedented magnitude.

Using knowledge and materials tried out cautiously in two previous series involving "thermonuclear" experiments—the most recent of which is reported to have produced the mightiest man made blast so far—scientists and military men are setting the scene for what is expected to be a still more awesome test shot or shots.

The majority of the comparatively minor-scale explosive tests of devices and weapons now under way at the Nevada proving grounds apparently represent preliminary work for forthcoming experiments in big-scale explosions of nuclear fission and hydrogen fusion gadgets in the Pacific.

Apparently convinced in the last two tests at Eniwetok atoll that a hydrogen explosion can be produced, the efforts of nuclear physicists now are directed at (A) stepping up the force of the explosion and (B) detonating the hydrogen bomb with more economy in the use of fissionable material.

NEED STANDARD EXPLOSION

To create the heat and pressure needed for triggering a hydrogen device something like a standard atomic bomb explosion must be produced.

Material-wise, this is costly. And there are reasons to believe that the present heat-pressure requirements for touching off a hydrogen explosion are greater than that which can be produced by a single atomic bomb.

Dr. W. E. Libby of the University of Chicago, in a report Saturday to the American Physical Society here, said there was a big increase last November in the amount of tritium, a possible ingredient of H-bombs. He made no mention of H-bombs, but other scientists noted that the dates he cited coincided with atomic tests at Eniwetok.

CAUSED BY DROUGHT

The atmosphere normally contains only very minute quantities of tritium, a form of hydrogen. Libby said that between Oct. 14 and Nov. 17, the amount in the air tripled, and then gradually went back to normal. He said such an increase could be caused by a period of drought.

The atomic energy commission a month ago made plain that Eniwetok atoll, used for big-scale tests since 1948, is too small for new tests. The AE Csaid it now will begin to use Bikini atoll, locale for the 1946 tests against naval vessels. Bikini is 180 miles south of Eniwetok in the Marshall Island group.

Main Objective Shelved

By FRED HAMPSON

HONG KONG (AP)—The invasion of the kingdom of Laos by the Indo - China Communists causes anxiety in this part of Asia because it suggests that Red capabilities may be expanding.

But the move also could mean Communist weakness.

The northern Indo-China war has been fought for six years around the French-held Red river delta. This area is both the breadbasket and chief population centre of the northland.

The side that holds the delta also holds control. In invading Laos the Communists are turning a reported 40,000 fighting men away from the main objective. In effect, the Reds are sending them off on an expedition to conquer more jungles and mountains. The Reds would get all that by default if they conquered the delta.

The explanation for this apparent military sideshow is not yet clear. There is some speculation that the Reds' objective is to squat on the Burma and Thailand frontiers and link up with Burmese and Thai Communists.

Still other observers say the drive might be the first stride of invasion into Thailand and thence to Malaya and Indonesia, the start of the long-feared drive into Southeast Asia.

But that seems unlikely because the invaders are Indo-China Communists without any such capability. Only Mao Tze-tung, Chinese Communist leader, has the armed power to invade Southeast Asia and there is no evidence that the Laos strike is his work.

If Mao should send his forces into Indo-China to conquer Southeast Asia, they likely will not begin with a military sideshow like the Laos action.

They would roar down on the Red river delta like they crossed the Yangtze river in China, 1,000,000 in a month, and force the issue on the main target. Then they would try for the natural road to Southeast Asia, which is down the Indo-China coast.

The worrisome angle in the Laos invasion is the knowledge that the Reds have men and arms to squander on oblique ventures.

Have the Vietminh Reds enough strength to attack the Delta Perimeter in strong concert with the Laos jab?

If they have, the situation may become critical.

Thinks Seaway Big Harvest For Brokers

NEW YORK (AP)—Republican power plans for the St. Lawrence and Niagara, Richard H. Balch said Sunday, twill result in "fabulous profits for investment brokers and utility promoters." Balch is New York state chairman of the Democrat party.

Balch in a statement said that the administrations in Washington and Albany "have reached the decision to turn over the immensely valuable water power of the St. Lawrence and the Niagara to private utilities in New York state as the next big prize in the give-away program."

Balch said that after a recent visit of Governor Thomas E. Dewey to President Eisenhower at the White House, the president gave his support to a Dewey plan for turning over the St. Lawrence power project to the state power authority at Albany under a 50-year licence from the federal power project to the state power authority at Albany under a 50-year icence from the federal power commission.

ADVOCATED SALE

The Balch statement continued: "Since the state power authority was revamped by the appointment of a solid Republican membership on its board of trustees in 1950, it has consistently advocated the sale of the entire output of the St. Lawrence and the Niagara projects to the private utilities.

"It has opposed the construction of main transmission lines to the water power sites except by the utilities. It has frankly stated its plan to refuse to recognize municipal plants and rural electriral co-operatives set up under state laws as preference customers onder acts of congress.

"The federal power commission turned down the Dewey plan for developing power on the St. Lawrence in 1950. It recommenned that Congress authorize the dual purpose power and navigation project with the usual safeguards for power consumers in New York and New England states.

"The federal power commission also is now being recognized. . . . The commission is now expected to take swift action by reversing its 1950 decision and issuing a licence to Dewey's state agency."

YMCA Boys' Club Assisted At Tea By Business Men

The YMCA Friday Night Club members were somewhat disappointed in the weather for their third Annual Afternoon Tea Saturday at the YMCA. Guests were not quite so numerous as on the previous occasions but the boys felt that friends could hardly be blamed for staying at home on such a rainy day.

Proceeds of the tea are to be used this year for some improvements around the Y. Donations were received at the door and to the total were added receipts from a cake raffle. The cake was won by Mrs. Sid Ray, of 335 Sherbrooke St.

Woman Plastic Surgeon Attached To Allied Armies

VANCOUVER (CP)—She is tall, blonde and shapely, and she spends her life transforming the badly injured by means of plastic surgery.

Dr. Genia Sakin, who has just spent a holiday here, was born in Lithuania, studied in Berlin and lost her parents when the Russians moved into Lithuania.

Her slender fingers have worked for as long as 12 hours at a time on difficult operations, winning her the position of the only woman plastic surgeon attached to Allied armies during the Second World War.

After the war, she became a major in charge of surgery in the main American Military Hospital in Berlin. Later she went into private practice in New York, but in 1950 she went to Greece.

BECOMES LEGEND

Dr. Sakin went to Greece "for a few months." She stayed two years, and became a legend in that country where she is known as the "blonde witch."

In her traveling bag are bundles of newspaper clippings; stacks of letters from the mis-shapen and war casualties she remade into normal human beings; and commendations from King Paul and Queen Frederika of Greece, Field Marshal Papagos, Gen. James van Fleet (then in charge of the U.S. military mission there) and others.

But most impressive are the pictures she carries with her on the "before and after" style.

Dr. Sakin went to Greece at the request of the Greek Medical Care Corp., of New York. Eventually, she moved back to America when her dollars ran out.

But not before she had completed 700 operations on persons who couldn't afford to consult a doctor or on war casualties.

With her when she returned to America was a little leather notebook with a note saying:

"Thank you for all you have done for our soldiers in the most unselfish way" and signed by Queen Frederika. King Paul gave her a medal.

Her reasons for taking up the job of plastic surgery are:

"I am an artist. My hobby is scripture. The German word for plastic surgery means 'sculpture of the living' and that's what I love to do.'

The tea room was decorated with forsythia and spring flowers and the table was done with a centrepiece of tamarack and yellow daffodils arranged in an ebony dish. The charming effect was achieved by Mrs. C. H. Crowe and Mrs. Roy Lewis who also assisted as tea room hostesses with Mrs. J. Barry and Mrs. Tom Cook.

Tea pourers were Mrs. Ralph Hendren and her daughter, Miss Ruth Hendren, Mrs. M. Clysdale and Miss Jean Smith.

Mrs. Eric McKinstry and Mrs. E. A. Outram were general conveners of the tea and they had assistance from Mrs. Armstrong in arranging the plates.

Mrs. Leitha Mansell looked after music for the afternoon.

A home baking table was operated by Mrs. A. Smedmor and Mrs. J. Bailey.

Mark St. CGIT girls displayed the project they have just completed, a model of an African village.

319 Children Of Mission Bands Attend Rally

Three hundred and nineteen children representing the Mission Bands in the Peterborough Presbyterial attended the annual rally held Saturday afternoon in George St. United Church Sunday School. Mrs. F. McIndoo, presbyterial secretary for Mission Bands, presided for the program.

Mrs. A. E. Metcalfe, of Hastings, president of the Presbyterial WMS, addressed the combined groups briefly. The Rev. I. G. Pollock, of Grace Church Peterborough, told the children a story. Mr. Pollock came just 18 months ago from South Africa and he told of an African chief who became a leader of his fellow men.

A film which told the story of a little African boy who was a victim of leprosy was shown. It was titled, "The Healing of Moses M'Vondo."

Worship service was led by the Springville group with Joy Seymour leader. Scripture was read by Freddie Flokstra, and a story by Donna Northey. A musical number was by Donna, Linda and Nelson Northey.

The offering was received by children of George St. Mission Band. Keene Band, with Mrs. H. B. Herrington as leader, delighted with their singing of several motion songs. Mrs. Frances Turner was their accompanist.

Closing prayer and benediction was said by Mrs. R. M. Hanscom, leader of Knox Church band. The children were treated to ice cream bars before leaving.

and if you want curls

IF your hair is not naturally curly . . . if you want hair that holds a curl, even in rainy weather . . . let me whisper something in your pink, shell-like ear. At night, when you go through the ritual of subdividing your hair into little sections, here's what you do. Rub a little Lanolin into the hair. Put a little on the scalp and a little on the hair surface. Then roll your hair up the way you usually do . . . using bobby pins, curlers, string, old typewriter ribbons, rubber bands or whatever appeals to you most. Then just before you crawl into bed, moisten the hair around each curler. It will dry into curls while you are asleep. In the morning, merely remove the hardware from your head, exercise the scalp and gently brush your hair. You've got a glorious surprise in store for you. Curls and waves that fall naturally into place, such as you've never dreamed possible. Your hair will be shiny with radiant highlights which will invite admiration and praise, aha . . . even romance.

NIL-O-NAL . . . THE SUPER LANOLIN SUCCESS

Friends, NIL-O-NAL (spells lanolin backwards) is the most successful lanolin formula ever made. All the stickiness has been refined away, all the odor removed. NIL-O-NAL is clear, greaseless, delightful. Here in NIL-O-NAL is genuine LANOLIN extracted from the wool of sheep and blended by one of America's leading chemists, made ready for daily use by every man, woman or child who thinks long, thick, luxurious shiny, naturally wavy hair is wonderful, a joy to have and to behold. NIL-O-NAL doesn't plaster the hair . . . it soaks into the hair and scalp, replacing the missing natural oils that keep hair healthy, lovely, handsome and neat.

Get NIL-O-NAL . . . only $1.79 for 2 ounce, $3.00 for 4 ounce . . . obtain the results promised in the first 30 days or return for full refund. We know what NIL-O-NAL can do for your hair. We know that once you've tried it you'll tell your friends. That's all we want. Now if you want the hair benefits which we know NIL-O-NAL can give you, ask for it at once at your drug or cosmetic counter.

DOROTHY DIX:

Fault-Finding Children Ignore Mother's Wishes

DEAR MISS DIX: My first husband died fifteen years ago, when I was 42. Two years later I married a man with three children, who were at that time 17, four and two years old. All three are still at home. The oldest one married but came back here. I had a nice home at the time of my second marriaige, and we all moved into it. Everything was fine while the youngsters were small, but now they are beginning to find fault with everything— if I want the furniture moved, or if I want lights turned off, it would seem that they could get along without me now, and nobody cares if I go or stay. My husband never takes my side, always agreeing with the children. He's getting quite short tempered and says many things that hurt me, yet never apologizes. I was warned this might happen when the children grew older.

CONSTANT READER

USUAL EXPERIENCE

ANSWER: There's nothing seriously wrong with your household, except that the two young boys have entered adolescence, showing their independence — a situation that develops frequently in many households.

At 15 and 17 they think they know everything, they are competent (according to their own opinions) to run their own lives, as well as the household. Their father's apathy is unfortunate, but that, too, can be blamed on increasing years. He probably just doesn't have the energy to correct his children, or to control his own temper. In their hearts, I'm quite sure they all love you and appreciate all you've done. Remember, the boys were quite small when you took over the household, and they certainly draw no distinction between you and their own mother. Since everything has been so harmonious in your home up to this point, you'd be very foolish to let the present situation get you down. The family needs you as much as ever— and you need them. You're letting yourself fall prey to the miserable pangs of self-pity, which is, again, an emotion that occurs with midde-age. Almots every woman— mother or stepmother— has the same feeling when she realizes that her family is no longer so dependent upon her.

Facing these facts may do you some good, but, as a further aid to restoring balance all around, I suggest that you take a vacation. Make it as extensive as the budget will permit, though I guarantee you'll be homesick after ten days. Take a cruise or stay a week or two at a nice resort hotel. Give the family a chance to see how they fare by themselves.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: Have been in an awful stew! After the death of my father, my mother became incapable of performing household duties and my brother and I have shared her care, alternately. While she was visiting my brother, my husband suggested that I go out of town to work. So I went, against my will His salary wasn't much, but with co-operation we could have managed. After being away several months, I had a letter from him suggesting that I return home for a visit. I answered that I would be back for good! Now I'm home, again careing for my mother, and determined to manage on my husband's salary. Was I wrong to return home?

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: You did the right and sensible thing. You salved your conscience by taking up your share of mother's care, and restored family responsibility to your husband. One of the worst things a wife can do is to let her mate enjoy, even briefly, the carefree life of bachelorhood. You relieved your man of financial obligation as well as domestic cares. I'm sure you'll find things much better by being at home.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: I'm an attractive young lady of 24 with a good office position I've been going with a man, 29, for two years, and the only fault anyone could find against him is that he's been married, and divorced Do you think that should constitute a barrier to our marriage?

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: The mere fact that a man has been divorced certainly should not be a permanent bar to remarriage, if the following facts are considered. First, the remarriiage should be in accordance with the religion of you both; second, learn on what grounds his first marriage was dissolved, since the reason might reveal possible future trouble for you; make sure he barbors no sentimental yearnings for his former wife. You are both old enough to know your own minds.

PLENTY TO CROW ABOUT—Here's Ti Coq (Little Rooster), in private life Gratien Gelinas, receiving the most prized award in Canadian film-making—the "top Canadian film of the year" citation—from screen star Dorothy Lamour. MARY MOORE SAYS:

Dried Fruits A Standby Are Much Maligned Fruit

The prune is a much maligned fruit? The reason for it being it is usually stewed. What a state to be in constantly!

We're supposed to be good cooks. If that is the case we should be capable of transforming this lowly prune into glamorous desserts that our families clamor for.

Our best standby—apples—have petered out, but we have dried fruits such as prunes, apricots, dates, figs and raisins to tide us over for a while until strawberry time. Let's tackle them with our customary "wim and wigor."

APRICOT AND PRUNE PIE

Make your best pastry and line a 9-inch pie plate with it. Sprinkle it evenly with 4 teaspoons flour. Mix together 2¼ cups cut up, pitted unsweetened cooked prunes and ¾ cup unsweetened cooked dried apricots and ¾ cup sugar. Turn these into the pastry lined pie plate. Now mix together 2 tablespoons each prune juice and apricot juice and 1½ teaspoons lemon juice. Pour this around and over the fruit. Dot fruit with 1½ tablespoons butter or margarine. Cover with a slashed pastry top and seal edges. Bake at 425 deg. Fahr. for about 40 minutes. This is delicious served with white cream cheese, OR if you are lucky enough to be able to buy Devonshire cream, use it.

STEAMED NUT AND PRUNE PUDDING

Sift together 2 cups sifted flour, ½ teaspoon salt and 1 teaspoon baking soda. Mix or cut into this 1 cup finely chopped or coarsely ground suet. Now add 2-3 cup chopped walnuts, 1 1-3 cups chopped dry prunes, and 4 tablespoons grated orange rind. Stir in 2 well-beaten eggs, and 1 cup each milk and mild molasses. Pour into a greased 2-quart mould, cover and steam for 1½ hours. This will serve 8 or 10 people and is delicious with STERLING SAUCE (a variation of Hard Sauce): Cream ½ cup butter or margarine until very light and fluffy and gradually beat into it I cup well-packed, light brown sugar until mixture is very light. Add ⅛ teaspoon salt and very slowly add ¼ cup cream or top milk while beating constantly. Pile lightly on serving dish, sprinkle with nutmeg and chill until serving time.

FIG OR DATE SOUFFLE

Two tablespoons butter or margarine, 3 tablespoons flour, 1 cup milk, ¼ cup sugar, ½ teaspoon salt, 2-3 cup either chopped steamed dates or figs, 3 egg yolks, 3 stiffly beaten egg whites. Gently melt the butter and stir the flour into it, then slowly add the milk stirring, until thick. Add the sugar and salt. Add the chopped dried fruit and let stand until cool. Now add the egg yolks and beat until light. Fold in the beaten whites. Turn into greased pudding dish; stand dish in larger pan containing hot water. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. for 40 to 45 minutes. Serve at once with whipped cream or a

CUSTARD SAUCE: Scald 1 cup milk in top of double boiler. Beat 2 egg yolks with 2 tablespoons sugar and ⅛ teaspoon salt. Slowly stir hot milk into them. Cook, stirring, over hot but not boiling water, until mixture coats the spoon. Chill. Add ¼ teaspoon vanilla just before serving.

PINEAPPLE AND RAISIN MERINGUE PIE

Two cups seedless or seeded raisins, water, 1 cup brown sugar, 1 teaspoon salt, 4 tablespoons flour, 3 eggs, yolks and whites separated, 2 cups crushed pineapple with some of its juice, 6 tablespoons sugar. Barely cover the raisins with water and gently cook until tender. Mix together the sugar (brown), salt, and flour and stir these into the raisins until thick. Beat the egg yolks, pour some of the hot mixture over them, stirring, and return them to the raisin mixture. Add the pineapple. Cool. Then pour into a baked pie shell. Beat the egg whites until stiff and beat the 6 tablespoons white sugar into them until whites will stand in peaks. Cover the filling with this meringue and bake in oven of 350 deg. Fahr. for about 15 minutes or until meringue is beautifully golden.

Check For Cause Of Fatigue - Beauty Robber

Fatigue is one of the greatest destroyers of beauty. The damage it does can be lasting. If you're a tired-out housewife and mother without enough energy to enjoy your family, have a checkup with your doctor, of course; but also look into your everyday pattern of living.

Are you overambitious in your housewifely tasks? Far better to schedule fewer chores for yourself and have time enough in which to do them.

Do you plan enough recreation for yourself? Take time out for friends, hobbies, community activities and just plain resting.

Do you habitually work in a poor light or have your work surfaces at the incorrect height?

Is your home kept too warm?

How is your posture when standing or sitting?

Do you habitually skip breakfast and or lunch?

Are you all day nervously chasing an hour lost in the morning because you didn't get up on time?

Do you let other members of the family help you out with regular jobs assigned to them, or are you a mother inclined to say, "Oh, I'll do it myself!"?

Do your clothes fit you too tightly in spots so that there is pressure on nerves?

How well do your shoes fit, and do you wear arch - supporting shoes while doing housework?

You might check yourself on all these questions to help find the causes of your fatigue and take steps to erase them.

How Do You Keep Your Handbag?

Are you aware that the contents of your handbag are often visible to other people?

A glance into your handbag as you open it, whether casual or intentional, can give someone a glimpse of your true personality. It can make someone think: what a neat well-organized, dainty girl— she must carry that into her whole way of living!

If you open up your handbag this minute, will you see everything in its place? Will cosmetics be kept together in their own little purse or will powder soil the bag's lining because your compact is lost on the bottom? Can you find your keys at once?

You save the beauty of your bag and its accessories by having a durable case for each item or group of items that you carry.

Plan to unscramble your handbag at once if you're wasting precious time hunting for things and when you buy one, be sure it has compartments enough to meet your needs.

COLORED SHEETS

News in sheets and pillowcases are the pastel dyed one to match bedroom color schemes. Fine percale is also being made up in bright plaids, stripes, embroidered edges. The new housewife will be interested also, in contour sheets, shaped to the bed so ends never become untucked.

Of Interest to Women

MOTHER OF THE YEAR IS A "STEPMOM" — The choice of Mrs. Ethlyn Wisegarver Bott, 58, of Belleville, Ill., as mother of the year is unique in one respect—she's a stepmother. Mrs. Bott raised four motherless children after she married their widower father 20 years ago. She will be honored in New York on May 8, when the American Mothers' Committee presents her award. Mrs. Bott was selected over candidates from every state by the committee, a branch of the Golden Rule Foundation, which works for dedication of American homes to the Golden Rule.

HANDY HINT

Fill a plastic squeeze bottle with a thick soapsuds solution for keeping in the glove compartment of your car. You'll always have something to clean the children's hands with.

IT MAY BE YOUR LIVER

If life's not worth living it may be your liver!

It's a fact! It takes up to two pints of liver bile a day to keep your digestive tract in top shape! If your liver bile is not flowing freely your food may not digest . . . gas gloats up your stomach . . . you feel constipated and all the fun and sparkle go out of life. That's when you need mild gentle Carter's Little Liver Pills. These famous vegetable pills help stimulate the flow of liver bile. Soon your digestion starts functioning properly and you feel that happy days are here again! Don't ever stay sunk. Always keep Carter's Little Liver Pills on hand.

rivers cool enough for them. When the trees come back to Ontario, said Mr. Scott, we will again have the fish, deer and other animals that used to run wild in the forest.

Mr. Scott then planted the first tree.

Gordon K. Fraser, MP for Peterborough West, said that when he first travelled up the road opposite the ski-hill there were trees lining both sides of the road; and now there is hardly one. Mr. Fraser planted the second tree.

Roy Bogle, works manager for the CGE, said the company was glad to supply the land and trees to the 4-H club and in a couple of years there would be a tremendous improvement in the appearance of the property.

A. B. Wheatley, District Forester for Lindsay, commented on what tree-planting wuld do for the area and what an important task the 4-H clubbers were doing. He told them they had the support of the Department of Lands and Forests in the project.

Mr. Humphrey, chairman of the committee which controls the forest area in Peterborough county, invited the 4-H club members to come down and inspect the forest in the Havelock and Norwood district in the near future.

Following the opening ceremonies the 48 girls and boys of the Lakefield High School 4-H club were divided into teams of two. Each took a shovel and a pail full of baby red pine trees and set out to plant the trees in rows.

The trees were planted eight feet apart and will cover an area of 15 acres. It is estimated that over 90 per cent of the trees will survive this year. The ones that die will be replaced next spring.

It was first planned to plant white pines instead of red, but there was a shortage. But those planted next spring will be white pines. It is considered that white pines can stand the dampness better and the area around the ski-hill is damp.

PoW Admits Signing Petition

BOSTON (AP)—Cpl. Donald Legay, one of the Americans to come home from a North Korean prison camp, said today he had signed a Communist petition urging the United Nations to give up and get out.

The 23-year-old soldier, who was given a big welcome home reception Sunday in Leominster, Mass., has a day-by-day series of copyrighted stories under his by-line in the Boston Traveler telling of his 29 months as a prisoner of the Communists.

"And—don't be too cocky—after a couple of years of what the Communists call 'brain washing', you might have signed it too," he said.

"I say that because I'm no Communist. Never was one. Couldn't be one. In fact, America meant more to me as a PoW than ever before. Yet I signed it.

"If you think brain washing threw me for a loss, look at the other 219 Americans in that camp on the Yalu. Twenty of them swallowed the Communist line. Fifty of them went off their rockers. About one of every three Americans there fell for the Red talk or went mad."

Stolen Car Found Wrecked On Highway

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—A car reported stolen in Sarnia Sunday night that dodged pursuing police over a wide section of western Ontario was found wrecked today on No. 22 highway near Melrose.

Police spotted the wanted vehicle against a tree and heavily damaged.

They said that early today the speeding car eluded provincials from Chatham and Glencoe and disappeared in the darkness

Report Anthony Eden Somewhat Improved

LONDON (AP)—The foreign office said today that Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden's "general condition has improved." He had a more restful night Sunday night.

Eden, 55, was operated on April 12 for gallstones. He underwent a second operation last week for the removal of fluids causing jaundice.

He is not expected to return to duty until July.

James W. Logan

Pallbearers at the funeral Saturday afternoon of James William Logan, 80, of RR 3, Norwood, were George Craft, William Glover, George Harding, Keith Alton, Floyd Samis and William Heffernan.

Mr. Logan, a one-time resident of Peterborough, died Thursday at his home after a long illness.

The funeral was at the Kaye funeral home, the Rev. B. S. Morwood of Mark Street United Church officiating, assisted by the Rev. E. W. Rowland. Burial was in Little Lake cemetery.

Thin Alibis Fail Two Youths, Both Are Jailed

LINDSAY (ENS).—Two minors who didn't have the money to pay their fines when convicted today on liquor charges are serving jail terms instead. But before the jail doors clanged behind them they sounded off with a couple of paper-thin alibis.

Bruce Hawkins, 20, of Lindsay was first to appear. He pleaded guilty to obtaining liquor illegally and was fined $25 or given the option of serving 30 days in jail.

Hawkins admitted obtaining the liquor illegally but claimed he got it from two Peterborough friends.

No, he said reflectively, he couldn't remember the names of the two friends. Somehow the names had slipped his mind.

Magistrate E. A. Gee looked sceptical and gave him the fine with the 30-day option.

Hawkins' companion, 19-year-old Stanley Morton of Toronto, didn't convince the court either. He pleaded guilty to a first-offence drunk charge and was fined $10 or given the option of serving 10 days.

"I found the liquor in an unopened bottle on the stoop of a Lindsay St. N. restaurant, early Sunday morning" said Morton.

Magistrate Gee, an early riser himself, commented something to the effect: "I don't see anybody leaving any liquor on my doorstep on Bond St."

Crown Attorney Lorne W. Jordan decided to cap this: "Speaking of stoops, how stupid do you think we are—handing us that kind of line?"

The Toronto youth's reply is not on the record.

Police Constable John Henley said he saw the pair about midnight Saturday. They both had bicycles. He told them to go home.

Three hours later he spotted them again, this time riding their bicycles with difficulty. PC Henley ordered them to stop and when Morton was asked to walk a straight line he walked into the side of a parked truck. The pair were then arrested and lodged in the cells.

A third man, Walter Hontoon, 27, of Lindsay, also took a jail sentence rather than pay a $10 fine. He pleaded guilty to first-offence drunkenness.

Code Modifies

"It is not our duty to advise a home-builder what he should do, but if any citizens wish to discuss the effects of the new plumbing law we'll be glad to do so.

"Another clause permits the use of other materials than lead for waste pipes. Those are the pipes leading from baths, basins, sinks. We have always used lead pipe because we found there were few chokages, and also resistance to sewer gas. Now the choice of waste pipes is between, lead, copper, galvanized steel and wrought iron pipe."

Those are examples of change permissible beginning Wednesday.

Mr. Metheral said the regulations would tend to raise the quality of plumbing in small communities of Ontario where installation was under the direction of the Medical Officer of Health, or some other official, but generally the M.O.H.

"The new standards should eliminate the local handyman who in most instances as I have observed didn't know how to make a smoke or water test," Mr. Metheral said. "So there should be a decided improvement in that respect. Otherwise, as here in Peterborough where the policy of the city council has been to maintain our by-law so there will be an advantage of a difference in prices of material, and thereby the cost of a job."

Towns, villages and small communities such as Bridgenorth and Keene come within the scope of the provincial plumbing regulations. And the standard of the work will require the skill of plumbers.

Administration of the new provincial plumbing law is now placed under Medical Officers of Health, Mr. Metheral said. The regulations are too voluminous for newspaper publication other than the citing of a few examples.

Viennese Still

Treaty the Russians have said "no" some 286 times and so there remains an "Allied" or four-power control over Austria. There is of course an Austrian government and it is said to be doing very well its difficult task of running a country under foreign supervision and control. But Austria is not independent in the things that count—finance and defence—and no Viennese can feel independent with Russian jeeps and soldiers running about the city, or, for that matter, American, French and British.

VIENNA DIVIDED

Vienna is divided into occupation sectors, as is the whole country. The Russians haven't made great trouble about the city sectors, but there is little traffic to and from the Russian zone of Austria. For instance, just across the Danube is the Russian zone but I have met few non-residents who have crossed over. "One can, but one never knows, and so one doesn't!"

Stories go around about people who are just "missing". Because of this, the Russian police headquarters in Vienna's main shopping street is passed in quick silence by Viennese. You just don't stare in the window of a Russian police office. Their police, incidentally, are quiet looking and young and blonde, and but for the tommy guns around their necks they are not specially fearsome.

Each great power does the policing for one month and the best story of the formal changing of the guard is that the Americans have imported a giant from Nebraska or somewhere who runs about seven feet in his socks and does an imposing job of looking down upon the Russians as though they were children.

As the carriage moved along the "Ring" we came upon another of those vast memorials to the Unknown Russian Soldier, like the one I saw erected in Berlin a few years ago. The Viennese call this one the statue to the Unknown Looter. We also passed several of the best hotels, commandeered by the Russians, not far from a couple of big ones taken over by the British and Americans. One of the biggest modern buildings is the Red Information Centre.

NOT TOO SUBTLE

The Russians aren't too subtle about things. One of their memorials is in the form of a Russian tank, commemorating the victory of Russian tank troops against the retreating Germans. Viennese wonder, however, if they should not read it more as a portent than a memory. They can still see the magnificent gold eagles which Napoleon had erected outside the Summer Palace at nearby Schonnbrunn, and which when Napoleon left the Austrian Emperor would not take down because he thought the Austrians should be reminded of what happened to them and could happen again.

Not subtle, either, was the loudspeaker from the Russian Officer's Mess in the Emperor's Palace that was blasting into the Sunday morning sunshine of the park this morning as people went to Mass in the Palace Chapel. All else about was peaceful and lovely, but from over a great photograph of Stalin came radio music shaking in intensity and certainly jarring the musical sensitivities of Viennese. To take refuge in the jewel-like perfection of the little chapel and there to hear the Vienna boys choir, with organ and wind instruments, sing the Anton Bruckner Mass in E Flat—that was refuge sublime.

This country is predominately Roman Catholic — and strikingly anti-Communist — and Vienna's churches are of its greatest glories. The little Palace Chapel's music and choir, however, are said to be without compare. The glorias, allelujahs and amens of Bruckner and Mozart and Bach are here integral parts of the service and it seems entirely fitting that churches place outside their doors notices saying what mass will be sung at what time so that those to whom music is no small part of a religious service may choose according to their state of mind or taste.

STORY DIVERTED

But somehow this story has gotten out of that carriage, diverted by that Russian loud-speaker. The "Ring" trip should be told in more detail, of course. But here is such a wealth of richness, miles of lively statuary whose martial horses seem about to leap down and race off, a succession of churches and palaces whose doors and spires and "line" run from Baroque to the severest Prussian—here is such a battalion of great buildings representing great power and great wealth now gone—that an observer new to the scene cannot and fortunately need not dare to go into detail.

After an hour and a half or more the little man in his grey tunic with green edgings — colored adored by all Austrians and worn by most though for no special reason—did bring his horse back to where we started from. He had lingered down that avenue of history, surely, not just because he was getting paid by the hour but because he was himself entranced again with what he was showing us. I say "showing us," though his recollections of the meaning of this statue or the origin of that chapel seemed to be as much his own contemplation of himself in the universe. Here was no humdrum tourist guide. Here was a Viennese looking affectionately at Vienna. True, all this introspection and retrospection may not be good for him—but what else has he for the moment?

De Gaulle Party Suffers Second Defeat

PARIS (Reuters)—Partial results from the second round of country-wide French municipal elections showed today that Gen. Charles de Gaulle's rightist party suffered a disastrous defeat.

The interior ministry said the trend from Sunday balloting was about the same as in voting the previous Sunday. No figures were given.

A ministry spokesman said the Communists have remained by far the country's biggest single party, followed by Socialists who made notable gains. The Moderate Independents fighting a municipal election for the first time under the banner of former premier Antoine Pinay have also made a solid increase, he said. The Pinay gains are largely at the expense of the Gaullists.

Rassemblement du Peuple Francais, De Gaulle's party, which swept the boards in the last municipal elections in 1947, has slumped to a point where observers doubted its future position as a major political force.

The second-round vote took place in towns of less than 9,000 population where candidates failed to win an absolute majority April 26. The Socialists officially spurned a Communist offer to establish a "common front" ticket in the second round.

In the town of Muret, however, the two parties offered a common ticket and lost all the council seats to a Moderate-Conservative alliance.

Canadian Drama Lauded As Festival Opens In B.C.

By STEPHEN SCOTT

Victoria (CP)—An adjudicator's professional advice plus the recommendations of some of Canada's best actors will make this year's Dominion Drama Festival and theatre conference the best since the end of the Second World War.

That's the opinion of theatre people from across Canada who have converged on Victoria for the festival which opens here today.

About 175 actors and actresses arrived here Sunday and today to take part in the eight plays that won regional awards and the right to attend the Dominion festival.

The casts are competing for the Calvert Trophy and the $1,000 prize that goes with it for the best play, plus a host of other awards.

Adjudicator Pierre Lefevre, British director, actor and playwright, will have a special interest in the finals this year.

GAVE ADVICE

As regional adjudicator last year he advised many groups not to bite off more than they could chew in selecting plays, and at the same time told them that they should not choose plays that do not give them a chance to show their worth.

The theatre conference, which meets in conjunction with the festival, made similar recommendations last year. Top actors and actresses from across Canada attend the conferences.

Persons attending the festival told The Canadian Press Sunday that the advice of Mr. Lefevre plus the recommendations of the conference added up to the best festival held since the Second World War.

This year the conference, always slightly ahead of present Canadian drama, will consider the relationship of amateur and professional drama as well as drama for children.

FINANCE QUESTION

The question of finance is always a hard one for members of casts attending the festival. One group, Les Etudiants de l'Universite St. Joseph, N. B., helped defray the more than $5,000 to get here by presenting their play, "Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme" at Ottawa, Montreal, Winnipeg, and St. Boniface.

La Jeune Scene of Montreal is presenting a new Canadian play about cigarette smuggling, by Marcel Dube, director of the presentation.

Both these groups are showing an initiative which is good for Canadian drama, Mr. Lefevre said.

George Grant Hendren

LAKEFIELD — (ENS)—Lakefield United Church was filled on Friday afternoon when friends from Lakefield and many other points gathered to pay final tribute to a well-known and highly respected gentleman, George Grant Hendren, who passed away at the family residence, Chippawa Ave., Wednesday morning. Mr. Hendren was an honorary elder of the Lakefield United Church.

Members of the IOOF, of which Mr. Hendren was a member for 49 years, conducted a special service on Thursday evening. The graveside service was under the auspices of Clementi Lodge, AF and AM No. 313, from which the deceased had received a 50-year jewel about a year ago.

The service in the church was conducted by the Rev. W. H. Tonge, assisted by the Rev. George F. Kelly, a former minister, of Newtonbrook.

Honorary pallbearers were: George H. Spence, B. Q. Dench, J. E. McConkey, E. H. Northey, N. A. Moore and J. W. Ridpath. Active pallbearers were: Max Middleton, Charles H. Hunter, Stanley Blewett, Laverne Walton, Wallace Hendren and Allen Hendren. The ushers were: J. A. Porter and W. W. Yale. Intement was in Lakefield cemetery.

Odd Theft

LONDON (AP) — Police would like to interview a thief or two who made off with a truck in Piccadilly Saturday. The truck was loaded with burglar alarms.

MAY DAY RIOT IN GERMANY — A high pressure "water cannon" disperses a crowd of rioting Communists in Munich, Germany, as police use fire-fighting techniques to halt a May Day demonstration. The street battle began when Communists tried to take over a non-Red parade. No injuries were reported, but several arrests were made.

Night Clubbing Behind Iron Curtain Permits No Hint Of Paris Elegance

By RICHARD O'REGAN

VIENNA (AP)—So you'd like to go night clubbing behind the Iron Curtain? You'd like to enjoy the night life of the Balkan capitals—Budapest, Bucharest, Prague and Sofia—which song and story have made famous?

Well, it's quite and experience. You can sit in Vienna and read about it in the Communist newspapers. But if you insist on going, well . . .

The gentleman will not shave or clean the nails. The pants must be slightly muddy. He will try to assume the expression of one taking a few minutes off from a 25-hour shift.

Madame, you will kindly skip the high heels and the hair-do And never mind the girdle. There must be no hint of Paris elegance, pardon, "Western decadence." And remember to be careful to wear the same orange lipstick and the same red dress that all the other women bought at the same state store.

Remember too madame, that in the new society woman's place is in the mines or behind the lathes.

So, we are set to go to a place where we have a little dance, a little drink, a little dinner You want something smarter? Take Budapest's Bristol bar or Prague's Cascade and Boccaccio, renamed now and reserved for the upper 10,000 Communists in each city. The lady will go to those places dressed the same. You, sir, may change to a dark suit. No tie is necessary.

Dinner for two with wine costs the average man a fortnight's pay. Maybe the newspapers were right. They said to stay home.

Nobody seems happy. The army officers sit by themselves The security police sit by themselves. The civilians sit by themselves. The loneliest groups of all are the occasional Western diplomats who pop in now and then.

Girlie shows? Comrade, you forget something. Girlie shows are for the "idle capitalist rich." Girls today can find healthy jobs on the farms.

The music? Ah, no more rhapsodies of love, no "cheap Western sentimentality." Listen to the current hit: "I'm Merry and I Work All Day—I have No Time to Worry Although You Went Away."

Taxi girls and call girls are all police spies. In fact there are police spies al l around these tables watching for people who seem to have too much money.

If the orchestra breaks into any be-bop, stay seated. It probably is a trap. As a Bucharest newspaper said recently, "reliable party members leave the floor in disgust" when they hear anything that sounds like American or Latin American music.

DURELLE WINS CROWN

GLACE BAY, N.S. (CP)—Yvon Durelle of Baie Ste. Anne, N.B., battered George Ross of West Bay, Cape Breton, to a 12th-round technical knockout Saturday night to win the Canadian middleweight boxing championship.

Referee John Joe McLean stopped the scheduled 12-round match at one minute and 10 seconds of the final round to award the decision to Durelle, now stationed with the Canadian Army at Picton, Ont.

Durelle took the lead early and had Ross, a former middleweight champion, bleeding from both eyes after several rounds.

Durelle weighed in at 160, Ross at 159.

"I'm through this time, for sure," the 30-year-old Ross said after the bout. He retired from the ring two years ago after losing the title to Roy Wouters of Vancouver and Montreal, but was undefeated in eight fights after his comeback.

The fight was ordered by the Canadian Boxing Federation after Wouters failed to defend his title within the time limit.

CLAIMS BEST GOALIE

GUELPH (CP)—Roy Mason said Sunday he has already started rebuilding the Guelph Biltmores Ontario Hockey Association Junior A team for next season. "I've already signed the best goal-keeper in Ontario," he said. "I'm not telling anybody who he is."

He also said Ted Maki and Bill Pirie of South Porcupine Gold Kings have agreed to play for Biltmores next season.

BILTS DREW 65,000

GUELPH (CP)—Guelph Biltmores were third among Ontario Hockey Association Junior A teams last season in fans' support.

Their home games drew a total of 65,000 persons, approximately 27,000 fewer than the season before when Biltmores won the Memorial Cup. Average attendance for the season was about 2,300.

However, their 1953 showing left them trailing only Toronto Marlboros and Toronto St. Michaels from the standpoint of paying customers.

SCHOOL FOR REFEREES?

HAMILTON (CP) — Basketball referee clinics may be the answer to the problem of standard interpretation of rules across Ontario, the Ontario Amateur Basketball Association executive decided Sunday. Representatives from Southern and Western Ontario agreed to ask help in the form of provincial grants to defray the cost of such a school.

WINS ENGLISH AMATEUR

BIRKDALE, England (AP)—Gerald Micklem, 41-year-old London stockbroker and veteran Walker Cup golfer, won the English amateur championship Saturday with a 2-and-1 victory over Britain's top-ranked amateur, Ronnie White. If past custom prevails, Micklem will be invited to become a member of the 1953 British Walker Cup team on the strength of his victory Saturday.

HITS THREE TRIPLES

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Carlos Bernier, Pittsburgh's Puerto Rican rookie outfielder, tied a modern major league record Saturday by hitting three triples in a game against Cincinnati. The modern record was held jointly by 10 other players. The all-time record is four, set by George Streif of Philadelphia in 1885 and equalled by William Joyce of New York Giants in 1897.

Ben Chapman, then with Cleveland, was the last big league hitter to get three triples in one game, July 3, 1939.

Boat Upsets, 9 Drown

HELENA, Mont. (AP)—Nine persons including a family of seven were drowned in a lake near Helena Sunday night when their boat suddenly capsized. Dead were Ed Akins, 35; his four children and his mother and father. Akins' wife was the only survivor. Two other men also were drowned.

Horticultural Group Told Of Small Fruits

OMEMEE—(ENS)—The Horticultural Society met in the council chamber with Wesley Wilson presiding and about 40 members present.

It was noted that some still hadn't renewed memberships and that premiums, which this year are chrysanthemums, would soon be on hand. Mr. Wilson reported 62 juniors enrolled and that seeds had been distributed for their garden plots. Older boys and girls interested in the Society are welcome to the general meetings.

A special meeting open to all juniors is to be held some time in June arranged by a committee composed of the president, secretary, Mrs. H. Bent and Mrs. H. Deyell. Mr. Storey will be asked to be judge for the August flower show.

H. Deyell and J. Morrison were a delegation from the Chamber of Commerce to request the cooperation of the Horticultural Society on village clean-up day and concerning planting of shrubs and flowers on the hall grounds. It was decided to send a written request to council to supply suitable trash cans on the street.

Mrs. S. H. Moyer spoke on small fruits, rhubarb, strawberries, raspberries and currants. Gardens, she said, should have at least a root or two of rhubarb because of its medicinal properties. It is easy to grow and splendid as a frozen food. She recommended Canadian Red, a variety originated in Manitoba.

Strawberries, though grown best in sandy loam, will also do well in heavier soils if well drained, made porous with fertilizer and worked well. To save the work of transplanting, tear out the old plant row after bearing and putting out creepers and keep cultivated. The creepers, which should have been kept running parallel to the old row, will provide the bearing row for the next year, and they in turn will put out creepers. Blossoms should be picked off the creeper plants the first year to insure the best yield for the bearing year. For winter protection, while straw is less apt to mat and stifle the plants than leaves, it produces weeds unless it is very clean.

Raspberries, like strawberries, must be kept free from weeds and grass. Some diseases of rapsberries are vermicellian wilt in the stem and tip wilt. For the latter the stem should be cut off below the lowest ring marking the area in which the orange striped devastating beetle is lodged to prevent the wilt from descending to the root.

Diseases of black currants were also dealt with. Mrs. Moyer thought it worth while to take pains to overcome these on account of the high market value of the fruit. A mixture of 14 tablespoons of lime sulphur and one dessert spoon of black leaf to one gallon of water was recommended for early spraying and a weaker solution with arsenate of lime added for second spraying.

Break Black Market

BERLIN (AP)—The Communists announced Sunday they have broken up a sauerkraut black market. The government news agency ADN said Berthold Scheuenmann and his brother Klaus were jailed for five and six years, respectively, as "economic criminals." They were charged with selling the output of their sauerkraut factory in the free market at inflated prices.

Crowds Follow Mayor's Cortege

TUNIS (AP)—Crowds of Tunisians and French today followed the funeral cortege of Chedli Kastally, 71-year-old deputy mayor of Tunis, who was assassinated Saturday on the eve of municipal elections while this North African city seethed with excitement.

At the grave, Tunisian and French officials took turns castigating the assassins and praising Kastally for his patriotism and his faith in Franco-Tunisian friendship.

There was widespread talk meanwhile of a new Tunisian crisis with the flareup of violence, although elections Sunday proceeded without further disorders after the arrest of a score of leaders of the extreme nationalist movement.

The 72-year-old Bey of Tunis called for calm and announced "total disapproval" of all armed attacks and bloodshed.

Kastally was considered pro-French by the nationalists and French officials have blamed terrorists of the independence-seeking Destour party for shooting down the Arab mayor in the street.

North Bay Council Dismisses Fire Chief

NORTH BAY (CP)—Fire Chief G. R. Thomas was dismissed by city council Saturday on the grounds that "he has lost the confidence of council."

The dismissal motion was made effective immediately and specified that Thomas be given six months' salary in lieu of notice. Fred Strange, senior captain of the fire department, was appointed acting fire chief.

Couple Observe 50th Wedding Anniversary

LAKEFIELD (ENS)—Mr. and Mrs. Samuel John Charlton quietly observed the 50th anniversary of their wedding on Wednesday at their home with members of their family and friends who called to offer them congratulations.

Mrs. Charlton is the former Mima Linda Hendren, and the couple were married at the home of Mrs. Charlton's parents at Cottesloe by the late Rev. W. Atkinson, of Warsaw Presbyterian Church.

Following their marriage, they lived for one year on the farm now occupied by Wellie Dunford, and then moved to Lakefield where they have resided ever since. Mr. Charlton was owner of a grain elevator and also operated the store now known as The Porter Co. He later went into the insurance business and retired some years ago.

The Charltons had three children, Roy, who died 20 years ago, Bruce and Mrs. Walter Walker (Beatrice), both of Lakefield. They also have five grandchildren.

Mr. and Mrs. Charlton entertained at a family dinner at the Nichols' home in the evening.

20 Fatalities Over Weekend

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A father, his two daughters and a family friend were killed Saturday when their car skidded out of control on slippery pavement at the Ajax, Ont., cloverleaf and crashed into a concrete abutment.

In a heavy traffic toll, theirs were among the 13 highway deaths reported in Eastern Canada during the week-end and among the total of 20 violent deaths.

Four died in fires, one was drowned, one accidentally shot and one crushed to death. Ontario had the highest total of 14, Quebec had four and Nova Scotia two.

Killed at Ajax on their way home from Ottawa were Romeo Larocque, 34, of Port Rowan, his daughters, Judy, 10, and June 8, and Stephen Patten, 54, also of Port Rowan.

ONTARIO DEATHS

Other Ontario deaths: Mrs. Mary Ann Hill, 80, of London, in hospital following a rooming house fire; Peter Namtzu, 17, of St. Catharines, when his car crashed off the highway; Robert Stewart, 40, of St. Catharines, in a fall from the driver's seat of his truck; Gerald Desjardines, 5, burned to death near Cochrane in a hay field fire when he caught his foot in a furrow; Eugene Lesperance, 35, of Elmstead, when his car was cut in halves by a train; Wilfred Laurnedeau, 66, of Windsor, when his car crashed into the rear of a parked truck; the 10-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Godfrey of Vittoria accidentally shot while playing alone with a .22-calibre rifle; Denis Larabie, 6, of Eastview, of injuries when struck by a truck; Robert Baisley, 4, of Toronto, drowned at Sutton on his first fishing expedition; Danny Boyle, 9, of Nipigon, struck by a car.

Unhurt In Plane Crash

OTTAWA (CP)—Three persons walked away unhurt Sunday when their light airplane crashed in the front lawn of a farm home at Merivale, about five miles southwest of Ottawa. The plane's engine failed a few miles after leaving Ottawa airport. The pilot, Dr. H. R. T. Mount of suburban Rockcliffe, his son, Balfour, and a housekeeper, Nettie Duford, escaped injury when the plane hit a fence, lost its right wing and swerved around to crash into a small tree.

PLANT EXPLOSION—This is an aerial view of a chemical plant in Peabody, Mass., that was levelled when a tremendous explosion demolished the building and equipment and killed at least one person and injured 24 others, at least seven critically.

British Grain Men Begin Scouring World For Supplies

By MICHAEL NEWMARCH

LONDON (AP)—On their own after 12½ years in government harness, the men who buy Britain's grain began scouring the world last week to feed man and beast.

They have a tough assignment.

The government ended its wartime system of bulk-purchasing wheat, flour and animal feeding stuffs last week and told traders to use private-enterprise channels to acquire the huge amount of grain Britain imports each year.

The big switchover came at a critical time. This nation has just walked out of the international wheat agreement, complaining the maximum price under the agreement of $2.05 a bushel is too high.

As a result, Britain, the world's largest importer of wheat, must shop in the free market, where prices are higher still.

SUBSIDIES TO END

The British government also announced all grain subsidies, except a payment to bakers for one grade of bread, will end at the next harvest. So any increase in grain costs will fall directly on consumers.

Private enterprise thus looks as though it is taking the rap for increased bread prices unless Britain can break the world market and set wheat prices tumbling.

Britain is talking about $2 a bushel.

RESIST PRESSURE

Canada, the United States and Australia all are certain to resist British pressure for cheaper wheat.

But British grain men, who solidly backed the government's walkout of the wheat agreement, are not too despondent.

World wheat inventories are building up, and are expected here to hit peacetime records in the exporting countries before 1953 is over.

Outboard, Marine & Manufacturing Company

Outboard Marine Confident In Canada's Future; 800 Men, Women Employed

A quiet, forceful man who is very confident in the future of Canada is Clarence B. Neal, president of the Outboard Marine and Manufacturing Co. of Canada Ltd.

"We at the Outboard Marine are very bullish on the future of Canada," Mr. Neal says. That confidence, he pointed out, was reflected in the post-war expansion of the Peterborough plant.

PRESIDENT OF OUTBOARD Marine and Manufacturing Co. in Canada is Clarence B. Neal. A native of Little Rock, Ark., Mr. Neal came to the Canadian branch of Johnson Motors (as the firm was known until 1936), and after a succession of advancements was named president on the retirement of Hugh M. Campbell.

Expressing this confidence, Mr. Neal says that "the company's directors and management feel very confident of the continued economic development of Canada and all of our forward planning is with the view of expanding our industry to meet the needs of a rapidly changing economy.

"The growth of our company during the past 25 years could not have been accomplished without the able assistance of a loyal, efficient and enthusiastic key group and also the loyalty and goodwill of our entire personnel.

"The company's policy is to pay good wages and we place strong emphasis on good working conditions within the plant.

"From a modest beginning in 1928 when we employed 30 people, our employment has expanded to 800 people."

Mr. Neal declares that he is thankful that the company decided to locate in Peterborough, with a geographical location which "offers the ideal as a place in which to reside and to enjoy pleasant relations after working hours."

SOUND GOVERNMENT

Beyond the excellent living conditions offered by the city, Mr. Neal says that Peterborough has the sound civic administration "essential to industry in any community".

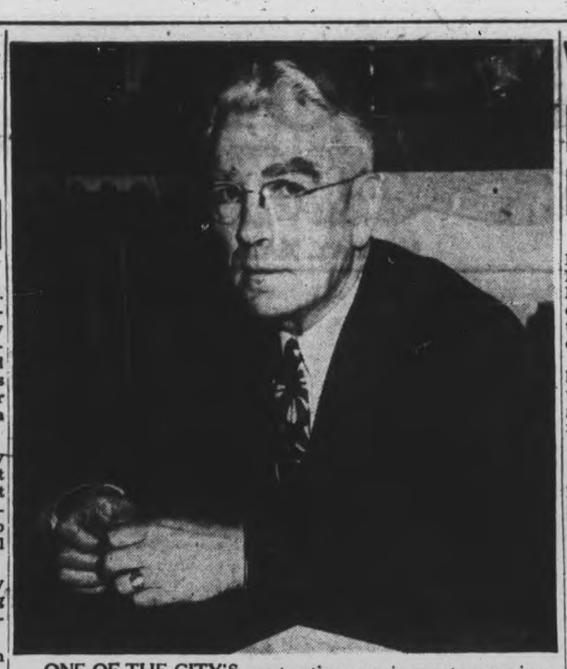
"I feel that we and the other citizens of Peterborough generally can be most grateful for the high calibre and sound management policies of past and present civic administrations.

"We are very happy indeed to be a part of the industrial family of Peterborough."

25 YEARS WITH COMPANY

A native of Little Rock, Arkansas, Mr. Neal is also celebrating his silver anniversary with the company. He began his employment with Johnson Motors at the Waukegan plant in 1928, the same year the company established their plant in Peterborough.

In April of 1929, after he had worked in Waukegan eight months, Mr. Neal came to the Peterborough plant as assistant secretary-treasurer. June of 1939 saw him receive his appointment as secretary-treasurer.



His job was augmented in February, 1946, when he was appointed assistant to the president in addition to his other duties.

Two-and-a-half years later, in September, 1948, he was appointed vice-president and general manager, paving the way for his eventual appointment to president in January of 1950. Since 1936, he has been one of the two Canadian officials to be directors of the Canadian company. Vice-president L. L. Tremblay is the other.

An enthusiastic angler and hunter since his youth in Arkansas, Mr. Neal still finds time to fish from his cottage at Rice Lake and for the occasional hunting or fishing expedition to a lodge in Quebec where he hunts for moose, fishes, and finds excellent bird shooting.

For the annual deer hunt, Mr. Neal joins a party of from 18 to 20 who hunt from Six Point Lodge southeast of Paudash Lake.

Educated in Little Rock, Ark., Mr. Neal left there to attend business college in Kansas City, where he worked for a time before spending a year at a job in Chicago. From Chicago he moved to Waukegan to start his 25 years of employment with the Johnson Motor Co. and Outboard Marine.

ONE OF THE CITY'S most active men in sports organizations is Hugh M. Campbell, former president of Outboard Marine. Mr. Campbell, who retired in 1950, came to Peterborough when Johnson Motors opened their plant here in 1928.

Hugh M. Campbell Brought Outboard Marine To City

First president of Outboard Marine's Canadian company was Hugh M. Campbell, who came to Peterborough in 1928 when the Johnson Motor plant was established here. Mr. Campbell, who retired in 1949, was a salesman for the Johnson Motor Co. in the United States when he was chosen to come to Canada, help select a site for the plant, and manage it. Vice-president and general manager of the Johnson Motor Co. of Canada until the merger in 1936 of Johnson with Evinrude to form Outboard Marine, he continued in that capacity until 1946 when he was named president of the Canadian company.

In Peterborough, Hugh Campbell has been known best to many citizens through his support of baseball and football and his love of the outdoors.

It was in the latter part of his presidency that the Outboard Marine baseball club in 1946 lost to London in the OBA Senior A finals, and in 1947 won against Chatham in the Senior B finals to become Ontario Senior B champions.

It was 20 years ago that Mr. Campbell became actively associated with sports in Peterborough. He was elected president of the senior baseball club in 1933, and helped reorganize it at that time. He continued as president for several years, and was a member of the executive until the Second World War.

Also before the war, he was a member of the Orfuns football executive, and through the company sponsored many teams—in bowling, girls' softball, and other sports.

It was under his sponsorship, too, that the Outboard Marine basketball team was organized. Over the years, it has played in a good intermediate class and won its share of honors.

BORN IN WISCONSIN

Born in Sheboygan, Wisconsin, Mr. Campbell received his early education in Wausau, Wis., attended Carroll College at Waukesha in the same state, and attended Ferris Institute at Big Rapids, Mich.

At Carroll College, Mr. Campbell was a four-letter man—football, baseball, basketball, and high diving. "I managed to learn something, too, because you couldn't get by on athletics," he recalls with a grin.

After leaving college he began his experience in the selling field "on the road" for an asbestos firm. In 1922 he joined the Johnson Motor Co. whose factory was then located at South Bend, Indiana.

Late in 1927, the company decided to open a Canadian branch, and Mr. Campbell was chosen to find a location for it and open the plant.

It was not long after this that Toronto was pretty well decided on as the location for the factory. A visit to Peterborough and the old Henry Hope plant still standing in the south end of the city altered that decision, and in 1928 the Johnson Motor Co. opened its Canadian plant in Peterborough.

PLANNED FOR EXPORT

Planned at first as an export factory, the Peterborough plant switched to domestic sales as the export market waned during the depression.

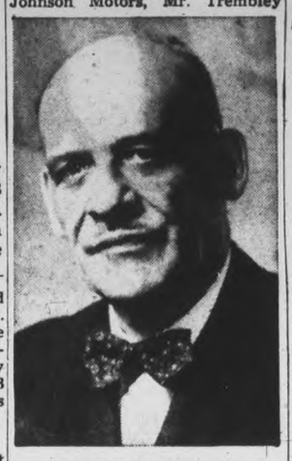
The stress on domestic sales paid off, and today the domestic market absorbs 70 per cent of the Outboard Marine's volume.

In 1949, Mr. Campbell retired, and Clarence B. Neal succeeded him. Mr. Neal was at the time vice-president and general manager.

Since his retirement, Mr. Campbell has not taken as active a part in his support of sports in Peterborough, but still has provided a number of young athletes with advice, and has been honorary president of both senior and junior baseball clubs in the city.

Vice-President In Charge Of Merchandising

Still holding the flavor of French Canada in his speech is L. L. (Larry) Tremblay, Outboard Marine's vice-president in charge of merchandising, who is one of the two Canadian officials to be a director of the Canadian company.



A big, rebullient man, he began his association with the company when he was buying gasoline engines from them for a forestry fire pump firm in Quebec.

FIRST SALESMAN

Along with the distinction of long association, he was the first man the company hired for its Canadian sales force. Mr. Tremblay started with the company in January, 1929, not quite a year after the plant was established in Peterborough.

His first post was district sales manager for Quebec and the Maritimes, a job that has since been split in two, with a district sales manager for Quebec, and one for the Maritimes.

Five years after he started with Johnson Motors, Mr. Trembley was appointed industrial sales manager, with duties in the outboard motor field as well. From that job, he stepped up in 1947 to the position he now holds — vice-president in charge of merchandising.

His appointment as a director of the company came in June, 1950.

OPENED A GARAGE

Born in Montreal, Mr. Tremblay was educated there and graduated from one of the city's technical schools.

"Like most of the fellows who graduated from technical schools, I opened a garage and went into business for myself. Later the business was bought by the fire pump company."

Mr. Tremblay then took charge of the plant manufacturing equipment for forest fires, and headed it until 1929 when he joined the Canadian Johnson Motor Co. as district sales manager for Quebec and the Maritimes.

The fire pump company was one operated by Mr. Tremblay's father, at one time director of public safety in Montreal. The pumps they built were powered by a Johnson outboard power head. Later, one of the Johnson Motor products was known as the Johnson-Tremblay fire pump.

MAYOR HUGH WADDELL

Mayor's Congratulations On Company's Anniversary

"Peterborough is proud to honor one of its industries, and those men and women associated with it past and present. This occasion is indeed one of special significance and one in which we are most happy to participate.

"Twenty-five years ago the Johnson Motor Company established its plant in Peterborough with only 17 employees. Its factory and office facilities expanded steadily, though slowly even during the slack years of the depression, until the time in 1944 when almost 1,000 workers were employed there.

"All of us have watched this growth and the many business careers which it has provided.

"Peterborough is a natural setting too for such an industry, where its products are used from early spring until late fall—in our district there are probably more outboard motors per capita than anywhere else in the world.

"Outboard Marine's war record was an enviable one, and we are proud of it, as we are of all our industries. Overnight, Outboard Marine shut off peacetime production and turned to precision work for the great drive to victory.

"Your 25 years in Peterborough have earned for you the most sincere congratulations from its citizens, and I am delighted to offer them to you now.

"In bringing you our best wishes now, we also hope that you will continue to grow and prosper."

Hy Wood Veteran Employee Of Outboard Marine Co.

Employee with the longest service at Outboard Marine is Hy Wood, vice-president in charge of manufacturing, who has been with the company since March, 1928.

Mr. Wood has another distinction—three of his four sons work at Outboard Marine, one as service manager (Don), and two as plant supervisors (Walter and Norman).

In fact, Mr. Wood worked in the Outboard Marine plant before it became the property of Johnson Motors in 1928. From 1916 to 1920 he worked for Henry Hope and Sons, owners of the building until 1920, when they sold it.

Born in Yorkshire, England, Mr. Wood was educated there and came to Canada about 1906. He came to Peterborough and worked at the CGE, taking a mechanical engineering course at nights. He stayed with the CGE until 1916.

OWN MACHINE SHOP

In 1921 he started his own machine and repair shop, which he operated until 1928, when he went to work for Johnson Motors as superintendent. From that position he moved to works manager, then to

In 1945, Miss O'Brien was made secretary to Hugh M. Campbell and Mr. Neal, and after Mr. Campbell's retirement, continued as secretary to Mr. Neal.

Outboard Plant Sells 30 Per Cent. Of Motors To Foreign Markets

When Peterborough was chosen in 1928 as the site of the Johnson Motors plant, the parent firm in the United States planned it as a factory to make outboards for the Canadian market and for export within the British Empire.

Depression days ended the export market almost before it had begun, and the company had to stress manufacturing outboards for domestic consumption. In time, however, the export market reopened bit by bit until today the Peterborough plant of Outboard Marine ships about 30 per cent of its volume overseas.

In 1952, export sales amounted to 27 per cent of volume.

The company's export program, directed by secretary-treasurer Bruce L. Payne, will get a shot in the arm if the British pound is made freely convertible. Mr. Payne estimates that the British, Australian and New Zealand markets, now closed to Canadian-built outboards, would absorb 10,000 outboard motors annually.

Import controls now bar these markets to Canada and the U.S. but should the pound be made convertible the effect on Outboard Marine here would be noticeable both in long and short run.

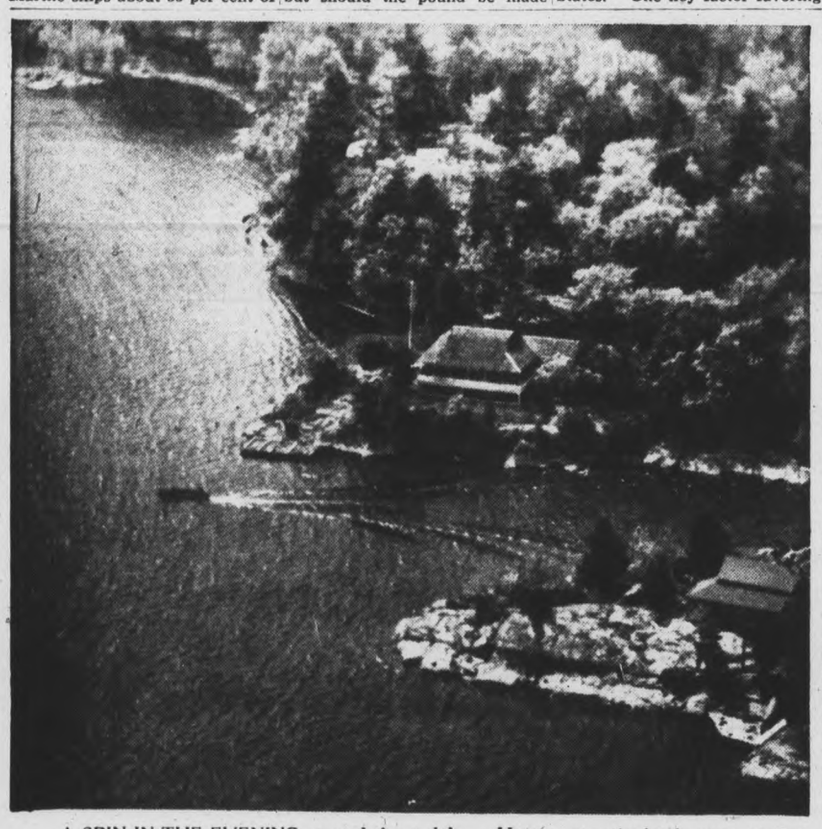
Almost immediately there would be a demand for more workers, probably a third shift in addition to the two shifts already working. The long run effect might be reflected in plant expansion beyond present plans.

All these effects would depend on the ability of the Peterborough plant to compete with the parent firms and other outboard manufacturers in the United States. One key factor favoring Canadian made motors would be the Commonwealth preferential tariff system.

At present, motors from Peterborough flow to a colorful variety of countries, 35 in all, and have a great variety of uses.

Some of the main markets are in Malaya, the Straits Settlements, France, Finland, Indonesia, Venezuela, Mexico, French Indo China, and the British West Indies. In lessor quantities, they go to Peru, the Fiji Islands, Turkey, Cuba and Brazil.

Another market that may open up in the near future is Pakistan. Recently a group of Pakistani visited Peterborough to study municipal administration here. They saw a demand in their country for outboards in water police work, replacing inboard-powered launches used at present.



Countries which most recently lifted import controls on outboards are Luxembourg and Belgium. These controls were lifted March 30, and already the first orders have been received from Belgium.

In the main the export market's demand for outboard motors is a commercial demand. No great quantities are purchased for pleasure, although quite a few find their way to fishing and boating enthusiasts overseas.

The great need is for freighting, logging, commercial fishing, and for powering tenders.

Progress in the design and efficiency of Outboard Marine motors has adopted them better for commercial purposes, and this has boosted export sales, says Mr. Payne.

"Since 1929, our export volume has been increasing consistently. The outlook for the future is bright, though we temper our optimism a bit with the reminder that not all the markets are open to us," Mr. Payne says.

Hy Wood

Mr. and Mrs. Wood have four sons, Donald, who started work at Johnson Motors in May, 1928, Norman, Walter and Kenneth, who works at CGE.

His hobbies have been hunting, boating and fishing, and more recently, a 200-acre farm in Ennismore Township where he raises pure-bred Hereford cattle, hogs and chickens. In his youth in Peterborough, he was twice all-round track and field champion of the city. Mr. Wood is a member of the Society of Automotive Engineers.

Vice-President

Sales, service and advertising are the departments that are Mr. Trembley's responsibility. The other company vice-president, Hy Wood, is responsible for manufacturing.

A keen hockey and tennis player in his school days, he listed discus throwing in track and field meets as another of his favorite sports. Hunting and fishing and golf have been Mr. Tremblay's latter day hobbies, but golf has since been dropped in favor of rod and gun. An ardent shooter, he is a member of several skeet clubs in Quebec.

Looking back on his life with the company, Mr. Tremblay recalls that there were only three district sales managers when he started; there are now seven. Over the years, Outboard Marine has adhered to its policy of using direct dealers, and since its establishment in Peterborough has authorized 2,200 dealers to sell their products.

Of the future, Mr. Tremblay says that "the outlook is increasingly brighter every year. More and more people are recognizing the value of healthy recreation that can be had with outboard motors, and larger quantities of outboards are being used for commercial purposes."

Mr. Tremblay is the father of one grown son and a proud grandfather twice over.

Since The Outboard Marine and Manufacturing Company started business in Peterborough 25 years ago, Canada has seen a great industrial expansion that has proved as lusty a growth as ever experienced by any nation. New industries have started every year. Older ones have grown and expanded.

It has been the pleasure of the A. R. Williams Machinery Company to supply many of the "wheels" for Canada's expansion in the form of machine tools . . . lathes, milling machines, balancing units, drilling machines . . . all the supplies and equipment so necessary to industry.

The line in the foreground is of motors for one of the company's new products, Lawn-Boy power mower. Behind them are Iron Horse motors made for a variety of uses. Beyond the main assembly lines are smaller lines from which flow components—such as coils, etc.—for the motors.—(Parks Studio Photo).

Engine Pool For Employees To Test Motors Out

For a report on the engine's performance, plus any comments or suggestions he may have to make, an employee of Outboard Marine can borrow an outboard motor for a weekend or for his holidays.

Accountant Jack Ferren, whose department keeps the waiting list for the engine pool, says that not everybody gets a motor the very weekend he wants it, since there are usually 35 motors in the pool and there are about 800 employees in the company.

However, during the period the loan pool operates—from May 1 to the end of the deer hunt— everybody who wants to borrow a motor has borrowed one.

At the beginning of each pool season, about 35 new motors are put in the pool. For instance, in 1952, there were 32 motors in it: seven three horsepower models, 10 fives, three 7½s, five 10s, three 12s, and four 14s.

Demand, as usual, was concentrated on the four lower horsepower models, since the need is mostly for fishing purposes and short jaunts.

When an employee borrows a motor, he is given a form setting out the brand (Johnson, Evinrude, Elto) and horsepower of the motor, the date borrowed, and the date it is to be returned.

On the back of the form is space for comment under three headings: general condition, the motor's operating qualities, and comments and suggestions. Since the motors are all new, the information gained from these remarks can be applied to motors under production.

In this way, both employees and employer benefit. Suggestions help production, and the loan of the motor helps the employee enjoy his weekend or his holidays at no cost beyond the observations he would normally make on any motor he used.

Jack O'Donoghue Assistant To Production Manager

Assistant production manager of the Outboard Marine's Peterborough plant is Jack O'Donoghue, who joined the company in January, 1936.

One of a family of six boys and four girls, Jack was born in Ennismore township, where he worked on his father's farm for a time before coming to Peterborough.

He started in the stores department, then moved into production in stock-chasing, then supervisor of production processing. In September, 1952, he was appointed assistant production manager under Bob Gibbons.

Married, with five children—three girls and two boys ranging in age from one to 12—Jack's hobbies are typical or so many workers at the Outboard Marine: hunting, fishing and boating. He is a member of St. Peter's Cathedral parish.

JACK O'DONOGHUE

How Accountant Started As Office Boy In 1937

Accountant Jack Ferren of Outboard Marine started with the company in 1937 as a mail boy. Now he is in charge of a department responsible for, among other things, mailing.

JACK FERREN

The accountant and his staff look after general ledger work, cash, credit and collections, invoicing, accounts receivable, and acocunts payable, stationery stores and mailing.

Born in Kinmount, Jack was educated in Peterborough at St. Peter's School. After completing his studies there, he took two years of night school work at PCVS in bookkeeping and accounting.

In 1937 he joined the staff of Outboard Marine as a mail boy, moving in a short time into the cost department. He was transferred in 1942 to cashier work, and six years later was appointed chief accountant.

A former director of the Junior Chamber of Commerce. Jack is a keen outdoorsman and hasn't missed a deer season in 15 years. Fishing is also a hobby and in sports he is a baseball fan and at one time played hockey.

Jack is married and the father of three girls, two, four and six.

Tom Snowdon Supervisor Of Machine Shop

One of the group of key plant supervisors is Tom Snowdon, day supervisor of the machine shop.

Just concluding his 12th year with Outboard Marine, Tom's job is to see that all machine shop work runs as smoothly as possible and that production schedules are met by his department.

Born in Peterborough, Tom was educated at King Edward Public School and PCVS, started work at the Raybestos in 1936 and spent five years there. After a short stretch in the CGE toolroom, he moved to the Outboard Marine in 1941, starting in the toolroom.

Little more than a month ago he was named machine shop supervisor.

For a time, he played junior city league hockey, but at present his favored sport is fishing, mostly for pickerel.

TOM SNOWDON

Married to the former Marie Kearns seven years ago, Tom is the father of two sons, 2 and 5. He is a member of the American Society of Tool Engineers.

Started As Office Boy Is Now Secretary-Treasurer

One of the group of executives who joined the Outboard Marine a year after the original firm of Johnson Motors was established in Peterborough is Bruce L. Payne, who rose in successive steps from office boy to be secretary-treasurer of the company.

Like other officers of the firm, he was born and educated in Peterborough—at Queen Alexandra Public School, then in the commercial side of Peterborough Collegiate and Vocational School.

Beyond his working hours, he has made himself active in the affairs of the community. At present his chief interest lies in the Peterborough branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society.

DISASTER SERVICE

A vice-president of the local branch, Mr. Payne concentrates his work on the disaster service of the Red Cross, with which he is also connected in the city's civil defence organization.

When Mr. Payne started with the company, it was not the Outboard Marine and Manufacturing Co., but the Canadian Johnson Motor Co. Ltd. The parent firms in the United States—Evinrude Motors and Johnson Motors—merged in 1936 to form the present company.

Mr. Payne started as an office boy in 1929, then worked at many phases of accounting in the office. He was appointed accountant in 1942. Six years later, he was named secretary-treasurer of the firm.

His job as secretary-treasurer includes the task of looking after the Canadian company's export business.

AWARDED FELLOWSHIP

A graduate of the International Accountants' Society, he was recently awarded a fellowship in the Chartered Institute of Secretaries, a distinction he shares with city clerk E. A. Outram.

BRUCE L. PAYNE

Like so many employees of the company, Mr. Payne has a summer cottage. It is located on Mississauga (Gull) lake in the Catchacoma district, and provides him with a hunting headquarters in the fall as well as a summer holiday spot where he indulges in some successful angling for smallmouth bass and lake trout.

Married with three children—two boys and a girl—he is an active member of George St. United Church, where he was until last year a member of the board of stewards.

A past treasurer of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Payne works in civil defence administration and is a member of the Peterborough Club, the Chamber of Commerce, and the Peterborough Automobile Club.

Charlie Boulter Assistant Service Manager Don Wood

Assistant service manager Charlie Boulter's interest in outboard motors comes naturally. His father was one of the pioneer Evinrude dealers in Canada, and so it wasn't unusual when Charlie came to Outboard Marine to work in 1938.

Born and educated in Belleville, Charlie worked for radio firms for several years—Stewart-Warner in Belleville, Rogers-Majestic and Stromberg-Carlson in Toronto.

In Toronto, too, he spent a brief time working for an inboard engine firm, and a year before he joined Outboard Marine, Charlie worked with the Peterborough Canoe Co. on marine engine installation.

Starting in Outboard Marine in 1938 as a service mechanic, he moved into service receiving, then into the office as parts order clerk from 1940 until he joined the RCAF in 1942.

Charlie served as a radar technician in Newfoundland, Sydney, N.S., and Halifax, and got his discharge in 1945. He returned to the company then in charge of returned goods orders and received his present appointment in October, 1951.

Married, with two daughters aged 7 and 2½, he maintains his interest in radio only as a hobby, in boating and duck hunting. His present plans are aimed at an outboard-powered cruiser to park in the Otonabee behind his Riverside Drive home.

CHARLIE BOULTER

Producing Outboard Motor To Fill Customer's Order Follows Well Laid Plan

You're sitting in your boat. You decide to go somewhere, so you make a few simple adjustments, pull the cord on your outboard and you're off.

It's that easy with modern outboards, with any of the several kinds made by Outboard Marine. The motor starts and keeps going, gently for trolling, or wide open for travel.

With good care, your motor ticks along at your speed for a long time. What made it that way? Well, an industrial diamond machined your piston to a mirror shine, a spray gun put the coat of tough paint on the motor, a special delivery letter made certain the materials arrived at the plant on time, and careful packing ensured that your outboard motor was delivered to you in good condition.

What's more, an efficient cost control system kept the price of your motor within reasonable limits and at a competitive level. A dealer's service school kept your Outboard Marine dealer on his toes as far as new motors and new tricks in repair and maintenance are concerned.

COURSE OF PRODUCTION

Let's look back to the time your outboard motor was ordered. Say you ordered it in the fall, for delivery in the spring. Your Outboard Marine dealer in turn placed his order with the factory in Peterborough.

His order comes to the factory. From the sales department goes an order to the production department, releasing the number of motor types requested.

Production in turn places its needs in the hands of the purchasing department. Orders flow out to the Outboard Marine's suppliers, timed to bring parts into the factory at or before the time they are needed.

Here is one of the points along the line of production at which the good judgment born of long experience tells. Allowances are made for possible waste, and for recovery of parts of that waste, metals are bought in the size needed, delivery dates are timed carefully, because a factory has only so much storage space.

TOOLING UP

If the plant is starting on a new model of motor, there is the problem of tooling up. Engineers determine what tools and dies will be needed, what jigs must be built for the assembly line. These needs are translated into engineering drawings and finally into blueprints.

The blueprints move to the tool and die makers who plan their attack, then produce dies and tools ranging in weight from a few ounces to many hundreds of pounds. Once made, dies and tools are hardened to stand up under the hours of life they must have to be economical.

Then while the huge dies are swung into position on the die casting machines, materials begin to arrive in stores. There they are tested for quality and analyzed to see that they meet the specifications demanded by the engineers.

Castings are completed, and semi-finished to go into finished material stores to be drawn as needed. Along the assembly line new tools and jigs are installed; in the machine shop new grinding wheels arrive, new diamond-tipped tools to machine parts to the finest possible finish.

STOCKS ARRIVE

Along the bank of automatic machines, stocks of brass and other metals arrive for machining. New tools are waiting there for them and the operators feed the new stock into the machine after setting it up. Some perform three operations, others six and seven, before cutting off and dropping the finished part into the bin. Operators check tolerances, replenish stock racks, and generally assure smooth and speedy production.

Precision work on other parts begins at the same time in other sections of the machine shop. Lathes, punch presses, boring and milling machines do their work. The day shift makes room for the night shift, a weekend comes along, a new week starts and the new motor is closer than ever to production.

Grinding machines bring crankshafts, propellor and drive shafts to close tolerances and put a fine finish on parts that have been hardened. Gears for the motors are brought to Peterborough from the parent plant in the United States.

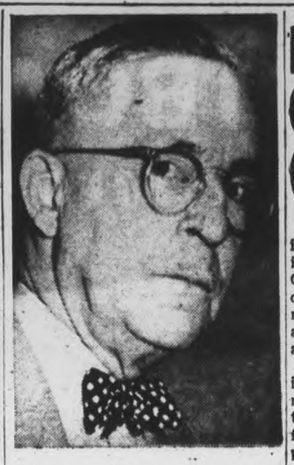
Cylinders are flybored to close tolerances and then finished honed. Crankcases are flybored, but not honed.

As parts reach the finished stage, they enter the finished parts stores, then are drawn as they are needed by the various sections of the assemly line. Some parts enter the plating department for platings of cadmium that will resist salt water; aluminum parts are anodized to reduce corrosion.

CAREFUL INSPECTION

Throughout all these processes and procedures, as one stage of a part is completed, it must pass careful inspection. Then, as finished parts are treated and inspected, the motor awaits assembly.

Two smaller assembly lines act as tributaries to the main production line, feeding power heads and lower assemblies to it. At various points along the line, workers install coils, carburetors and other parts on the motor, propellor assemblies and trim parts are added in other sections of the assembly line.



Paint booths located strategically along production lines put color on your motor, transfers tell the brand, set out simple instructions as to running, fuel etc. Infra-red lamps set in overhead ovens bake the paint on the metal.

Near the end of the assembly line are four water booths where motors get practical tests, running at high and low speeds. The tester on the tank checks motors for leaks, listens carefully to the sound of the motor to determine the proper needle valve setting, the correct fuel-air mixture needed to run the motor properly at various speeds.

Taken from the tank, the motors return to the line, are dried, then touched up with paint where it is needed.

From this last point on the assembly line, your outboard motor is prepared for shipping. Set in a wooden frame, it is packed in a box of cardboard strong enough to withstand pressures of 350 pounds to the square inch. Export motors are first set in wooden frames, then in wooden crates tough enough to stand longer voyages and harder handling.

Then the motor was shipped to your dealer. He telephoned you and you went fishing with it this weekend.

LAWRENCE L. MAGUIRE

Larry Maguire Assistant Head Of Advertising

A Peterborough boy who gained his advertising experience in New York and Halifax is Lawrence L. (Larry) Maguire, assistant advertising manager of Outboard Marine.

Born and educated in the city's public schools and Peterborough Collegiate. Larry worked with a New York advertising agency for a time, at the same time taking a special course in transportation and commerce at Columbia University.

Before returning to Peterborough in 1936, when he started in Outboard Marine's cost department, he spent some time in Halifax.

In 1947, Larry was named advertising manager, a post he held until 1952, when poor health forced him to take a less active part in that department. For six years, from 1943 to 1949, he was editor of the Outboard Mariner, the company's employee publication.

A widower, with one married daughter, Larry is a former vice-president of the Canadian Industrial Editors Association and a charter member of the Gyro Club of Halifax, and the Sales and Advertising Club of Peterborough.

He lists as his hobbies photography, painting, and singing in barbershop quartettes.

Retard Your Spark Before Tinkering

It is always a good rule to make certain that your spark is fully retarded before tinkering with your propeller. Sometime the operator figures only on pulling off a few weeds, and gives little thought to the possibility of inadvertently turning the prop, and starting the motor, which could result in serious injury. This also applies when checking for a broken drive or shear pin. Naturally, this turning of the propeller is the same as turning the flywheel; a spark is sent from the magneto, and the motor may start while the propeller is being gripped. This is particularly a dangerous practice when the motor is warm, since it will fire more readily.

Fly Casting One Objective Catching Fish

The real purpose of fly casting is to present the lure to the fish in as natural a manner as possible. One should cultivate the skill of dropping an artificial fly, spinning lure or bass bug as lightly and as delicately upon the waters as nature's insects alight.

Accuracy rather than distance is the aim of all good fly fishermen. When flycasting stand natural with the left foot slightly forward, taking care to have plenty of room backward as well as forward as the line must step out on the back cast and will become entangled in the tree tops unless sufficient room is allowed.

Grasp the rod handle with the right hand, the thumb on the part of the grip which seems to balance the rod best.

Fly casting is a wrist movement and the upper part of the arm should never be used in making the cast unless hampered by brush or other causes which make such deviation necessary.

Timing the cast is without question, the most important point to bear in mind when learning to fly cast as everything depends upon its correctness.

If the caster is too slow in timing the cast for the forward shoot the line will strike the ground, or, in all probability wrap itself around the body of the caster as he brings the rod forward. On the other hand if the caster is too quick and does not allow the line to straighten out on the back cast he will snap off many flies during the course of a day's fishing, and also tangle the line around the tip of his rod.

Canada's Oldest and Largest Electrical Manufacturer

Building Model Railroads Eric McKinstry's Hobby

A model railroader by hobby, assistant purchasing agent Eric McKinstry of the Outboard Marine gave up outdoor hobbies of fishing and hunting to concentrate on the indoor pleasures of railroading.

He and a fellow hobbyist have almost completed what they think is the largest model railroad layout in the city. They had merely finished one layout recently when they decided to tear it down and build a bigger one.

ERIC McKINSTRY

Born in the city, Eric was educated at May's School and at PCVS. He left collegiate before completing his senior matriculation, worked for three years as a lathe operator at CGE, then returned in depression years to complete his schooling. Afterward, he attended Peterborough Business College.

In September, 1935, he joined the Outboard Marine in the purchasing department as an expediter. In 1941 he started work on production control in the company's wartime work, and returned to the purchasing department in 1945 as assistant purchasing agent.

A past chief of the patriarchal branch of the IOOF and past district deputy of the Samaritan branch, he is an ardent golfer at the Kawartha Club, a director of the Peterborough Automobile Club.

At Grace United Church he is chairman of both the board of stewards and of the board of trustees.

In November, 1940, he married a former company employee.

WORKING AT A POWER DRILL. Edward O'Rourke drills dowel holes for rings for these pistons which shortly will become parts of a 25 horsepower outboard motor. Drill jigs made in the Outboard Marine toolroom hold the pistons in place and holes are drilled in the jigs to accommodate entry of the drill.—(Examiner Staff Photo).

Bob Gibbons Responsible Production Of Products

From the time work starts on an Outboard Marine product until it goes out the shipping door, the production department of the company is responsible for it.

Manager of the department is R. E. (Bob) Gibbons, a native of Meaford, who was educated in Toronto schools, worked 6½ years in the province's capital, and finally settled in Peterborough an even dozen years ago.

Bob Gibbons was born in Meaford, and educated at Toronto's Balmy Beach public school and Malvern Collegiate. From there he went to business college, then spent 6½ years working for the Whyte Packing Co.

CAME TO OUTBOARD

He came to work for the Outboard Marine in 1941—the same year he was married—and started out in the purchasing department as an expediter. Two years later chasing agent, a job he stayed with for four years.

His appointment as assistant production manager came in September, 1947, under E. E. Estlick, who is now plant manager of the RPM Manufacturing Co. in Lamar, Missouri, a subsidiary of the Outboard Marine.

Once a release for a certain product comes to the production department from the sales department, the production department is responsible for the product. They tell the purchasing department their needs and schedule their manufacturing processes so that parts arrive at the assembly line at the time they are needed.

R. E. (BOB) GIBBONS

New systems of production control and allocation of materials in short supply are discussed once a month at a corporation production meeting held in the United States. Orders and needs are scheduled at these meetings to fit the needs and abilities of each plant.

Married for 12 years, Bob has two sons, 7 and 10, and since he bought a home in Ashburnham recently, his only hobby has been interior decorating. He's a member of the Lions Club and the Chamber of Commerce.

Sales Manager Quebec Area

Twenty years experience in the sporting goods field as clerk, department manager and traveller, prepared Herve Perron, district sales manager for Quebec, for his job with Outboard Marine, which he started six years ago.

Maniwaki, the Matapedia valley, Marane and Cansapscal, are some of the colorful names Herve sees frequently in his travels through Quebec, one of Canada's most picturesque provinces.

Born and educated in Livermore Falls, Maine, Herve came to work for Outboard Marine in 1946 as district sales manager for Quebec. He is 46, married, and has one son.

Hobbies are fishing and gardening, and he is a member of the Commodore Boating Club.

HERVE PERRON

Costs, Problems Of Len Bearne

Cost problems of the Outboard Marine's factory are Len Bearne's baby.

It's his responsibility to calculate whether a new machine can be economical, at what cost a new product can be produced, and comparative costs of procedures designed to reduce expenses.

If a new machine is under consideration, Len's department weighs its value against its productivity, its probable life and how quickly the savings it effects will pay its cost. Another problem is keeping costs within the bounds of budgets.

Cost control enables Outboard Marine to keep its sales prices to the level where they can compete with those of other firms.

LEN BEARNE

BORN IN WALES

Len was born in Aberystwyth, Wales, 45 years ago, and came to Canada when he was four. He lived in Winnipeg until 1921, was educated there and was an ardent speed skater, besides playing hockey, baseball and basketball.

He completed his commercial training at PCVS, having started it in Winnipeg schools, and after graduation was employed at the De Laval Co. in the various phases of manufacturing control work.

In 1930, Len came to Outboard Marine as cost accountant and established the company's present factory cost system.

He received his present appointment as factory cost controller in 1952.

A Mason, Len is master of Peterborough Lodge, he is married with one daughter and his hobbies are fishing and lawn bowling.

Lawrence Gould Supervisor Of Customs At Outboard

Customs supervisor Lawrence Gould, a First World War veteran, has been with Outboard Marine for 24 years. With others of the 116th Battalion, he "went over the top" at Vimy Ridge just a few weeks more than 36 years ago.

Born and educated in Uxbridge, Mr. Gould worked briefly in a bank there before enlisting in the army, and spending four years in uniform, three of them overseas.

After the war, he worked in banks in Toronto and Detroit, and shortly after returning to Canada from Detroit, came to work for Outboard Marine, then the Canadian Johnson Motor Co.

Mr. Gould started in stores, but within a few months was working in the office on customs, the factory payroll, and accounts payable. As the company grew in Canada, these jobs grew and Mr. Gould stayed with the customs end of it.

Married, with one daughter who herself was married last summer, Mr. Gould is a member of the YMCA and Murray St. Baptist Church, where he is church clerk and a member of the board of deacons. Hobbies are gardening in summer and volleyball at the YM in winter.

Chief Inspector Walter Wood

An outboard sports enthusiast is Outboard Marine's chief inspector, Walter Wood, 35. Archery, hunting, fishing and boating are his spring, summer and fall pursuits, in addition to a keen interest in the Boy Scout Association.

Employed first in the company's boat shop in 1936, Walter spent six months there, followed by a year-and-a-half in the machine shop.

Four years in the toolroom followed this, and then he was promoted to tool inspector and tool and method improver, at which he spent two years. His next appointment was to the post of supervisor of the tooling and routing department. In 1948, he received his present appointment of chief inspector.

WALTER WOOD

Born and educated in Peterborough, Walter married the former Dorothy Hatton in 1937. They have three sons, 14, 12, and 10, and a daughter, three.

Walter is scoutmaster of the 17th Peterborough troop and president of the Peterborough and District Scouters' Club.

OUTBOARD MARINE AND MANUFACTURING CO. OF CANADA LIMITED

It is a pleasure to extend congratulations to Outboard Marine and Manufacturing Co. of Canada Limited on the occasion of your twenty-fifth anniversary in Peterborough, Ontario.

As a supplier of springs of many kinds to Outboard Marine, we are proud of our close and cordial association over the years. It is our sincere hope that Wallace Barnes products will continue to contribute their small share to the high standard of excellence achieved by the products manufactured in Peterborough by Outboard Marine.

William Swiss Headquarters In Winnipeg

Eighteen years ago, Walter William Swiss began his employment with the Outboard Marine as an office boy. Today, as district sales manager for Manitoba and Northwestern Ontario, he has his headquarters in Winnipeg and covers an area of some thousands of square miles.

BILL SWISS

From his job as office boy, Bill Swiss moved in to the cost department with Len Bearne, now factory cost controller, and finally into the payroll department, which he headed until 1950, when he received his present appointment.

Born in Montreal, Bill came to Peterborough with his parents when he was not quite a year old. Educated at St. Peter's Separate and High Schools, then at PCVS, he joined the company in 1934.

An ardent fisherman in the spring and summer, Bill turns his thoughts to "the roarin' game" in winter and is one of the thousands of keen curlers in Winnipeg.

A charter member of the Chamber of Commerce here, Bill was last a second vice-president of the Jaycees.

Service School Paying Big Dividends

Outboard Marine's service school for dealers and their mechanics has been in operation for only six of the company's 25 years. But in that time it has won the enthusiastic endorsation of the men who deal in the company's products.

At the school experienced mechanics learn what changes have been made in the products and what new techniques of repair have been developed.

BILL NAISH

All types of motors made by Outboard Marine are available to them. Some are cutaway models, illustrating the internal workings of the engines. Others, from the two-cycle Iron Horse up to the heavy 25 horsepower Johnson and Evinrude motors, are on hand for the students to dismantle and study.

FOR EXPERIENCED MEN

Bill Naish, lecturer and demonstrator at the course, emphasises that the course is strictly for experienced mechanics.

"They're here for only a week," he points out, "and a green man would be only more confused at the end of it. It takes about eight weeks to train a man in the fundamentals of repair work."

In their week at the Outboard Marine, the mechanics delve into new problems posed by changes in outboards and in the industrial motors made by the firm. They study electrical problems, the symptoms of ailing motors, compression troubles an engine may have, and a few new tricks of the repair trade.

Learning factory repair methods, short cuts, and whatever else they can, they have a chance to know the new models before they are called to do actual repair work on them.

Films detailing each step of a repair job are used to teach the students visually. In the service school's film library are seven film strips that cover everything from clutches on outboard motors to the magnetos that provide the spark.

These films are concerned mostly with the complex jobs of repair. And to refresh the mechanic's memory without a second showing of the film, booklets covering each step shown in the film strip are distributed to those attending the classes.

Usually, there are eight to a class, although the last class of the 1953 school season numbered 16, and nearly filled the room that serves as a classroom.

A year's average graduating class would number about 80, but one had 112 in it, and others have had from 60 to 92. The mechanics come from all over Canada—last year there was one from Alberta, another from Nova Scotia—and are required only to pay their living expenses while here. Cost of the school is absorbed by Outboard Marine.

Classes for the 1954 season will be held, Bill Naish hopes, in the new building to be constructed on the site of the present parking lot.

In the new classroom will be eight individual benches, giving the mechanics attending an opportunity to work on individual motors.

Bill, who has been with the Outboard Marine's service department for 10 years, thinks the new classroom will result in better trained mechanics, and better service for people who own motors made by Outboard Marine.

Thomas McMillan In Charge All Phases Of Manufacturing

Directly in charge of all phases of manufacturing, Thomas McMillan is a busy man. He is assistant to the vice-president in charge of manufacturing.

His job—"a matter of co-ordination" as he calls it—is to make the gears of manufacturing mesh with as few clashes as possible. Production, assembly, machine shop, tool design, all the component operations of manufacturing, are his concern.

THOMAS McMILLAN

11 YEARS WITH COMPANY

Now in his 12th year with the company, Tom McMillan started out as a toolmaker, taking his training at the Western Clock Co. here and at the John Inglis Co. in Toronto. In Toronto he worked as well with Rogers Majestic Co.

From 1941 to 1945 he was a toolmaker at Outboard Marine, then spent a year in tool inspection and routing. In 1946 he was appointed general machine shop foreman and spent four years on that job.

For two years he worked on cost reduction, then was appointed to his present job.

Born in Glasgow, Scotland, Tom came to Canada when he was three years old—he is now 31—and was educated at Prince of Wales Public School and the vocational course at PCVS.

While at school he played hockey and baseball, and was a newspaperboy for the Examiner. His three sons, Tom says, will be newspaperboys too, when they're old enough.

Duck and deer hunting and fishing are his hobbies, along with curling in the winter. He is one of the board of managers of St. Paul's Presbyerian Church.

Sales Manager John Madden Prominent Civic Leader

An enthusiast about his work because he uses and likes the product he sells is sales manager John W. Madden of the outboard division of Outboard Marine and Manufacturing Co.

For the past 23 years he has been with the company, four years in the accounting department and the remainder in sales.

Named Ontario sales representative for Johnson Motors in 1934, four years after he joined the company, he became assistant sales manager in 1948 and in 1951 was appointed to his present key position of sales manager, outboard division.

Born in Peterborough, Johnny Madden was educated at St. Peter's High School and after graduation worked in the Bank of Toronto for several years, joining Canadian Johnson Motors in 1930.

He was married in 1936, has three children—a boy, 10, and two girls, 7 and 4—and still manages to find time for plenty of interests outside his job.

JOHN W. MADDEN

HEADS CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

President of the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce, he is as well a vice-president of the Peterborough Sales and Advertising Club, the Peterborough County Tuberculosis Association and a director of the Kiwanis Club.

His love of the outdoors is reflected in the directorship he holds in the committee which guides the Cedar Lakes Citizens' Park project south of Apsley.

At his summer cottage on Clear Lake, he finds plenty of scope for two of his hobbies, fishing and boating. On Chemong lake, as on Clear, his hydroplane Cyclone—powered of course by an outboard motor—was a fast-moving and familiar sight.

His garden at home—659 Weller St.—claims all the attention he can give it beyond his other interests.

Harry Pounder At Outboard 16 Years Purchasing Agent

Purchasing agent for the Outboard Marine, Harry Pounder came to the company 16 years ago from General Motors in Oshawa, where he had spent 17 years.

In charge of all purchasing for the Peterborough plant, Mr. Pounder and his department also make sure that orders are delivered when promised. Raw, finished and semi-finished materials purchased come from all over Canada and the United States.

BORN IN ENGLAND

A native of Yorkshire, England, Mr. Pounder completed grammar school there—roughly the equivalent of collegiate in Canada—and came to Canada shortly after finishing school.

His first Canadian job was at Fittings Ltd. in Oshawa, which he left to work for General Motors in the purchasing department. On January 1, 1937, he came to the Outboard Marine as purchasing agent.

Once an ardent golfer—he has given up the game since the war—Mr. Pounder raises flowers and declares that it is his only hobby, "just puttering around in the garden." In Oshawa he raised mainly roses, but has scattered his horticultural interest since.

HARRY POUNDER

Other interests include the St. John Ambulance Brigade in Peterborough, in which he is a member of the executive committee. Mr. and Mrs. Pounder live on Homewood Ave.

Del Jackman Is In Charge Assembly Lines

In charge of assembly lines at Outboard Marine is assembly supervisor Del Jackman, an employee of the company for nearly 16 years.

Del started with the company in 1937 as a service mechanic repairing outboards rejected from the production line, later moved to the power head assembly bench, and when war came, worked on assembly of parts made for the RCAF's Harvard trainer.

DEL JACKMAN

In 1942 he was moved to gunsight assembly as assistant foreman, and in 1945 was made assembly foreman, a post he held until he was appointed assembly supervisor in 1946.

Born and educated in Lakefield, Del worked in a hardware store, then a creamery, and from there came to Outboard Marine.

Fond of sports of all kinds as a spectator, he likes fishing and hunting and mechanical work on cars and outboard motors. Del is 36, married, and a member of the IOOF.

Peter McArthur Sells Outboards

Assistant sales manager for the outboard division at Outboard Marine is Peter McArthur, who is well known to basketball fans as a member of the Outboard Marines, the company-sponsored entry in the Intermediate class of the Ontario Basketball Association.

Born in Peterborough, Pete attended Prince of Wales and Queen Mary public schools here before going to Midland, where he went to high school and later business college.

In 1937 he started to work with Outboard Marine in the stores, moving through other departments, including production, to sales in 1948. He was appointed assistant sales manager for the outboard division in 1951.

Married, with two sons and a daughter, Pete has a cottage at Chemong lake, indulges in a little fishing and boating there, but concentrates his hobbies on golf in summer, curling in the winter.

NEARING THE END of their time in the factory are these Lawn-Boy power mowers. At the far end of this assembly line blades are bolted in place and other final assembly jobs completed. Centre man on the line gives the mowers a running test, and from him they go to the man at right, who uses small paint spray guns to touch up any marring of the mower's paint job. To his right again, the motors are packed. —(Parks Studio Photo).

Donald Toms Salesman

One of the two sales representatives for the industrial division, Donald Toms, a native of Havelock, joined the Outboard Marine in 1947, shortly after his discharge from the RCAF.

Don served five years as a motor mechanic in the air force. Before that he worked with the CGE after his education in Havelock public and high school.

DONALD TOMS

He joined the company in July, 1947, as a service mechanic and worked in that job until his transfer to industrial division sales in January of this year.

Married, with one son, 5, Don sells industrial motors—the Iron Horse—and the newly developed rotary lawnmower (the Lawn Boy) to customers in Ontario and Quebec. Hobbies are hunting and fishing.

Big Help In Developing Canada

Outboard Taken Back-break And Toil Out Of Travel In The Great Outdoors

Poets and writers have waxed lyrical about the paddle and the plane in the development of Canada's hinterland, but the one other divice that has made perhaps an even greater contribution, has gone almost unrecognized. This is the outboard motor.

Pauline Johnson in her lovely poem "The Song My Paddle Sings" would undoubtedly have been shocked to hear it paraphrased "The Song My Outboard Sings" but the truth remains that the paddle for all its utility spelled toil, long weary hours and slow progress. The outboard sings a different song. Perhaps it is an alien, foreign noise in the wilderness but it is the stirring melody of rapid effortless transportation. it penetrated where no pontoon-equipped plane could land. it breasted rushing waters that a canoeist would have to portage. It threaded its way into little known lakes and rivers, where distance kept the paddler away. It even meant life to the injured when its throbbing, pulsing power sped a boat at a fast clip to the nearest medical aid. Above all it took the back-break, the toil, the hardship out of travel in the wilderness. It gave man the edge in his battle again Nature in her ugly moods.

AID TO THE TRAPPER

The lonely trapper who works hard and long for his livelihood found new comfort and convenience in the little "kicker" that he clamped to his canoe, then tossed in his sleeping bag, grub and turkey (pack), and covered miles of water, much of it rarely if ever traversed by any other person. He covers a water trail in hours that formerly took days of labor.

The missionary in his lonely rounds inside the Arctic circle and along Alaska's bleak shoreline, in the North-West Territories, or even in northern Quebec or Ontario, knows full well the value of the outboard motor.

The Eskimo, schooled to hardship, looks on the outboard as a business asset. He uses it on a large freighter canoe in Hudson Bay, in hunting the white whale. The motor takes him alongside and he dispatches the whale with a rifle bullet or a spear, and then tows it triumphantly to land.

The inspector covers many miles seeking minerals, the surveyor also finds the outboard a boon in his work, the police officer, the trader, the angler and the hunter all know it for its worth, its convenience, its low cost.

HELPS DEVELOP CANADA

In short, there is no single piece of machinery that has contributed more to the development of Canada and the pleasure of thousands of residents and tourists than the outboard. Of course, everyone in Southern Ontario knows how this easily-operated, easily-transported kicker is used around the cottage; how it pushes a boat load of furniture and supplies from car to an island or a spot on some remote shoreline. It slows to a crawl when the angler is trolling, and roars into life and speed when the party is anxious to get home in a hurry for a meal, or when a storm threatens.

The forest ranger who guards the forest wealth against fire looks on the outboard as another right hand. It can transport men, food, supplies to the scene of a fire in short order, can even get closer to the blaze than an aeroplane, because often billowing smoke forces the pilot to land miles from the bush fire. In the Department of Lands and Forests alone, there are more than 500 Johnson and Evinrude outboard motors, reliable workmen, ready at all times to operate efficiently and swiftly.

In those same planes that patrol the bushlands, you'll find an outboard tucked away, as an emergency power plant. Oddly enough many a pilot has made a forced water landing, then clamped the outboard to the undercarriage, and taxied his pontoon craft to shore.

ALSO FOR PLEASURE

But switching to the pleasure aspects of the outboard, what is more delightful than to see a sleek long deck skiff whizzing across lake, jammed with young people, off to a regatta or just a pleasant day at some lakeside spot.

The same boat produces another tingling summer picture as it skims across the water towing a teen-ager on water skies, or competing in a boat race. It's a familiar sight, an accepted part of the Canadian vacationland scene.

But that's the outboard, the universal tool, the unbreakable toy, the friend of every water traveller. Time was when it was considered a luxury, but today there is no greater necessity for the cottager, the angler, the hunter, the prospector, the trapper, in short for anyone who uses the waterways.

For more than three decades it has sung a song of conquest of romance, of comfort from Ellesmere Island in the Arctic to Point Pelee in Lake Erie, from Cowachin Bay at Vancouver to the northermost point in Alaska. It's here to stay, a mark of progress, a melodious adjunct to modern living—and modern living is better because it came.

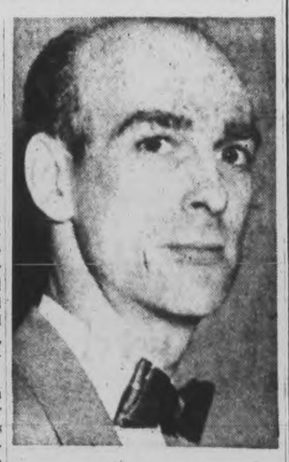
Paper Cups Carry Safety Messages

Paper cups carry safety messages at Outboard Marine. Printed in color, they tell the worker to "be sharper than your tools," to put "safety first, vanity last."

They warn workers to avoid infection by prompt treatment at the surgery, not to wear ties when working on machines because "your tie can hang you." Vivid illustrations of the dangers are printed along with the messages.

Al Metcalfe In Charge Plant's Personnel Relations

Personnel manager, labor relations director, safety co-ordinator, chairman of the suggestion committee—all these men are Al Metcalfe, whose main title is personnel manager of the Outboard Marine.



Besides doing these jobs, Al finds time for golf, deer hunting east of Apsley, a bit of bowling, and sometimes some skiing.

Al was born and educated in Peterborough and after completing his studies at PCVS became an apprentice tool and die maker at the CGE. In 1940 he completed his apprenticeship, and worked at his trade at four plants in and around Toronto—John Inglis Co., Small Arms, Research Enterprises, and Rogers Majestic.

He returned to Peterborough to work in Genelco as a toolmaker until 1942 when he started his employment with Outboard Marine as a tool and die maker. In 1948 the tool design department was set up and he worked there until 1950 when he became an assistant foreman in the machine shop.

June of 1951 found him in a new job as assistant personnel manager, and by September he was personnel manager.

A member of the Peterborough Ski Club and the Kawartha Golf Club, he is an officer of the Royal Arthur Masonic Lodge, AF and

AL METCALFE

AM and a member of the Peterborough Personnel Association. He is as well on the executive committee of the Peterborough-Lindsay section of the Industrial Accident Prevention Association. Married with one son, Al is a member of George St. United Church, where he was active in young peoples' work.

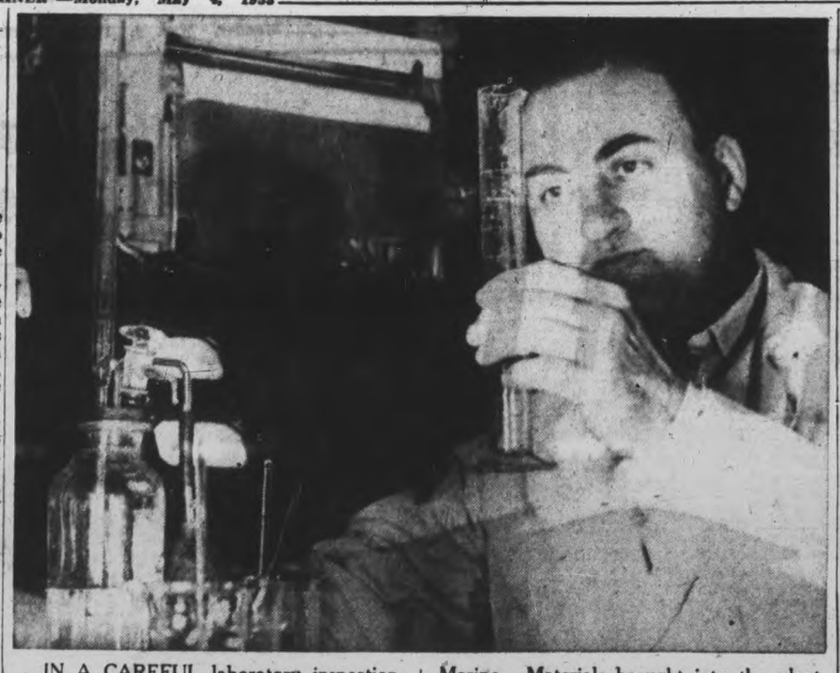
Buttons Used To Catch Perch

This is the story of some perch that made a meal out of pearl buttons. They didn't get the fisherman's shirt, but they did get the buttons and it just happened that the fisherman got the perch.

Mel Drew, retired game and fish overseer of Long lake in Frontenac county, down in the Land o' Lakes section reported that the fishing was excellent, and the bait, yep—pearl buttons. It was one of those days when an angler ran out of bait, his supply of night crawlers was exhausted. The angler who hailed from Wallaceburg, Ontario remembered that pearl buttons had proved good bait on some occasions.

He had only been able to land one perch before the fish had cleaned out his bait can, so he snipped a button of this shirt, threaded the hook through the buttonhole and dropped the line in the water. Within a few minutes he had another perch. Then he found himself without bait again, so he cut another button below the neckline. So enthused was he with the way the perch were taking the buttons that he cut them off all the way down. He came home with a nice string of perch, but no buttons on his shirt.

LADY OF HOUSE ANNOYED



His wife was more than mildly annoyed when he admitted that he had sacrificed a dozen pearl buttons for a like number of perch. Far into the night he took considerable verbal abuse for what she called a piece of juvenile silliness. The next morning after a practically sleepless night the target of a lambasting from his wife, he meekly stole out to clean the perch, a delicacy he favored very much. The entrails of the first perch produced a pearl button, and in his cleaning activities he probed the innermost recesses of the fish carefully, and finally he located every one of his missing buttons.

He proudly walked into the cottage on Long lake with a beautiful mess of perch all ready for the frying pan and a dozen shiny pearl buttons as well. There was no further retort from his wife as she prepared the fish dinner and at the same time sewing the buttons all back on the fashionable sport shirt.

That's just how brisk the fish bite at Long lake, and while we've never had any reason to doubt the veracity of Mr. Drew, we're inclined to think this yarn fits into the common category known as tall ones.

The same area, Long lake had one of the best tourist seasons in history with more than ninety per cent of the anglers coming from the United States. In fact, there were many times during the summer when every person at the lodge was on American except the owner.

Just in case some of the readers of this story have had good luck using pearl buttons to catch fish, and it can be done, we would suggest they play safe, and either bring along or purchase enroute a substantial supply of night crawlers and minnows, as the fish might have had their fill of the shiny buttons.

IN A CAREFUL laboratory inspection, Bill Meagher makes a solution test on one of the materials used in the production of outboard and industrial motors at Outboard Marine. Materials brought into the plant are carefully tested for quality to ensure that they measure up to engineering specifications.—(Examiner Staff Photo).

Charlie Clarke Supervisor Of Processing

Twenty-three years' an employee of the Outboard Marine, Charlie Clarke, Jr., has been connected most of that time with the manufacturing end of the company.

Starting in cost records in 1930 under former production manager E. E. Estlick, Charlie later worked in general stores, then was in charge of service stores. After this he entered the office where he worked on service records, then on production planning and scheduling.

From there he was promoted to supervisor in charge of processing, his present position.

Born in Toronto and educated in Hamilton and Peterborough, Charlie started work after leaving PCVS in the De Laval Co., where he stayed three years. From the De Laval he came straight to the Johnson Outboard Motor Co.

An ardent angler for speckled trout and a keen deer hunter, Charlie hasn't missed a hunt or an opening day in quite a few years. Also fond of bowling, he at one time played hockey for Peterborough Juniors and Intermediates, and baseball for the Raybestos team.

A member of the Sales and Advertising club, Charlie was married in 1941, and is the father of three daughters.

CHARLIE CLARKE

Russ Baer Advertising Head Got His Start In Radio

A veteran of four years' service with the RCAF, advertising manager Russ Baer is a relative newcomer to Outboard Marine. He has been with the firm less than a year.

RUSS BAER

Backed with 10 years in radio as a salesman, announcer and station manager, Russ was hired as advertising manager from CHEX, where he was station manager.

Born in Galt and educated there and in Kitchener, he started in 1938 in radio with CKCR, Kitchener, moving from there to Timmins, Kirkland Lake and North Bay.

He joined the RCAF in 1941 as a pilot, made 40 operational trips in Halifax bombers. Russ left the air force as a flight lieutenant with a DFC and bar. In 1945, when he left the RCAF, he returned to radio station CKWS in Kingston, an announcer, then program director and sales manager.

In 1948, Russ came to Peterboruogh to manager CHEX, and in July 1952 joined the Outboard Marine.

Fond of golf and fishing, Russ played three major high school sports—basketball, football and hockey—and curled a good deal while in Kingston. A member of the Kawartha Golf and Country Club, he is president of Sales and Advertising Club, and a member of the Lions Club, the Chamber of Commerce and the RCAF Association.

He is married, with two daughters, five and two years old.

Jean Hammond Never Lost Interest In Job

Supervisor of the Outboard Marine's dictaphone pool is Jean Hammond, a Listowel girl, who came to work for the company in February, 1929, not quite a year after the company was established in Peterborough.

During her employment with Outboard Marine, Miss Hammond has seen the company grow and the, dictaphone staff increase from one (herself) to four at present.

Dictaphones, she says, have been a saving to the company in many ways, and have provided her with a really interesting job since she started with the company. "It's still sort of a game—trying to keep ahead of it," she says. "I've never lost my interest in the job."

Assistant editor of the Outboard Mariner, the company publication issued twice monthly from 1943 to 1949, Miss Hammond was fashion and cooking editor, and once contributed a poem to the Mariner—"my only one," she recalls.

Working at first under the sales department to a great extent, Miss Hammond found her work covering more and more of the firm's operations as the company grew. She received her present appointment in May, 1950.

Miss Hammond was born in Listowel and educated there, attended business college in Stratford, and came from there to the Johnson Motor Co. as a stenographer. A member of George St. United Church, she is president of the members' council of the YWCA, a post she has held for two years.

Her hobby is travel — to Trinidad and Bermuda last Christmas, through Canada on other holidays, and to New York on several occasions.

POPULAR FORM of water transportation in the Kawartha Lakes is the outboard motor. This scene at Stony Lake shows five of a group of boats outfitted with outboards in some sunny summer weather. Over the years, the outboard motor has grown to be immensely popular in this district and it has been estimated that there are more outboards per capita in the Kawarthas than in any other place in Canada.

Sea Horse Symbol Of Johnson Motors

Symbol of the Johnson motor—the Sea Horse—has come a long way since the first one was built in 1929 under that name.

Before then, the Sea Horse was the Water Bug. And when the Sea Horse became the official symbol of the Johnson motor, it was a true-to-life, scaly replica of the sea-going creature.

In the years that have passed since 1929, the Sea Horse has become a streamlined thing and has lost its resemblance to the natural animal.

Now, the Sea Horse is shown as a winged horse, with its head and forequarters rising from the water.

It's not only a symbol of the motor as a motor only—it is known as a symbol of the motor's dependability, speed and endurance.

Distributors 25 Years

One of the oldest distributors of Johnson outboard motors in Canada is Hoffars Limited in Vancouver, B.C. They have been associated with Johnson Motors and Outboard Marine for 25 years.

Founder of the firm, James B. Hoffar, has seen his company grow during these 25 years from a two-man organization to one of the largest marine engine firms on the west coast.

By sales from pushcarts and directly across the counter, the canteen at Outboard Marine sells about 500 cups of coffee daily, serves nearly 700 employees each day.

At spanking clean tables each noon hour, about a quarter of the employees eat lunch. No complete meals are served; the canteen deals in sandwiches, milk, pie, coffee, tarts, and soft drinks.

Ann Millard, who operates the canteen, finds coffee consumption something of a problem. Portable urns carried on the two push carts that tour the plant and office hold 75 cups each, and each one is filled twice in a morning. In addition, about 200 cups are sold across the canteen counter.

No cash sales are transacted by the cart operators. Employees buy cards which are punched as they purchase items.

Employees who work late and want sandwiches and coffee to tide them through the extra hours order in advance from the cafeteria; these orders are filled shortly before 5 p.m.

PRODUCTION ENGINEER Clarence Porter studies a plan of the present factory and considers changes that will be made with erection of an addition to be built on the present parking lot. The new building will be devoted almost entirely to assembly lines, and will necessitate complete revamping of present factory layout.

Billing Clerk To Salesman

Newest of the district sales managers for Outboard Marine is Frank McDonald, 23, whose territory is Northern Ontario. He was appointed to his present position in January of this year.

An employee of the company since he was 16, Frank started in the mailing department in 1946, transferred to billing clerk in the same year and for four years was a parts order clerk. From 1951 until he was made district sales manager he worked as return goods order clerk.

A member of the Junior Chamber of Commerce in Peterborough for a year Frank is married, and has boating as a hobby.

Don Wood Former Holder Canadian Open Seaflea Title

A natural place for a former Canadian outboard racing champion to work is at the Outboard Marine. And that is just where you can find Don Wood, service manager for the company.

Now retired from outboard racing, Don held the Canadian open class seaflea championship in 1930, with the then record speed of 54 miles an hour.

ONE OF ORIGINALS

One of the 17 "old originals" who joined the firm the year (1928) it was established in Peterborough, Don started off in the shop on the assembly line. From there he moved to service repair, then into office work.

Appointed service manager in 1936, he is in charge of the department that looks after all motors brought back to the plant for repairs, the control and distribution of replacement parts, and supervises a dealer service organization that is the largest of its kind in Canada.

A Peterborough boy, Don was educated in the city's public and secondary school system, then attended business college. From business college he went to the Canadian Johnson Motor Co., predecessor in Peterborough of Outboard Marine.

FAIR RIFLE SHOT

In school he played hockey and baseball and "was a fair shot in rifle matches.

Married, with three daughters aged 11, 13, and 15, he divides his summer spare time between his two cottages, at Gold and Pigeon lakes.

"A little private flying" in a Piper two-seater enables him to reach out-of-the way lakes for his fishing expeditions. Hunting —deer and birds—claims his attention in season.

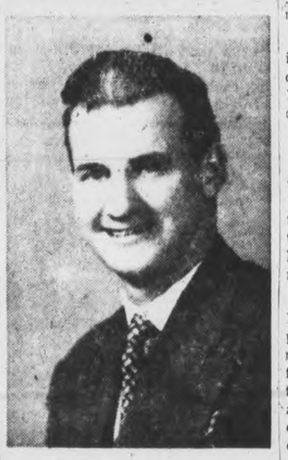
150 Employees Go Annually On Deer Hunt

With what is probably the highest percentage of deer hunters in any plant in the city, Outboard Marine sees about 150 of its employees disappear into the bush for a week each fall.

That's almost one-quarter of the 800-odd employed at the plant, and doesn't include the others who take only a day or two to try their luck in a shorter period.

Starting with President C. B. Neal, interest extends throughout the whole plant. There has been no estimate made of the number of successful hunters.



J. Harrison Sales Manager In Southern Ontario Area

District sales manager for southern Ontario for the Outboard Marine is John Harrison, a 32-year-old native of Toronto who came to work for the company in 1950.

John's working experience has been almost altogether devoted to marine equipment, starting with his employment with Watercraft Equipment Co. in Toronto after his graduation from Runnymede High School.

John started with that company as a mechanic and went "on the road" for them in 1946. Watercraft Equipment was formerly the Ontario distributor for Evinrude motors.

In 1950 he joined Outboard Marine when the company took over distribution of Evinrudes, and was located in North Bay as district sales manager for Northern Ontario until 1951, when he moved to Toronto as manager for Southern Ontario.

JOHN HARRISON

Married in 1943, he and his wife Peggy have two sons, four years and seven months respectively. John's hobbies are model trains, gardening and fishing, and until 1948 he was an active member of the Toronto Canoe Club. Before the war he was a member of the Parkdale Canoe Club.

Southern Ontario, to John, means all the territory south of a rough line between Midland and Kingston, and which includes the Bruce and Niagara peninsulas, Windsor and Toronto areas.

Reg. Reid In 17 Years Had Variety Of Experiences

Reg. Reid, sales manager of the Outboard Marine's industrial division, has packed a variety of working experience into his working career of the past 17 years.

After finishing high school and taking a brief fling at semi-professional lacrosse in Toronto, he went to the mines in northwest Quebec to earn a living.

After three years in Quebec, Reg. moved to the mining country in northern Ontario, concluding his hard-rock experience as assistant mill superintendent at Chesterville Larder Lake gold mines.

He came to Peterborough in 1942 as a fitter at the CGE and before the war ended was assistant foreman on assembly of anti-aircraft guns and Lancaster bomber under-carriage. After the war he was made assistant foreman in the equipment installation department.

REG. REID

FIRST PERSONNEL MANAGER

In 1946 he moved from the CGE to Outboard Marine to work in the production department. After nine months on that job he was appointed the company's first personnel manager, and set up the first personnel department.

His present appointment came in September of 1951 when the sales department was split into two divisions, outboard and industrial.

Keenly interested in dogs, he at one time kept a kennel of cocker spaniels—the Sirocco Kennels—but relinquished it when his job and other interests made increasing demands on his time.

A charter member and former president of the Peterborough Personnel Association, he was once president of the Peterborough Kennel Club. Other interests include his membership in the Peterborough Club, Sales and Advertising Club, and the Chamber of Commerce.

CIVIL DEFENCE

In the civil defence organization, he is assistant director of administration.

Born in Guelph, Reg. was educated in public schools in Stratford and Toronto, and took his high school in Toronto. Captain of several teams in his athletic career, he played basketball and lacrosse, with emphasis on the lacrosse, as well as hockey and baseball. Last lacrosse team he played with was the Toronto Marlboros.

Married, with two sons 14 and 12, Reg. spends his summers at the family cottage on Pigeon lake, where, as he says, he spends a little time fishing and a lot of time "rbaring around the lake" in front of a 25-horsepower outboard.

Modern Outboards Struck Death Blow To Old Quip; Motors Vastly Improved

Anglers and hunters who owned outboard motors built in the late 1920's or early 30's recall with not too much pleasure how difficult their outboards were to start for those early morning jaunts.

The motors' balkiness gave rise to a standard joke for cartoonists and outdoor writers. It is a joke that will be a long time dying.

Modern outboards are striking the death blow to the claim made years ago that air was always blue around an outboard whether it was running or not.

Although the two-cycle principle of operation hasn't changed, there have been improvements beyond former design that any owner of a modern outboard will admit.

MORE EFFICIENT

The ignition system—mainly responsible in past days for tough starting—has been made more efficient. Changes in the magneto accomplished this greater efficiency. Better carburetion has helped, too.

Besides being easier to start, the modern outboard is lighter. The weight-to-horsepower ratio has been improved, as much through the use of aluminum castings as anything else. Cylinder blocks formerly cast of iron in sand molds are now die cast of aluminum.

With the old style of cylinder block, a rough casting was first made which was machined down; die castings are machined too, but have the advantage of initial lighter weight.

SPEED CONTROL

Improvements have been made in speed control. Early outboards had two controls, throttle and spark. Those two are now synchronized, with one lever performing a double operation.

Gear shifts enable the outboard motor owner to let his engine idle without moving the boat and to back away from a wharf. Separate gas tanks permit longer continuous runs without refilling, once a problem on longer trips.

Outboards today are freer from vibration. Old style motors were literally boneshakers; the driver could still feel his arm shaking for some time after the motor was stopped.

The modern outboard will run better at slower speeds, and has better acceleration; a feature that appeals to anglers who like to troll, and to men who use outboards in summer businesses.

The old jokes about outboards will die hard, but present day dependability is providing the death blow.

Chief Engineer Marcel Brier

Chief engineer at Outboard Marine, Marcel Brier, has had a varied working career—with a radio firm, a valve company, a machinery firm and a shoe manufacturer.

In addition, he designed and marketed successfully a model aircraft gas engine, the Merlin Super B.

Seven and a half years with Outboard Marine, Mr. Brier came to Peterborough after being in business for himself making model airplane engines.

Before that he worked for the RCA Victor Co., Jenkins Valves Co., the A. C. Wickman Co. and John Inglis in Toronto, as well as the Bata Shoe Co.

BORN IN BELGIUM

Born in Tamines, Belgium, Mr. Brier spent one year at the Technical School of Engineering in France, and three years at College Saint Nicholas, Paris. After his other employment, he came to the Outboard Marine in 1945.

Mr. Brier's job is to supervise all engineering facilities in the plant, and to eliminate any "bugs" that may appear in products. "Just when you have one all ironed out, something else comes up," he says ruefully.

Married, with three sons, Mr. Brier lists as his hobby voice and music recording on wire, disc and tape. "However, only one of my recorders is working at the moment. I have the amplifiers off the other two," he explained.

Dived Overboard, Returns With Muskie

While fishing on the Trent River a few years ago, a Pennsylvania doctor had an experience that equalled the story of a Florida man who whacked a fish with his boat anchor as it swam by, then dived in and wrestled it into the boat.

Dr. Schaeffer, of Alliquipa, Pa., dived overboard and brought an injured maskinonge to the surface, where Johnny Wykes used a gaff hook to bring the fish into the boat.

It was a brisk afternoon in early fall, and Dr. Schaeffer, Wykes and another Pennsylvanian, Mr. Marshall, were fishing "muskies," a short distance upstream from Villa Trent, where they were holidaying on the shore of the Trent River, just outside Campbellford.

CAUGHT FOUR BASS

Their luck had been strictly indifferent. They had only four small mouth bass to show for three hours of fishing when one of the big fellows hit Wykes' line.

In a few seconds, the three men were all busy trying to prevent the prize catch from getting off the hook. It was a fight to the finish, as the big fish towed the skiff up and down, close to shore for nearly 200 feet.

At first, the "muskie" refused to break surface, but finally, after much careful reeling and playing by Wykes, the fish broke through the surface less than four feet from the boat and drenched the three occupants.

It was evident there was still plenty of fight left in the big fellow, but the three men had had enough of his acquabatics. The next time he leaped out of the water, Dr. Schaeffer was ready with a paddle. He brought the paddle down squarely on the back of the maskinonge which promptly sank. It was discovered that the line had broken. Looking down through the clear water, the men spotted the fish lying in the mud on the bottom.

Without even throwing off his coat, Dr. Schaeffer plunged overboard and came up with the fish in his arms.

He reached the side of the boat and it was an easy mater for Wykes to reach over and flip the 28 pound beauty into the boat. However, it was a more difficult matter to get the doctor back into the boat.

Dr. Schaeffer was dressed in warm clothing intended for fall duck hunting and the entire outfit had filled with water. He is a powerfully built man, and it was all he could do to remain afloat and clamber aboard.

Judge Scorns Use Of Guides When Out Fishing

Canadians who claim that Americans take too many fish should take a leaf from the book of Judge Clarence McGregor, retired Supreme Court bencher and now court referee in Buffalo.

There is no more enthusiastic bass fisherman in all the Land o' Lakes district, nor one who catches more bass— but he puts them back. A regular visitor to Fernleigh Lodge, Judge McGregor is elderly and consequently prefers to do all of his fishing in Long Lake, which the lodge overlooks. He uses both flies and live bait, and takes bass when other veteran anglers are cussing the fish and trotting out new alibis.

It is not unusual for the Judge to catch 20 bass in one day. He weighs each one that looks as if it might top the three pound mark, then carefully returns the fish unharmed to the water. He scorns the use of a guide unless he wants one to operate the outboard motor and cook his shore dinner.

SETTING A BASS FREE

Occasionally, as will happen to the most careful angler, a bass is injured in the catching, injured to the point where it might die. This fish is kept for the shore dinner. The Judge however uses great care in freeing the undersized fish, and if the hook is embedded in the throat of the fish, he takes a knife or a pair of side-cutting pliers and snips the line or gut leader and sets the bass free. As most people know, if the angler uses care and does not cause excessive bleeding, a bass can digest or absorb a fish hook. This is not true of the stainless steel hooks.

Judge McGregor usually comes to the lodge alone, but once in a while his long-time friend and crony, Frank Ernst of Buffalo comes along. They fish together showing all the keen rivalry of expert bass fishermen. Last year the Judge caught a grand total of 143 bass during his two-week vacation at Fernleigh Lodge. He didn't take a single fish home, and less than ten per cent of his catch was eaten, the remainder was returned unharmed to the waters of Long Lake.

His fishing partner, Mr. Ernst follows the same policy with the exception that if he catches an unusually large bass, he will have it frozen and take it back with him for his sister in Buffalo.

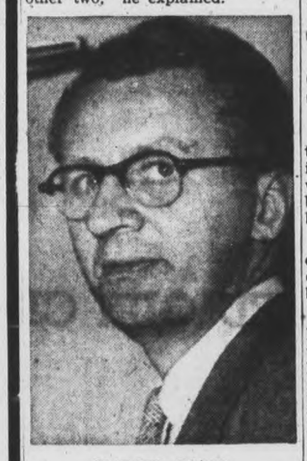
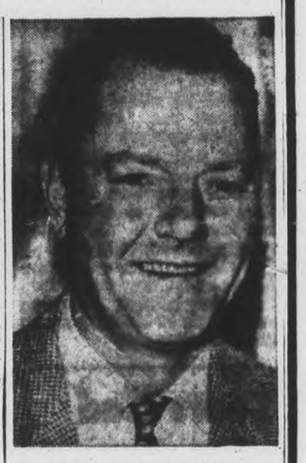
Outboard's Newest Product Sold By Frank Whitehouse



Second of the Outboard Marine's two industrial sales representatives is Frank Whitehouse, who has been with the company eight months, but whose experience in sales goes back 18 years.

Frank's job—calling on Lawn Boy dealers—takes him from coast to coast in Canada selling the Outboard Marine's newest product.



Born in Walsall, Staffordshire, England, Frank came to Canada while still young and took his public and high school education here. A variety of jobs led him to the St. Lawrence Starch Co., with whom he worked for 18 years as sales representative.

In July, 1952, Frank joined the Outboard Marine. Married, with one daughter, he lists hunting and fishing as his hobbies. His fishing specialty is lake trout, and in 1951 he won The Examiner fishing contest with a 24-pounder taken from Drag Lake, Haliburton.

Frank is a member of the Associated Travellers' Club.

George Kennedy In Charge Of Manufacturing Processes

Directly in charge of all manufacturing processes is plant superintendent George Kennedy, a veteran of 24 years with Outboard Marine.

As a part moves from receiving stores to a bank of machines, then to finished materials stores and out again as it is needed, it remains under George Kennedy's watchful eyes.

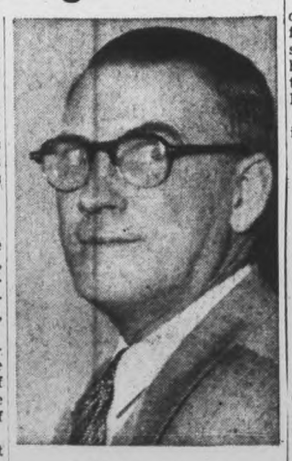
BORN IN MARMORA

George's working experience has taken him from Marmora, where he was born, to Campbellford, where he took his apprenticeship, on to Galt, Collingwood, and finally to Peterborough.

We was educated in Campbellford and started in the machine industry in the machine shop of the Dixon Bridge Works before and during the early stages of The First World War.

From Campbellford, he went to Galt in the tool room on marine engine work with Goldie and McCulloch Co., then to Collingwood with the Collingwood Shipbuilding Co. George left Collingwood in 1920 to come to the William Hamilton Co. plant in Peterborough.

While there and later with the DeLaval Co., he played senior city league hockey, and baseball in the old COBL as a third baseman and pitcher. During his six years at DeLaval, George took a correspondence course in mechanical engineering.



ASSEMBLY FOREMAN

In February, 1929, he moved to the Johnson Motors plant as assembly foreman and within a short time took charge of the company's first machine shop and later the tool room as well. In 1939, he became mechanical superintendent and found during The Second World War, as other supervisors discovered, that there were not enough supervisors. That was the picture in many of Canada's small industires that switched overnight from peacetime products to fulltime war production with the resultant increase in staff.

George received his appointment as plant superintendent on Sept. 1, 1947.

Married to the former Helen Kendrey, George has two sons, one married and working in the city and the other an armament mechanic in the RCAF. Mr. and Mrs. Kennedy have been married since April, 1925.

George lists his hobbies as hunting (deer) and fishing from his cottage at Crowe's Landing on Stony lake. He is a past master of Peterborough Lodge No. 155, and a member of the American Society of Tool Engineers and the American Society of Metals.

The Story of T.P.T.

The Toronto-Peterborough Transport Co., Limited is one of the pioneer companies in the transport industry of Ontario, beginning with one Maxwell truck, and were one of the first operators running East out of Toronto.

The present Company was incorporated in 1928 by the late Roy M. Andrews who was also one of the original motor truck operators, and pioneered the transport industry in the Peterborough district.

From this humble beginning with one truck in 1920, to the modern fleet of one hundred and twenty units now in operation, our expansion and success has paralleled the growth of your city.

A few years ago our Company built a new warehouse and office in Peterborough to handle the expanding volume of freight. In the fall of 1951 we moved into our new Head Office and freight terminal at 1679 O'Connor Drive in Toronto. Here freight arrives both day and night from all over the Province and trained men speedily sort and transfer it for daily delivery to the many points covered by our line. In most cases overnight delivery being effected.

As this commemorative edition of your newspaper goes to press, showing, as it does, the growth of one of your leading industries and one of our valued customers, we would like to take this opportunity of thanking them and our many friends and customers in Peterborough for their continued patronage over twenty-five years.

Buckshot Lake Discovered To Be Fisherman's Dream

Speckled trout fishermen who for years have had to be satisfied with trout ranging from seven to nine inches in length dream of bagging a three or four pounder. Every year some lucky angler finds a trout angler's Utopia and his picture in the newspaper reveals a string of trout that positively enchants the great army of trout addicts. They swear then and there that next season they will duplicate his luck, but when the time comes they either don't know the spots or else can't get away.

Down through the years anglers have been hearing about mammoth speckled trout in the Land o' Lakes section of Ontario. The stories have told of lunkers running to 4 pounds, and many fishermen have been inclined to scoff at such tales. Others have ventured forth, and returned with fresh evidence that the stories are true.

TELLS OWN STORY

Gord Devall, clerk in Brownie's Tackle and Gun Shop, Toronto and an enthusiastic fly fisherman had heard all these tales. He had hoped to some day find out for himself just how true they were, not until he made direct contact with one who had the information was he able to have the greatest trout fishing of his career. But let him tell his own story, and here it is:

Through a friend of mine who, two years ago did business with Bev Woolnough Birch Lodge, I heard whispers of fabulous trout fishing in a lake about two hundred miles from home. One hears this sort of thing often, but the rumors rarely pan out. This one, however, really intrigued me and I made up my mind to get there for the Civic Holiday weekend, August 1950.

Art Walker and myself drove to Kaladar and spent Saturday afternoon trying to locate Buckshot Lake. I finally came across Birch Lodge and Bev. Woolnough who put us straight. All this left us with just one day to prove the lake and get home.

Taking along an outboard motor, we set off through the bush to the lake. Sometime later we stumbled through to what looked like a large pond with very heavy mist settled on it. Bev had told us he had left a boat at that end of the lake about a month ago, but half an hour later we still had not found it. Then Art noticed an oar blade sticking through the mud that edged the foot of the lake. Ten minutes of digging and we got most of the mud and weeds out of the boat. Art got in and I shoved off nearly breaking my neck when I jumped in and hit the slippery floor boards.

We got the motors started just as the mist was clearing and nearly ran down a huge trout which surfaced in front of the boat to look us over. He just lay there while Art and I frantically worked our flies all around him. To this day I will swear that trout had a grin on his face. A few moments later he slowly sank out of sight We drove along the shoreline of the lake, which was overhung with many, many years of dead leaning trees. A lot of these had fallen into the water forming perfect cover for the trout and we were beginning to wonder if any fish would be foolish enough to desert them for a fly.

The sun was directly above us before we got a rise. It hit Art's Par Belle streamer. He missed it. We were about ready to give it up as a lost cause when my Despair nymph which had been popping along the bottom, stopped dead in its track. Remembering the first fish we had seen, I struck very hard, then the trout struck back just as hard and headed for the centre of the lake. He stopped there for a moments, shook his head a few times, then charged for the boat (thank God for the automatic reel). A few minutes later he was in my net. I broke his neck, measured him in at 17½ inches and tossed him in the creel. In the next ten minutes we had caught two more, both on Despairs, fished on the bottom. Then we had to leave, for the drive home would take us six hours.

RETURN FOR OPENING

Throughout the following winter those three trout weighed heavily on my mind and by the time Spring rolled around I was a nervous wreck with a bad case of buck fever. However, I managed to keep calm long enough to round up two of my trusted fishing pals, Bill Taylor and John "Fishface" Finnegan (Art Walker couldn't make it, poor soul) and the equipment for the return trip on the '51 opening weekend. This time we allowed for three days of solid fishing.

We arrived at the camp with far less trouble than our first trip took and after unpacking and checking our tackle and the outboard engine, we bunked down for the night.

I woke up in the morning with the smell of bacon and coffee in my nostrils. Bill Taylor, that wonderful fellow, had started the fire and put on breakfast, yanked me out of bed. Boy, was that floor cold. It took the two of us to haul Fishface from his covers. An hour or so later we were driving up the road, looking for the fire trail which led the way to the lake. I soon spotted it and we parked, then headed in with great expectations.

ONLY 15 INCHERS KEPT

Twenty minutes later Bill and John were setting up fly rods, myself a spinning rod. In a short time two fat speckles had fallen for my halfwave. The fishing was superb. I would make as long a cast as possible and reel in very fast. Three or four trout would follow the lure (we could see them coming for at least 50 feet), then Bill and Finnegan would toss in tiny flatfish and three of us would each be fast to a trout. We soon became quite finicky and released all under 15 inches. I had never seen anything like it. At one stage I deliberately jerked my halfwave from the water before it could be snatched and two trout flashed up to the surface and lay there glaring at me. I lowered my lure towards the water, and before it touched both fish leaped for it. One of them hooked himself and he was soon boated and released. This was unbelievable, but quite true, and both Bill and John will also swear to it.

We kept this sort of thing up until it became tiresome, then started up the outboard and headed back to the camp. The second day was a little slower in action, but before long we had our fill of trout (fish up to four pounds). We kept about 25 fish in the two days. Bill suggested we do some exploring the third day, and after a breakfast of speckled trout fillets, biscuits, and coffee, we went out on Buckshot Lake.

The camp is on Buckshot Lake, and in the lodge there was a map showing a stream flowing into the north end. We drove as far as the outlet without trouble and decided to boat up it very slowly as far as we could, casting the while. We fished it with everything in our books and boxes, but nary a rise, then we rounded a bend and came across a beaver dam. We fished the pool formed by the dam. Still, no luck! After a few hundred yards the stream widened into a small lake. We found a trapper's boat with a dozen very rusted traps in it. Bill decided to stay put, so Fishface and I got into it and motored across the lake. A half hour of casting then Fishface had a terrific strike on a small William's Wabbler. The fish tore round in circles like a huge sunfish, then charged right past the boat, breaking the leader and Finnegan's heart. It was a speckled trout and would have gone well over five pounds. That was the only fish we saw that day and also the last of the trip, as next morning we packed up and headed home.

I went back in August and once more found the fishing wonderful. On this trip four of us had fishing rods. George Reid in our party landed only one speckled trout, but it measured 21 inches long, truly a beautiful trout. We also found the smallmouth bass fishing in Buckshot Lake and around Myer's Cave very good. This is really marvellous fishing country, "a dream come true."

MOTOR COWLINGS are attached to Evinrude outboards as they move along the assembly line, getting nearer to the point where they will leave the line and be packed for shipment to domestic or foreign markets. Nearly 30 per cent of the Outboard Marine's volume goes overseas. —(Parks Studio Photo).

EXPERIENCED MECHANICS in Outboard Marine's service department handle all models of their company's motors. In a smaller room off the service department, dealer-mechanics learn factory methods of repair and maintenance at the annual service school operated by the company. —(Parks Studio Photo).

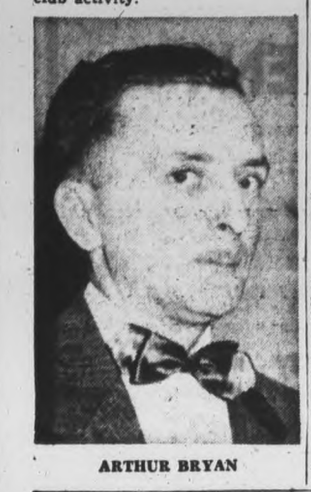
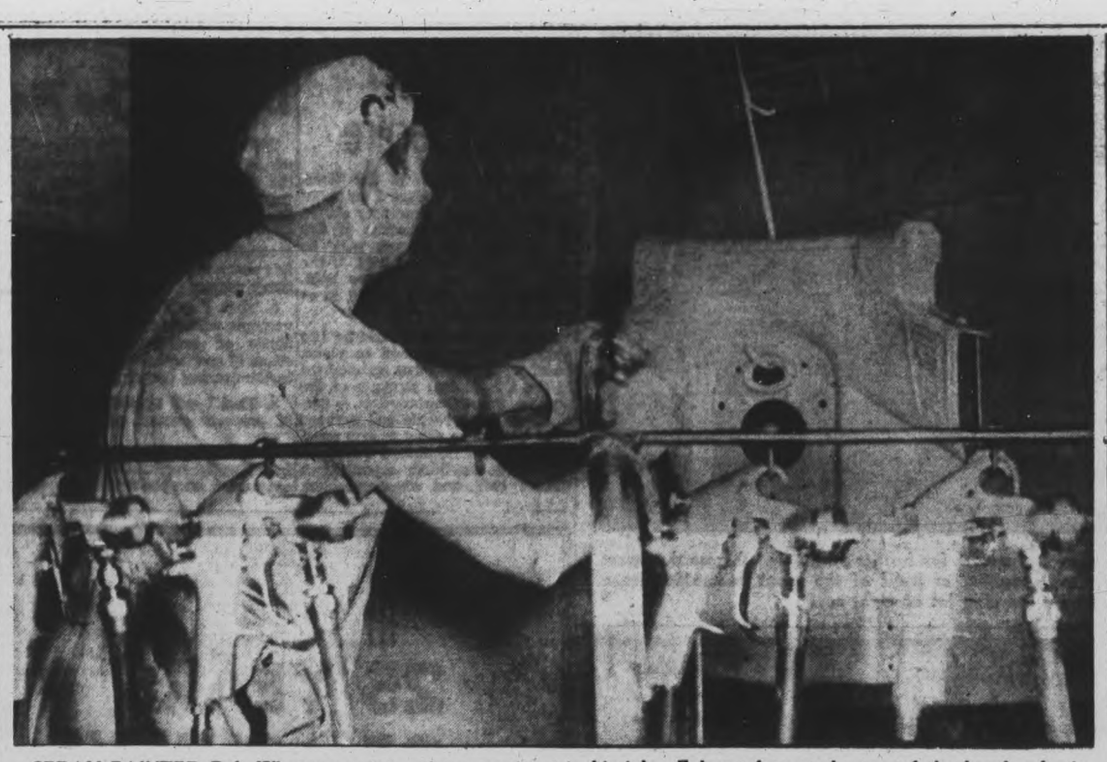
Arthur Bryan Night Boss



Night supervisor of the Outboard Marine's machine shop, Arthur Bryan, 44, has worked for the company for the past 17 years.

Born in Toronto, he was educated there and learned the tool making trade at the Canadian Wire Bound Co. experimental shop, and Massey Harris machine shop, both in Toronto. From Toronto, he came to the DeLaval Co. in Peterborough where he worked until joining the Outboard Marine in 1936.



Art started with the company on engine lathes, worked on turret lathes, gear shapers, grinders, and then was appointed an inspector. Working foreman on nights for six years, he was made night supervisor in 1946.

Married in 1928, Art is the father of two sons, 23 and 17.

Hobbies are boating, golf, and making general improvements to his home and cottage. Art's night work has kept him from club activity.

Rotary Lawn Mower Outboard's Newest Product

Newest product of Outboard Marine is the Lawn-Boy, a rotary mower powered by a two-cycle Iron Horse engine.

Now in production and backed by a coast-to-coast advertising campaign, the Lawn-Boy was the logical step from the new product which preceded it—the two-cycle motor.

Development of the motor came after it was evident that the company could compete with more than moderate success with similar products from the United States. Makers of washing machines, power mowers, and other gas engine powered products sought such a motor.

From there it was but a step to the idea of producing a rotary power mower in the Peterborough plant of Outboad Marine.

Management at the Peterborough plant confided their plans to the parent firm in the United States. The parent firm endorsed the decision, but planned no similar move south of the border.

AHEAD A FULL YEAR

Not long after, however, the U.S. firm bought the RPM Manufacturing Company in Lamar, Missouri, one of the largest manufacturers of rotary power mowers. This step enabled the Peterborough plant to move its plans ahead by a full year.

Decision to produce the Lawn-Boy meant a small host of engineering problems were to be solved. Dies and tools had to be designed and made, but no really extensive re-tooling operation was necessary since the motors were already being produced.

Space had to be set aside for the mower's production line. New equipment was purchased, and in a fairly short time Outboard Marine was ready to make the Lawn-Boy.

Decision to manufacture the mower also meant increasing employment at the plant here, and in the future more employment, although management is not prepared to predict to what extent.

Constructed almost completely of tough aluminum alloy, the Lawn-Boy weighs only 37 pounds, and has features offered by few other power mowers in its class.

Labor-Management Conferences Key To Good Labor Relations

Throughout the 10 years of union existence at Outboard Marine, management-labor relations have been good.

There have been differences, especially at negotiation times, but beyond those differences the Outboard Marine is recognized in the city as one of the best places to work.

One of the main reasons for this is the fact that the company pays the highest wages in the city. Others are the complete life, sickness and surgical group insurance plan, the retirement annuity plan, the vacation and statutory holiday plan and fringe benefits such as support for employee activities, discounts on employee purchases of company products, and operation of an engine loan pool for employees.

Key to harmonious labor relations at the Outboard Marine is the weekly labor-management meeting held in a conference room near the personnel office.

GRIEVANCES HEARD

In these meetings grievances are aired and scotched while they are still small. Both management and labor endorse the weekly meeting as an aid to good relations.

"Our relations with management have been basically good," says Fred Burrett, president of Local 230, Outboard Marine Workers' Union. "There have been differences, but as is always the case, together we have helped to establish good earnings and good working conditions."

Mr. Burrett, who works in the machine shop, is serving his second term as president of the local. He is a former chairman of the grievance and negotiating committees.

Other members of the local's executive committee are Mert Pearse, vice - president, Gord Reynolds, recording secretary, Cec Osborne, financial secretary, and committee members Chris Tighe and Ed Morin.

Before the two present locals were formed—Local 230 for the plant and 231 for office employees—unionized employees at the Outboard Marine were all represented by an independent union—the Independent Outboard Marine Workers Union, which was formed in 1943.

LOCALS OF THE CCL

In 1951, the two present locals applied to the Ontario Labor Relations Board for certification, which was granted. Both are chartered locals of the Canadian Congress of Labor.

Officers of the office local are: George Sedgewick, president; Ray Routley, vice-president, and Jean Weir, secretary-treasurer. About 85 employees are represented in the office bargaining unit.

Company officials emphasize that the firm is not against trade unionism. "On the contrary, we feel that under efficient and reasonable leadership any union can make a valuable contribution to the welfare not only of its members but the company as well by educating its members to eliminate waste, maintain production and eliminate hazards to safety.

The company points to two former union officials who have risen in the company's ranks; one is assistant to the vice-president in charge of manufacturing, the other is a key foreman in the plant.

Harry E. Pinn Works Prairies

A veteran of 18 years service with Outboard Marine is district sales manager Harry E. Pinn, 36, whose territory covers Alberta and Saskatchewan.

Those 18 years were interrupted in the Second World War by a five-year stint in the RCAF, from 1940 to 1945, as an aero engine mechanic.

Born in Toronto, Harry was educated in Peterborough at Queen Alexandra Public School and for three years on the commercial side of PCVS. A correspondence course in salesmanship aided him in his present job.

In 1935 he began his service with the company, and after two years in service stores moved to the office as a parts order clerk.

After returning from RCAF service, he was promoted to assistant service manager, later to district sales manager for northern Ontario and northern Qnebec.

Harry was transferred to his present district in February of this year. His territory covers Alberta, Saskatchewan, the North West Territories, and a part of British Columbia.

Married with one son, he says he is never in one place long enough to belong to clubs or community organizations. His hobbies are curling, hunting, fishing, and boating.

Five Pound Bass Are Rare But Occasionally Caught

When you see an angler bragging that a five-pound small mouth bass is a common occurrence, you can be assured that particular angler doesn't know what he's talking about.

Hundreds of dyed-in-the-wool bass fishermen have angled from boats equipped with outboard motors for upwards of 20 years and only in rare cases can men say they have taken more than one small mouth over the five-pound mark. Sure, I know the bass look big and it's easy to estimate the weight at five pounds before you reach a scales for the exact weight. It's amazing how many times an angler learns that he was optimistic in his assessment of the weight of a fish, especially a small mouth black bass. It takes a whopping big small mouth to push the scale indicator past that five-pound figure.

G. L. Hanna, 12 Claridon Rd., Chardon, Ohio, has fished since he was 10 years old and he's past the 50 mark now. He has caught many beautiful bass, some of them regular sockdologers, that looked as if they were world records before they were hauled into the boat. After the first shock of surprise and excitement, Mr. Hanna, like many another angler, has had to console himself that at best his prize was a four pounder.

He usually spends at least a week at Buckshot Camp, on the lake of the same name in the Land o' Lakes section of eastern Ontario, 90 miles north of Belleville.

BETTER THAN FIVE POUNDS

Last September Hanna was out on the lake with his outboard motor on one of those dull days when the weatherman couldn't quite make up his mind to make it rain or not. He was using frogs, and popping the bait into likely spots along a lily pad and weed bed not far from the sandy beach that is one of the fine features of Buckshot Camp. Fish were not too co-operative and he had taken just two undersized bass and returned them to the lake. Suddenly a bass zoomed out of the depths and snagged the frog, clearing water as it grabbed the bait. Hanna knew he had a lunker on and played the fish carefully. After a few minutes of jam-packed action he netted the fish, and one look was enough, he knew it was a five pounder.

When he arrived back at camp, where there is a grocery store, he popped the fish on to the scales and to his delight discovered he had a 5½-pound fish. That was the largest small mouth taken out of Buckshot lake in 1951 and undoubtedly will win one of the prizes put up by James Bros. Hardware in their annual fish contest for fish taken in the waters of the Land o' Lakes. The fish was 22½ inches long.

Always Keep Boards Secure

When the screws of the floorboards of your outboard runabout or utility become loose they should be tightened immediately. If this is not done, the screws may be pulled so they will not hold. If the loose screw will no longer hold, a fresh screw should be put in at once at a nearby point.

Loose floorboards are bad for two reasons. When fastened in place, floorboards may form an element in the longitudinal strength of the boat. A loose floorboard is a particularly disagreeable and perhaps even dangerous thing to trip over. An unscrewed floorboard will catch on almost anything, especially a trouser cuff, and when uncaught, intentionally or accidentally, will snap back into place with a crack that may trap toes, or fingers that have been doing the untangling.

I Resolve

Before The Fishing Season

That I will protect the rights of my fellow sportsmen by observing the various regulations governing the taking of game and fish, realizing that any excessive or illegal taking on my part lessens the opportunity of others to secure the fair share that rightfully belongs to every citizen.

2. That I will by precept and example endeavour to spread the ideals of conservation and the ethics of sportsmanship with a view to eliminating illegal practices.

3. That I will respect the rights of property owners and seek by courtesy and co-operation to retain the good will of the farmer, so that existing liberties of the sportsman may not be impaired.

4. That I will assume a personal responsibility for the protection of our wild life resources so that my children will be assured of the same recreational privileges that I have enjoyed.

5. That I will encourage all organized effort that has for its object the protection of game and fish and also co-operate with the Department of Lands and Forests to that end.

J. Clint Short Salesman For 23 Years

One of the oldest representatives in years of service is J. C. "Clint" Short district salesmanager for British Columbia.

Clint came with Canadian Johnson Motor Company in September, 1929, from the old Elto sales organization, and originally covered all the Western territory from the lakehead to Vancouver Island.

With steadily increasing business on the Coast, however, it became necessary to divide the territory, thus giving Mr. Short full time for the big Pacific Coast market.

Clint is a dye-in-the-wool trout fisherman, and his collection of rods, flies and other gear is a fisherman's dream.

In the fall he is hunting if time permits, and his home at Caulfield, overlooking the Lion's Gate Bridge, has several interesting trophies as proof of his marksmanship.

OUTBOARD - MOTOR - POWERED aluminum boats, gaining more and more in popularity each year, are shown here racing across an Ontario lake. Aluminum plays its part, too, in the motors themselves, cutting down weight with no loss of strength. Other advantages of aluminum and its alloys are that they will not rust, rot or soak up water.

Aluminum Weight-Saving Feature Outboard Products

Aluminum die castings in the Iron Horse engines produced by Outboard Marine make possible lightweight products that will deliver a maximum of power.

In the 16-pound engine, there are 11 pounds of aluminum die castings, all cast in the Peterborough plant.

Parts die cast are the cylinder, flywheel, upper and lower crankcase, pistons, carburetor, housing, and connecting rods and caps.

Use of aluminum alloy die castings helped designers plan a simple, effective unit with only three major moving parts. In the way, many potential maintenance costs were eliminated by cutting down wear and tear on engine parts.

The weight-saving feature of aluminum alloys is also evident in the Lawn-Boy the rotary lawnmower powered by a two-cycle Iron Horse engine. By combining in an extensive use of aluminum in the engine with its use in the mower proper Outboard Marine has kept the mower's weight down to 35 pounds.

Outboard Motor Has Found Indispensable Place In Life

When an invention becomes a real part of life, you can be sure it's a success. The outboard motor has found an indispensable place in life—in peace and war—in sports and in commerce. Today, both our people and our country have come to depend on the sturdy, versatile outboard.

Take the yacht, for example—that symbol of wealth once enjoyed only by millionaires. Today, the economy of an outboard craft, makes it available to many millions of people. And, of course, the development of the 25-horsepower Johnson and Evinrude motors with gearshift and reverse has made it possible to power even cruisers as adequately as with an inboard motor.

Most responsible for its great popularity, however, are the two chief features of the outboard motor—versatility and portability. The versatile outboard may be used in waters that are far too shallow or snagged for inboard craft and the outboard cruiser can be carried conveniently from one body of water to another behind the family car. These are the reasons that yachting is now a sport within reach of the millions instead of just the millionaires!

Then, there's fishing, both sporting and commercial. What angler today wants to, or will, row five miles across a lake to his favorite fishing hole . . . and five miles back? Instead, he uses an economical, lightweight, convenient outboard to skim across the lake and saves his energy for fighting that big bass.

The commercial fishing industry early recognized the value of the outboard motor. Today, annual production of 5,000,000,000 pounds of fish and seafood by many thousands of commercial fishermen is maintained in great part by 160,000 outboard powered boats.

Fishing is the largest commercial use of outboard motors but it is only one of more than 100 specialized commercial uses. These range from conservation work and trapping to operating boat liveries and spraying contaminated waters for mosquito control. There are more than 700,000 outboard motors in commercial operation annually.

AID IN WARTIME

The outboard motor has made its contribution to Canada in wartime, too. In World War II, Allied troops used dependable outboard assault boats to land on enemy beachheads. Downed flyers found outboards perfect to power rubber life rafts, and outboard-powered pontoon ferries were used to move artillery and tanks into battle.

During the crucial crossing of the Rhine river by U.S. troops in 1945, outboard motors served as power for landing craft. Said one Army officer: "Certainly no combat engineer would have tackled a major river crossing unless he could have depended on the husky capacity of outboard motors . . ."

The outboard has served in peacetime disasters too. During the Kansas River Valley and Winnipeg floods of 1951, disaster workers realized that some type of craft was needed that could be shuttled quickly from one area to another and operate in debris-laden waters. Quickly concluding that the outboard motor would be ideal, they sent out a hurry-up call to all outboard owners. Later, a radio station official in Kansas City, Missouri, said that the "flexibility and dependability of the 'put-puts' saved hundreds of lives. I would say that at least 90 per cent of the hundreds evacuated were taken out by small outboards."

These are just a few of the ways in which the outboard motor has served . . . from beaches to beachheads.

Handling Outboard During High Seas

For those fishermen who brave large lakes or sounds in small boats or skiffs from 12 to 14 feet in length, this hint might keep them out of trouble. If someday you happen to find yourself far out from shore and a strong wind comes up, whipping the otherwise calm waters into a seething mass of whitecaps and rolling waves, don't open the motor throttle to full speed and try to beat the storm. Remain calm and throttle the motor to about half speed and head into the wind. You will get in slower, but safer, and you'll ship far less water.

Riding Out A Squall When In Small Boat

If caught in open water in a small boat when a sudden squall arises, do the following things: First, keep the bow of the boat headed into the wind, even if it means winding up on the other end of the bay or lake. Second, have every person in the boat sit in the bottom and crouch low to cut wind resistence and keep the center of gravity low. Third, regardless of the size of the boat, always have a life preserver for every passenger. And, fourth, if the boat does capsize stay with it until you are blown in to land or help arrives. Very rarely does a boat sink.

Site Was Chosen In Toronto When Peterboro' Appeared

Celebrating its silver anniversary, Outboard, Marine and Manufacturing Co. in Peterborough can look back on two-and-a-half decades of successful and steady growth.

Twenty-five years ago, with a small factory and smaller office, and only 17 employees, Outboard Marine opened its Peterborough plant. From a tiny organization, it has grown to a company employing about 800 with dealers across Canada and customers throughout the world.

In the early days, when the company was the Canadian Johnson Motor Co., it occupied a single building, part of which served as office space, part as the factory.

But it was only through the foresight of a group of Peterborough men that the plant was established here. One of these was Roland Denne, then mayor of the city, and another was a former Peterborough boy, Senator Frank O'Connor.

In 1928, the Johnson Motor Co. had decided to establish its plant in Toronto. That large city had all the advantages of good transportation, a large labor force to draw from, and almost everything to offer any manufacturer.

FEDERAL MINISTER HELPED

The group of Peterborough men called on the Hon. Peter Heenan, then minister of labor in the federal government, and broght him to Toronto.

In various ways they persuaded the representatives of the Johnson Motor Co. to take just one more look at Peterborough before settling on Toronto as their factory site. In Peterborough they met the heads of local industry, aldermen and others.

The manufacturers told of the advantages of Peterborough as an industrial town, the Hon. Mr. Heenan had previously recited them at length, too, and Mayor Denne pleaded the city's case as only he could do.

The Johnson Motor Co.'s representatives agreed to take that empty Henry Hope plant on Monaghan Road.

The factory at that time was owned by the Raybestos Co., but they agreed to sell to Johnson Motors, and the die was cast — Johnson Motors would establish their plant in Peterborough.

Today, company officials say they are more than glad that they chose Peterborough. In reciprocation, the city is happy that Johnson Motors decided to settle here and become part of the city's industrial family.

PLANT AVAILABLE

Hugh M. Campbell, former president of Outboard Marine, says that it wasn't so much that the city was the centre of a large lake district that influenced the company's decision, but the fact that a plant was available.

The Henry Hope plant, which made steel window sash for industrial and office buildings, had gone out of business in 1920. After that, briefly, Birmingham Motors had occupied the factory with hopes of manufacturing automobiles. These hopes never materialized, and the plant became vacant once more.

So it was that in 1928, Johnson Motors came to Peterborough. First man hired for the factory was a superintendent—Hy Wood, now vice-president in charge of manufacturing. Mr. Campbell at the time was vice-president and general manager.

Originally the plant was established to make motors for the Canadian market and to export them within the British Empire. Barely well established before depression years arrived, the company found few export markets open to them in those lean years, and turned to concentrate heavily on the domestic market.

The bad years of the depression were as hard on Johnson Motors as on anyone else. Before 1936, however, the first faint signs of prosperity gave the company an opportunity to expand. Office space doubled and more machinery, to speed production, entered the plant.

Then came 1936, and with it a change in name for the company. In the United States, the parent firm merged with Evinrude and Elto motor companies to form Outboard Marine and Manufacturing Co.

Until that year the parent firm had been located in South Bend, Indiana. Soon after it moved its headquarters and plant to Milwaukee, where Evinrude and Elto plants were already located.

OFFICE SPACE DOUBLED

Between 1936 and the war years, office space in the Peterborough plant doubled, then doubled again. Plant space was doubled as well.

Reasons for the growth of the Peterborough factory were twofold. Instead of one the company manufactured three lines of outboard motors, as well as industrial gasoline motors, and forest fire pumps. Besides that, demand for these motors grew as economies across the world righted themselves.

Then came the war, ending in its prime the peacetime boom that had returned prosperity to much of the world.

Almost overnight, the company shut down its outboard and industrial motor production. As C. B. Neal, president, puts it:

"We went and camped on the government's doorstep and waited to see what we could do. There was little organization for war work at the time and then it took weeks to do what was later accomplished in hours."

The machinery for awarding defence contracts wasn't ready, but finally, armed with orders for precision work, Outboard Marine officials returned to Peterborough to start tooling up for the war effort.

READIED FOR PRECISION WORK

Precision work was nothing new for Outboard Marine. Their peacetime experience in manufacturing outboard motors had readied them for what the government now asked them to produce.

With many of the staff working a seven-day week engineers, production men, tool designers and tool and die makers began the tooling up process. Speedily they set up the production lines needed, devised and produced the necessary tools and dies, and set the Outboard Marine's war machinery in operation.

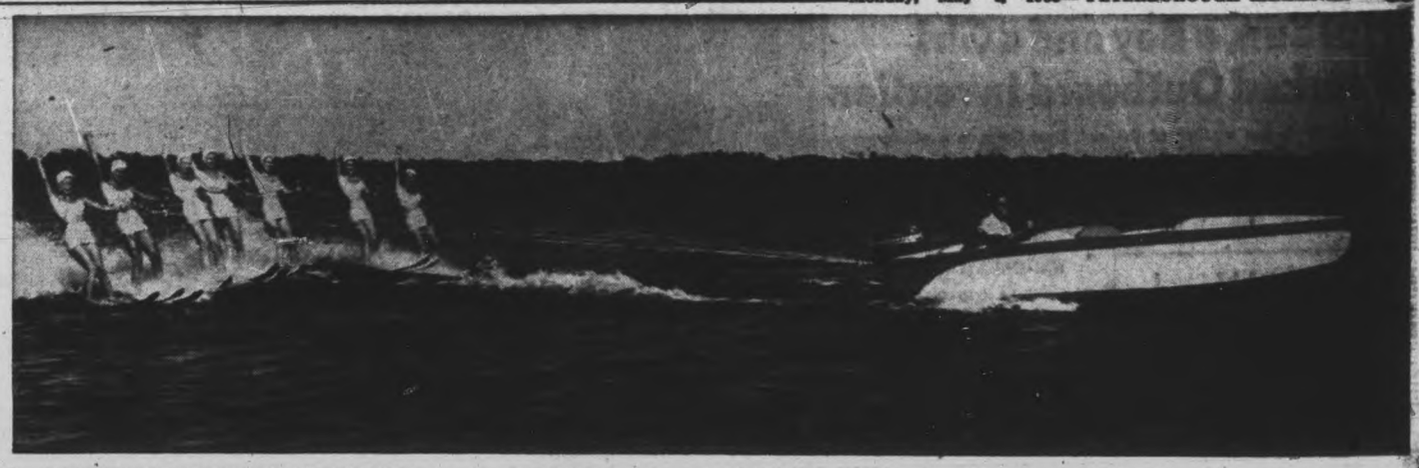
The products were varied, but all along the line of precision work. Generators for the army's signal corps, parts for aircraft and for anti-aircraft guns, fine work for the navy, all flowed out of the Monaghan Road plant in steadily growing volume.

It was a war effort lauded by the country's defence officials, and of which the company itself is rightly proud.

Then the war ended, and behind the rejoicing, plans began to grow out of wartime ideas for peacetime production. The tooling up process had to start again. But with the return of peace, production could start again on much-wanted products, the outboard motor, fractional horsepower industrial engines, and others.

Post-war design changed the look of the outboard that had barely started to change before the war. Flywheels were hidden by aluminum alloy housings, rewind starters became standard equipment on all models.

New products were not long in the planning. One, introduced this year, is the gas-motor-powered Lawn-Boy, a rotary lawnmower that uses the two-cycle Iron Horse, also a new product.



The Lawn-Boy was an idea developed by executives of the Peterborough plant. The parent U.S. firm was interested, but at first made no decision to enter the field. Soon after, however, they bought a power mower factory in the U.S. and started in the power mower business.

What the future holds in the way of new products and improved products is still in the minds of the designers and engineers.

Plant expansion is planned—a new building will be erected soon on the corner of Romaine St. and Monaghan Rd. This will accommodate two outboard motor assembly lines to replace the one now in use.

An increasing export market would get a shot in the arm should the British pound be made freely convertible. This would open Commonwealth markets—Britain, New Zealand and Australia—that are at present closed to Outboard Marine by import controls.

The future seems to hold greater possibilities for Outboard Marine's expansion and introduction of new products. Company officials have been cautiously optimistic in their predictions, but they do foresee a brighter future.

POWERFUL EVINRUDE OUTBOARDS can haul a big load, as shown in this photo. One boat and one Evinrude Bigtwin pull seven lovely water skiers across this lake.

Dark Lures On Dark Days Upset Fishing Tradition

An Indian guide is loathe to give away trade secrets but here's one that a lot of fishermen, particularly the boys who hit the lake trout will disagree with. At least that's what the writer thinks, so the next time you are cussin' the weather, the fish and all your wife's relations, just because nothing will bite, remember this little bit of backwoods fishlore.

It is generally believed—in fact I have never heard it disputed that on a bright day a fisherman should use a dark or dull colored spoon and on a dull day use a bright spoon. That sounds logical doesn't it—but according to my Indian friend who prefers to remain anonymous—it's all cockeyed.

This veteran fisherman, who has fished and guided so long that he has seen three generations of Americans come and go says: "On a bright day use bright shiny lures, and on a dark day or for night trolling use dark lures, the darker the better."

Read that again—if it upsets you as much as it did me, you will probably think a bit before you put it into effect. That was my reaction too. Fact is, for quite some time I felt I was being led up the garden path, and that a certain Indian was having a good chuckle with his cronies.

A DULL EVENING

One night on Rice lake the pickerel had all gone home, or to a convention or maybe were having a house-warming, anyway they were not biting. I tossed every bait,—all bright ones of course, at them. No dice; couldn't snare anything except the odd patch of floating weeds. Then suddenly I remembered the advice of the old Indian. Here, if ever was a chance to give that theory the acid test.

I didn't tell my son who was up front in the boat, just what I was going to do —to me it was still a gag. I rummaged in the tackle box, using a flashlight until I found a Toronto Dobbler style lake trout bait, dull copper both sides. No more glint from a can of lamp black, then I carefully snapped it on, and tossed it overboaord, and proceeded to enjoy a cigarette.

The old reel spun merrily as the line paid out, and so help me, I hadn't 40 feet out before there was a distinct "tug." I could scarcely credit it, yet I tigntened the line gingerly, and knew at once I had something on. It was a seven pound pickerel. In short order I caught five more, while my son fishing along with me caugth nothing. He was using a bright June bug spinner with a gob of worms, a top-ranking pickerel lure.

Now I know the skeptics will say "Oh he just hit a shoal of Pickerel and they would bite anything" . . . Nuts— why didn't they bite at the June bug.

VISIBILITY IN THE WATER

Brother— you can take it from me . . . . there's something in it. To straighten everyone out a bit more. I recall giving the Indian an argument over his bait theory several months before and over a steaming cup of cofcoffee and a tasty bacon sandwich, he launched into a discourse on visibility in the water. He did say that fish have white bellies so that others of their species after a meal cannot see them against the clear sky, then he added that their backs were dark so that it was not easy to spot them from above. In other words nature had given the fish protective coloration on both sides. Then he went on to say that an a dark day a fish looking up could see a dark object but not a bright one. You figure it out. I'm satisfied this old timer has something on the ball.

Remove Spark Plugs Pour Oil In Cylinders

A good tip on storing your outboard motor for the winter is to remove the spark plugs and pour a small amount of light oil in each cylinder, then give the motors a few pulls to make sure all surfaces are coated. Replace the plugs and store the motor, hanging up in a warm dry place.

Preserving Line Tip

Bait casting lines are subject to great wear close to where the line is attached to the leader because that portion of the line is subject to chaffing in going through the tip guide. Before tying the line to the leader or lure, run about eighteen inches of the line through a cake of beeswax. The coating of wax definitely prevents chaffing and adds longer life to the line.

Social And Athletic Association Plays Big Part In Life Of Employee

Athletic teams sponsored by Outboard Marine's Social and Athletic Association have made a good name for themselves in city softball and hockey leagues.

But the Social and Athletic Association reaches farther into the employees' life than that. The annual picnic and Christmas tree party are sponsored by the association, and to sick and bereaved employees and employees' families flowers and fruit are sent.

Girls' and men's softball teams, along with the juvenile hockey team, are the major teams sponsored by the company through the association.

Since 1943, the girls' softball team has been in the Peterborough Women's Softball League. In three of those years—1945, 1946 and 1951—they captured the city intermediate championship, and in 1952 reached the semi-finals for the city senior championship.

Three years before the girls started as a team, the men's fastball team was one of the original teams in the Industrial Softball League, which has since disbanded, and is now in the City Fastball League, formed just last year.

The men's team was eliminated in the finals for the city championship. Coaches are Archie Wall and Harold White. Coaches of the girls' team have been Albert Watkins, 1943-50, assisted by Al Metcalfe, Lionel Lipsett and George Reynolds in that time, and Reg Leether in 1951-52, assisted by George Reynolds.

CITY BANTAM TITLE

The Outboard Marine hockey team started in the season of 1948-49, when they won the city bantam championship and went to the provincial finals, losing only in the last playoff game to Crowland. Since their formation, they have won the city championship every year.

In 1949-50, they made the district playoffs and were eliminated by Oshawa. That year they were in midget class, one step up in age from bantam.

Through the 1950-51 season they continued in midget play and were defeated in the semi-finals for the province by St. Catharines. As juveniles for the first time in 1951-52 season, they reached the semi-finals again but were defeated by Toronto Downviews.

Continuing in juvenile for the hockey season just past, they were eliminated in the first round of district playoffs, again by Oshawa.

Three of the boys who started with the club at its formation—Bud McDougall, Lawrence Ball and Jerry Frizzelle—were invited to the April training school held by Detroit Red Wings.

At the annual picnic, the association arranges for free refreshment, rides, prizes, etc., and entertainment. At the annual Christmas tree party, free candies and toys are given to all employees' children up to the age of 16. More than 850 attended the 1952 Christmas tree.

Officers of the association are: Jack Ferren, president; Pete Meridew and Del Jackman, vice-presidents; Guy Menard, treasurer, and Corinne Coones, secretary.

FRESH AIR, OPEN WATER and a fast outboard motor driven boat make up a pleasant prescription for a happy holiday. For boating itself or for fishing, the outboard motor adds zest to any holiday.

Hot Sun, a Boy and a Girl Sparked Outboard Invention

Necessity is the mother of invention but the outboard motor owes its inception to the beating sun of an August day in 1906.

That was the day a young gallant named Ole Evinrude took his girl, Bess Cary, to a picnic on an island in a lake near Milwaukee. When Bess suggested that some ice cream would taste well, Ole gallantly rowed two and a half miles to shore and started back with a quart.

ICE CREAM MELTED

The return trip was long and hard, however, and the ice cream soon melted. Ole began to wonder why someone couldn't invent a motor that could propel a small row boat.

Some two years later, he took it upon himself to do just that and, in spite of Bess' likening the first outboard to a coffee grinder, Ole set out to manufacture and sell motors.

Bess, who was now Mrs. Evinrude, entered the advertising field and a flood of orders came with the first ad: "Don't Row! Thow the Oars Away!" By 1911, business had boomed to such an extent that in one day, Evinrude Motors hired six stenographers and 100 workmen.

RE-ENTERED IN 1921

Bess and Ole sold their interests in the company in 1913 but in 1921 Ole re-entered the field, forming a new company, the Evinrude Light Twin Outboard or "Elto." Eventually Evinrude and Elto and a third firm, Lockwood Motor Company was added to form the Outboard Motors Corporation. Ole became president and his son Ralph took over upon his death in 1934.

Another addition was later made to the firm; an addition which had just as colorful a background. Three brothers Lou, Harry and Clarence founded a school of aviation in Terre Haute, Indiana, after having flown the first successful American monoplane in 1912, powered with a home-made V engine.

The inventive brothers turned next to building a very successful bicycle motor which was later adapted to propel boats.

In late 1921, they startled the boating world with a revolutionary two-cylinder outboard motor that weighed only 35 pounds because it was made largely of aluminum alloys. Another of the brothers' "firsts" was a motor that could be pivoted completely around so that it would propel a boat in reverse.

Soon after founding a plant at Waukegan, Illinois, the brothers came out with a line now world-famous, "The Sea Horse," and later one of the great names of the outboard motor industry, Johnson, merged with Outboard Motors, to create Outboard Marine and Manufacturing Company.

Norman Wood In Charge Reducing Costs

Plant supervisor in charge of methods improvement and cost reduction at Outboard Marine is Norman W. Wood, 38, who has been 10 years with the company.

Born in Peterborough, Norm graduated from Peterborough Vocational School, and served his apprenticeship as a toolmaker at CGE. For a time, he worked as a toolmaker at General Motors,

NORMAN W. WOOD

Oshawa, and in 1942 came to Outboard Marine as a toolmaker.

During the war years, he was instructor in machine shop practice at the vocational school for for night school classes.

After four years as a toolmaker, Norm was transferred to tool inspection at Outboard Marine in 1946, a year later moving to the post of supervisor of routing and tool inspection, tool production and machine load.

He was promoted to his present post last December.

Secretary of the Peterborough Archery Club, Norm is also an ardent angler. He is entertainment chairman of the local chapter of the American Society of Tool Engineers.

Norm is married with two sons, 3 and three weeks old.

LEAVING A TRAIL of flying spray, these water skiers, with tow ropes snugly hugging the backs of their necks, careen across open water on their holidays. A Johnson outboard motor supplies power to haul them on their wet journey.

Protecting Your Outboard During Winter Months

Unless you happen to be one of the fortunate few who follow the sun around looking for warmer climates, you'll pack away all the fishing gear and vacation equipment every fall and dream during the winter of the big ones you caught and the bigger ones that got away.

Before you carefully pack your equipment in moth balls, it's a good idea to make sure your faithful outboard is properly prepared for storage. A few precautions taken at this time means you can start the spring season without a worry.

Like your automobile, proper care will lengthen the life of your outboard motor, and give you many miles of trouble-free fishing and boating.

First of all, take your outboard to your nearest dealer. He looks after the storage problem, and has the facilities to do the job properly, carefully checking and servicing every part.

SOME OF THE THINGS TO DO

So that you'll know—here are some of the things he will do:

1. He drains all gasoline and oil from the gas tank and carburetor.
2. Flushes the cooling system thoroughly, draining all water from the cooling system.
3. Drains and refills the gear housing according to factory specifications.
4. Injects a small amount of registered lubricating oil into each cylinder, and by revolving the flywheel slowly, spreads the oil over the cylinder walls, pistons and piston rings for protection against possible rust.

Cleans the entire outside of the motor, wiping it with an oily rag to prevent damage from rust or corrosion during storage.

6. Stores the motor in a dry place, well protected from moisture, dust and freezing.

WHEN SPRING COMES

When spring rolls around, before you call for the motor, he gets it in tip top running condition.

1. He wipes off the protective oil film, and any dust which might have accumulated.
2. Removes spark plugs and injects a small amount of oil into the cylinders.
3. Checks spark plugs for cracked porcelains, dirty or corroded points and checks the gap between electrodes.
4. Checks and cleans contact points—if badly pitted or burnt will replace.
5. Removes and cleans out strainer and or sediment bowl, also gasoline. Flushes and cleans gas tanks.
6. Tightens all outside screws and nuts.
7. Rechecks gear housing for lubrication.
8. Replaces shear or drive pin if condition warrants.
9. Adjusts friction of tilt-up co-pilot and steering handle.
10. Tests motor on test tank.

If he finds any broken or unserviceable parts, affecting the operation of the motor, he will contact you for permission to replace. He'll instruct you on the proper operation and care of the motor. In other words—next spring you'll have an outboard that starts like a charm, and sings along wherever your gypsy blood may steer your course. It's the power that gets you there, and brings you home! You'll be the first to agree it's a smart sportsman who makes sure his outboard motor does not deteriorate while laid up during the winter months.

Remote Control In Shifting Gears

One of the new products in Outboard Marine's line of goods is the remote control device for shifting gears and controlling speed on larger outboards.

Motors of 10 horsepower and up are fitted with special leads to which the remote control device may be attached. It is designed for outboard boats which are outfitted with steering gear forward of the motor.

On Straight Course During Heavy Fog

Tie a fairly long rope to the stern of your boat the next time you are caught in a heavy fog, like one so often does during duck hunting season. The rope will make a track on the water, which will be surprisingly helpful in keeping you straight on your course and will prevent going around in circles or off your course. When you start out, set your eye, then watch your rope make a straight trail.

How To Transport Outboard In Car

When transporting an outboard motor in your car, inflate an old inner tube and tie it together in several places. Then lay the motor on the inner tube. It will have a fine cushion and will not shift. Nothing on the motor will be bent, small parts will be protected and you do not have to worry when travelling over rough roadways.

Cleaning Fouled Plug

Spark plug fouling may be corrected by cleaning the plug or blowing it out with an air hose. When out on the lake, where it is difficult to attempt either of these, spark plug fouling may sometimes be corrected by removing the spark plug wire and holding the tip of it about one-quarter of an inch from the plug while the motor is firing. Naturally this can only be done with twin-cylinder or large motors. Spark plugs in smaller motors will, however, practically never foul from oil, if the proper proportions of lubricant and gasoline are used.

Morning On Lake Followed By Enjoyable Shore Dinner

Shore Dinners! That phrase recurs so often in the fishing tales of guides that it seems to rate right at the top of vacation essentials.

"Then we put into shore for dinner," they tell you, and if you have ever built a fire and got the hamper out after a morning on the water, you know what happens.

Dinner hampers are packed at the tourists' hotel, and the guide arrives with his boat and outboard all tuned up for the day's fishing about 7 or 8 o'clock—perhaps earlier—in the morning. If at least one bass or lunge has been snagged for dinner a day well begun will be considerably improved.

Frying, broiling or baking and boiling are the three common ways of cooking, and frying is the most popular.

Albert Taylor, of Curve Lake, veteran guide, described some of the shore dinners he has helped prepare. They generally include bacon, eggs, potatoes and other vegetables as desired.

To fry a bass or lunge, he said: "First you clean the fish thoroughly and scale it; cut him in two down the centre and then into pieces about four inches long. Have a hot fire, and bacon and butter in the pan. Be sure it is hot. Don't use lard, and you must have butter, because it is the butter that makes it brown. Put your pieces of fish in the hot grease. Maybe you first wrap it in flour or ground-up crackers. Some people use corn meal. I put pepper and salt on the fish before it goes in the pan. The butter in the pan comes up about three-quarters of the thickness of the fish. And you let it cook. Probably you take a look at it to see if it is getting brown, but don't turn it over more than once. It may take 20 minutes altogether to cook the fish and have it ready for the plates.

BROILING A BASS

"Suppose you want to broil a bass, it doesn't matter, bass or lunge. First clean it well, but leave the scales and head on. After you have it ready, you have a fire of hot coals waiting. You spread out the fish, sprinkle with salt and pepper, spread butter on the white meat, and lay the fish on your wire grid. Watch it until the white meat comes to a brown, and be sure to keep enough butter on it. The skin and head come off easily when you have it cooked."

"The hotter the fire the better for frying," Percy Nicholls, of Bobcaygeon, advises. "I use a piece of butter at least as big as a hen's egg. With a good fire and hot grease, the fish cooks quickly, and it is well done, but it doesn't get soggy from grease as is likely to happen if the fire isn't snappy enough. Give the handle of the pan a little shake or two to make sure the pieces of fish won't burn. Lift up one end of a piece to see how the browning is coming along, or you can try it with a fork; and then turn the piece over, and it is always best not to turn them more than the once.

"Most of the tourists I have been with wanted the fish fried, and boy, how they go for it. Another party asked me to try broiling. I had a special griddle I had made. I clean out the fish, leaving on head and scales. I took a generous lot of butter — nearly half a pound — and spread it inside after I had sliced a lemon up and put it in. Then I sew him up, and put him on the broiler. The butter cooks through the fish, the lemon gives it a nice flavor. Leave it there perhaps 25 minutes; and when he's done just nick around the neck and the skin peels off with the head. It might need half an hour for cooking. That's something you have to judge for yourself."

How many men have pulled into shore with their outboard with a ravenous craving for food, and waded into one of those dinners, not wisely but too well, finished it off with coffee and possibly a cigarette. By that time it may be, interest in the afternoon's fishing has temporarily taken wings, and he finds a bank above the lake where the breeze blows, and dragging the cap down over his eyes he snoozes in the sun. Yes, for an hour; then a swim, and back to the boat like a new man. What a life!

2 District Soldiers Killed In Heavy Chinese Attack

"Model Mother" Kills 4 Children, Takes Own Life

TORONTO (CP)—A 36-year-old "model mother" and her four young children were gassed to death early today. Police said it was a murder and suicide. Found dead in their third floor bedroom were Mrs. Adele Holmes and her four children, Nancy, 7, Irene, 6, Linda, 4, and Kenneth, 3. Firemen, who worked over the victims with inhalators for 25 minutes, said Mrs. Holmes and Linda were found sprawled on the floor and the other children were in their beds.

The father, William, a truck driver, discovered the bodies when he arrived home from work at 2 a. m. to find four gas jets open on the stove. He smashed windows and applied artificial respiration.

NO APPARENT MOTIVE

Police said there was no apparent motive for the slayings. They said a note was found beside the woman's body. It was addressed to the father and read:

"I love you too much to spoil your life. Sell out and go away. You now have a chance to get out of your debt. I'm sorry to do this Bill. I hope God will forgive me."

Mr. Holmes, who was taken to his mother's home and given a sedative, told police his wife was "a model mother."

"We didn't have a serious quarrel in our 10 years of marriage," he said. "We were a happy family with a comfortable home."

He added:

SEEMED HAPPY

"My wife seemed quite happy. I telephoned her at 7 p. m. and we talked for a while about renting the basement apartment to someone. After that I don't know what happened to her."

Police said they believe Mrs. Holmes cooked supper for herself and the children, then washed the dishes and put them away. She apparently put three of the children to bed, did Linda's hair up in curls, turned the gas on and took Linda up to the bedroom.

Charge Reds Stall On Talks, Doubt Sincerity

PANMUNJOM — (CP) — The United Nations command today accused the Communists of throwing up a smoke screen in the Korean truce talks and said Red stalling "casts serious doubts on their sincerity." Lt.-Gen William K. Harrison insisted the Allies could not agree to Red demands that 48,000 prisoners who have spurned Communism be shipped to a neutral Asian custodian. "Many would destroy themselves rather than submit to removal from Korea," the senior Allied delegate said.

The Reds refused again at a 59-minute session to commit themselves on a neutral custodian.

The most Red truce delegates would say was that Allied nomination of Pakistan as a neutral caretaker was "worth welcoming." They also insisted that both sides first work out the functions of the neutral before deciding on the country itself.

JUST SMOKE SCREEN

Harrison, senior Allied delegate, told reporters that the functions would apply equally to any neutral and said of the Red demand:

"That is merely a negotiating smoke screen. That's all in the world it is."

North Korean Gen. Nam Il, chief Red negotiator, said the "important question" is whether unwilling prisoners shall be sent to a neutral state or shall be turned over to the neutral custodian in Korea.

Nam asked the UN command to clarify these three points:

1. What steps would the Allies take to remove military control over the prisoners?

2. How would the UN command at the same time enable the neutral to take control of the PoWs?

3. How would it maintain order in the prison camps?

Harrison replied such matters could be quickly solved once agreement was reached on the neutral nation.

BECOME SUSPICIOUS

He added:

"Your evasion of the matter of agreeing on the neutral merely causes suspicions as to your motives . . . Unless you are prepared to accept one of the nominees or nominate a different one, we have nothing further to say."

Nam replied:

"Since your side has nominated Pakistan to serve as a neutral nation we consider that your side has the obligation to make it clear just how to request Pakistan to accomplish its functions . . .

"We would still like to know the concrete views of your side on the questions I have put forward."

Harrison replied: "I have nothing further to say."

Ask Gov't Consider Checkoff Federal Law

OTTAWA (CP)—With one member dissenting, the Commons today asked the government to consider making the union dues checkoff a part of federal legislation.

Jean Francois Pouliot (L—Temiscouata) opposed adoption of a recommendation from the Commons industrial relations committee that had been studying the checkoff question.

"There are enough checkoffs now," he said. "This is a checkoff to give huge salaries to union leaders."

The committee had endorsed the principle of the voluntary revocable checkoff as proposed in a bill put before the House by Stanley Knowles (CCF—Winnipeg North Centre). Under this type of checkoff, employers deduct union dues when requested by employees.

200 Press Search For Missing Boys

TORONTO (CP) — Two hundred police and citizens searched a big area of downtown Toronto today for three small brothers who vanished on their way to a candy store five days ago.

Police said they have no clues to the whereabouts of Paul Quigley, 5, Howard, 7, and Henry, 10. They searched old buildings vacant lots, railway boxcars and some private homes Monday night without success.

The boys disappeared Friday from their home near Dundas and Church streets. The family had moved into the house Thursday. A search of their old neighborhood indicated the boys may have slept in their former home Friday.

Inspector Sam Johnston, who directed a night-long search of the area, said:

"I don't know how they could be in the area, unless they're in someone's home."

Grain Firms Settle Strike

VANCOUVER (CP)—R. H. Tupper, spokesman for grain companies whose five elevators have been tied up by a strike for 79 days said today the companies whose five elevators have been tied up by a strike for 79 days said today the companies have agreed to union proposals to end the walkout.

Roy Milner, federal transport controller who has been here two weeks in connection with the dispute, also confirmed the break in the deadlock.

Grain company officials in Calgary and Winnipeg had agreed to settlement proposals on a basis of a 7½-cent hourly increase and the institution of a system of a job classification at the elevators.

The 250 members of the Grain Workers Union (CIO) will still have to vote on the terms, agreed upon by their negotiating committee.

Will Sit Saturday To Aid Prorogation

OTTAWA (CP)—The last big sign went up today to indicate that sittings of this 21st Parliament since Confederation are in their dying hours.

Prime Minister St. Laurent gave notice that in the drive for prorogation the House of Commons will be asked to sit Saturday in an effort to wind up business. The House has been sitting three times a day five days a week for a couple of weeks.

Saturday sittings come only at the very end of a session and this is to be the last session of the Parliament elected in 1949.

SEVENTH ANNUAL KIWANIS MUSIC FESTIVAL opened today at St. Peter's Auditorium; it will last until May 12 and 750 entries are expected. A few minutes before the Grade 5 verse-speaking class started committee chairman N. O. Armstrong is shown encouraging two young contestants, Betty Northey of R.R. 4, Peterborough and Gerard Begley of 280 Thomas St.; with them is adjudicator Miss Irene Fairclough, L.R.C.T., of Hamilton who has judged at former Kiwanis music festivals in the city.

French Guessing As Vietminh Fails To Strike

HANOI, Indo-China (AP)—Communist-led Vietminh leaders reinforced their troops encircling two stoutly defended French-Laotian posts in the mountains north of Luangprabang today. But the invaders continued to shy clear of any direct assault upon the royal Laotian capital.

The Vietminh added new troops to forces surrounding the defending posts at Muongkhoua, 90 miles north of Luangprabang, and Muongsai, 30 miles northwest of the royal capital. Both posts have beaten off repeated attacks during the last three weeks.

French and Laotian patrols, meanwhile, were unable to make any contact with Vietminh forces in the area north and east of Luangprabang, where the Communist-led rebels have been concentrated, and around the Plaine des Jarres, 70 miles east of Luangprabang. The French hope to entice the Reds into battle at these two heavily-defended points but so far the Vietminh has not obliged.

NO FURTHER MOVEMENTS

No further enemy movements were reported south of Xiengkhouang, either. It was from Xiengkhouang, 90 miles southeast of Luangprabang, that the Vietminh Monday sent an invasion spearhead driving south toward Thailand and Vientiane, administrative-government seat of Laos. Advance units of this force captured a French-Loatian defence post at Thathom, 25 miles southeast of Xiengkhouang on the road to the Mekong river border with Thailand.

The two beleaguered defence posts north of Luangprabang have held up strong rebel units attempting to move southward to reinforce Vietminh forces in the mountains overlooking the royal capital.

Heaviest Red Bombardment

IN KOREA (AP)—A picture of confused, bitter fighting—punctuated by the heaviest Red bombardment of Canadian troops in the Korean war—was recounted today by men of the Canadian 25th Brigade who stood off a 750-to-1,000 man Chinese attack early Sunday. The Canadians told of hand-to-hand fighting, and of one soldier who took a burp gun from a Chinese and beat him to death with it. C Company of the 3rd battalion of the Royal Canadian Regiment bore the brunt of the attack. Describing the enemy fire, Capt. M. J. Mullin, commander of C Company, of 72 Grafton street, Charlottetown, P.E.I., said, "I have never experienced shell fire such as this. During the last war any of the enemy bombardments I experienced were peanuts to this one. They must have even fired the kitchen sink."

When attacking, the Reds did not wait for their own barrage to lift. Chinese troops swarmed up the slopes around the forward positions through their own gunfire. Canadian troops in fire trenches opened up on the Chinese but were unable to stop the onrush.

HAD GRENADES

The first wave of Chinese to hit the positions seemed to carry no firearms but were well supplied with hand grenades which they threw in trenches and bunkers.

Lieut. Ed Hollyer of Toronto, commander of one of the forward platoons, said he saw two green flares and a red one come from the Chinese lines which seemed to signal the start of the whole affair.

"As soon as they appeared," he said, "all hell broke loose. Enemy shells and mortar bombs rained down on us by the hundreds."

The Chinese first appeared on the right of his position in what he thought were small numbers. Then a large force stormed up the sides of the slope into his positions.

"They seemed to lack organization," Hollyer said, "and were running all over the place in little bunches. When I saw they were all over my position I returned to the command post and called Commonwealth artillery right down on my own position."

Hollyer had the artillery bombard his position for approximately 15 minutes, knowing that the Election In Mid-August Forecast From Ottawa

By CLYDE BLACKBURN

OTTAWA (CP)—A hot weather general election campaign with voting in mid-August was forecast here Monday in a buzz of fresh rumors on Parliament Hill. There was nothing new in the August speculation but the Ottawa Journal, with an eight-column front page headline, said it had learned "from indisputable sources" that the voting would be either Monday, Aug. 10 or Monday, Aug. 17.

There was no official confirmation or comment and none was expected because Prime Minister St. Laurent must go through certain formalities before he can let the public know his decision.

However, the opinion was widely held among observers on Parliament Hill that there were good grounds for belief in August dates—the choice between the two depending on the time Mr. St. Laurent can get back from his coronation trip to London.

SHORT CAMPAIGN

This would mean a short campaign and less cost to the candidates but it would put a heavy strain on the prime minister and most of his cabinet colleagues.

For a long time the widely accepted, likely voting month was October, either Oct. 5 or Oct. 19.

But it is reported the rank and file of the party have argued for an early August date to shorten the campaign and lighten the drain on finances.

The August voting would mean that the 71-year-old prime minister would have to hurry back from the Coronation, and the Commonwealth Conference which follows it, and plunge almost immediately into the campaign.

The routine procedure is for the prime minister to ask the governor-general to dissolve Parliament and sign an order in council fixing the voting date and the dates for nominations which vary in certain constituencies.

He then would advise Nelson Castonguay, chief electoral officer, to set the machinery in motion. What the prime minister may tell his close advisers and colleagues before his official procedure is for himself to decide.

Say Chinese Leads Vietminh

TAIPEH, Formosa (AP)—Nationalist Chinese intelligence reports said today a Chinese Red general has taken command of Communist Vietminh forces in Indo-China and 12,000 Chinese troops have joined the rebels.

The reports said the Red general was accompanied by Russian advisers.

Earlier today, a Chinese Nationalist news agency said 100,000 Chinese Red veterans of the Korean war had been shifted to South China not far from the Indo-China border.

The same reports claimed that part of Red China's ground, naval and air units on Hainan Island is ready to intervene in Indo-China if needed.

The reports added that 2,300 "Free Thai" troops have been organized by Chinese Reds and that Vietminh forces, aided by Chinese labor gangs, have built strong defences in the Langson-Caobang area of northern Viet Nam.

Third Victim Of Fire Dies

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—Mrs. Mae Delfino, 45, died in hospital Monday, bringing to three the number of lives lost in a fire which swept through a rooming house on Stanley street Sunday.

Mrs. Mary Ann Hill, 80, mother of Mrs. Delfino died Sunday and Mrs. Maria Zorka, about 35, died in hospital earlier Monday.

All three suffered severe burns when trapped on the second floor of the flame-swept building.

A double funeral will be held for the mother and daughter.

Meanwhile the fire-gutted 10-room house is under lock and key pending arrival of investigators from the Ontario fire marshal's office.

Fire chief R. C. McRonald said he has called in provincial authorities as a "precautionary measure" to probe the pre-dawn blaze which forced five other occupants into the street.

Bus Drivers Approve Strike Action 60-21

KITCHENER (CP)—Bus drivers and maintenance workers, seeking recognition of Division 304 of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees (CIO-CCL) by the Kitchener public utilities commission, approved strike action Monday night by a vote of 60 to 21.

Elroy Ronson, national vice-president of the CBRE who announced the vote results, said a strike committee will meet Thursday to discuss further action.

The local is seeking recognition as bargaining agent for employees of the transportation department of the utilities commission. In the event of a strike, transportation facilities in the Kitchener-Waterloo area would be tied up.

'Mad Major' Shocks Londoners

Flies Under 12 Bridges Clears Thames By Few Feet

LONDON (AP)—A skylarking pilot flew under 12 bridges in the heart of London today by skimming his light plane just a few feet above the waves of the Thames.

Members of Parliament, bus drivers, tugboat captains and stenographers gasped in amazement as the single-engine plane zoomed under bridge after bridge. Policemen patrolling the bridges were thunderstruck.

Other men have flown under London's bridges before, but their efforts usually were limited to one or two spans. This was the works—a grand slam.

A movie photographer also was aboard the plane, which has a wing span of 36 feet.

Amateur photographer Douglas McKenzie, who took pictures along the bank, said he knew about the plan to make the flight.

He said the plane was piloted by Maj. Christopher Draper and the movie photographer who accompanied him was Joe Matthews.

"Draper is not a young man. He really pulled this stunt off to show British people there is a lot of life in the old ones yet."

Friends said Draper is about 60 years old. They described the flight as a "stunt of despair" arising out of his trouble at finding a new job.

Draper flew during the First World War and won the nickname of "The Mad Major."

A driver of one of London's big buses halted his vehicle in the middle of Westminster bridge as the plane approached.

He and his passengers almost fell out the windows as the plane roared under the bridge. "Coo, I never," the bus driver said. He was at a loss to say more.

All of the bridges are low. It is a tight fit for a plane under any of their arches. The clearance at Westminster bridge at low water is 40 feet.

Burleigh Youth New At Front; 3rd Man Wounded

Three Peterborough district soldiers are reported as casualties by the Department of National Defence in the heavy weekend fighting between Canadian troops in Korea and the Chinese. Two of the men are dead and the other is listed as wounded in action. A 22-year-old Mount Pleasant soldier, Pte. Russell Leon Gardiner has been reported killed in action. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Gardiner of Mount Pleasant were informed Monday night.

A Burleigh Falls soldier, Pte. Langford Spencley, 23, has been killed in action in Korea. His father, Jess Spencley, received news by telegram Monday.

Pte. Albert Joseph Bradimore, 21, of Lindsay, is reported wounded in the left knee and right arm.

PTE. RUSSELL GARDINER

His mother, Mrs. James Cook of 5 Durham Street, Lindsay, received the telegram Monday night also.

Pte. Spencley had been at the front only a short time. His father said he received a letter a week ago Monday in which his son said he was moving up to the front and wouldn't be writing home often.

Rookie Policeman Forced To Kill Man

MACKAYVILLE, Que. (CP)—A 27-year-old man, described by police as "troublesome ever since we've known him," was shot and killed by a rookie policeman Monday night.

Andre Jean was felled by a bullet from the revolver of Constable Rene Charron who later said he shot in self defence as Jean backed him against a door, a large meat knife in his hand.

Chief Emile De Wys, of this small community across the St. Lawrence river from Montreal, said the shooting came about this way:

Jean threatened his father with the knife. The father ran to the police station, a few blocks away, for help. He returned home with Constables Charron and Marcel Labelle to find the house a shambles, Jean still knife in hand.

Constable Labelle left to get reinforcements, Charron remaining. Charron said Jean threatened him with the knife, ignored repeated warnings and shot into the floor. He said he shot when Jean had him backed against a door.

Carbon Dioxide Making World's Climate Milder

WASHINGTON (AP) — Carbon dioxide gas from increased industrial activity has enhanced a "greenhouse" effect in the upper atmosphere, tending to make the world's climate warmer, a Johns Hopkins physicist reported today.

Dr. Gilbert Plass told the annual meeting of the American Geophysical Union that the "large increase in industrial activity during the present century is discharging so much carbon dioxide into the atmosphere that the average temperature is rising at the rate of 1½ degree per century."

He said that approximately 2,000,000,000 tons of coal and oil are burned each year, forming 6,000,000,000 tons of carbon dioxide that are added to the atmosphere.

Carbon dioxide would be present in the atmosphere even if there were no industrial discharge of the gas, he added, because, for one thing, every living creature exhales carbon dioxide after breathing in oxygen.

AT HIGHER TEMPERATURE

"The carbon dioxide in the air acts in the same manner as the glass in a greenhouse," Dr. Plass said. "It prevents the escape of the long-wavelength heat radiation from the ground, but is transparent to the short-wavelength radiation that comes directly from the sun.

"Thus the carbon dioxide blanket keeps the ground at an appreciably higher temperature than it would have if no carbon dioxide were present. An increase in the carbon dioxide amount allows the blanket to hold in more heat near the earth's surface."

Aside from enhancing the "greenhouse" effect, said Dr. Plass, carbon dioxide from stepped-up industrial activity presumably is having an additional effect upon world climate in this way:

Canadian PoWs On Way Home

TOKYO (CP)—A United States military transport plane carrying Canada's two repatriated prisoners of war left Tokyo tonight for Honolulu and the U.S. mainland.

The Canadians are L. Cpl Paul Dugal of Quebec City and Pte. Arthur J. Baker of Montreal, both members of the Royal 22nd Regiment.

The plane also carried 12 liberated Americans and six Colombians.

The plane is due in Honolulu in about 17 hours. After the men are given medical checkups they will be flown to Travis air force base near San Francisco.

'Situation Critical'—Eisenhower

Requests Five Billions For Foreign Aid

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Eisenhower administration asked Congress today for $5,828,000,000 in new foreign aid funds as a necessary defence against "the Soviet threat."

President Eisenhower made the main plea in a special message to the lawmakers. The tailed presentation was made by a parade of cabinet members, backed by Gen. Omar Bradley, chairman of the joint chiefs of staff, in testimony to a joint session of the Senate foreign relations and House of Representatives foreign affairs committees.

"The basic purpose of this program is simply the long-term security of the United States living in the shadow of the Soviet threat," the presidential message said.

He noted that the bulk of the money — approximately $5,250,000,000—is set up for military weapons and direct support "to the defence efforts of our friends and allies." He called that division "a measure of the peril in which free nations continue to live."

CAN'T AFFORD TO RELAX

"The blunt, sober truth is that we cannot afford to relax our defences until we have seen clear, unmistakable evidence of genuinely peaceful purpose on the part of the Soviet Union," Eisenhower said.

The sum is $1,772,000,000 less than President Truman recommended in his farewell budget for the same period, the fiscal year beginning July 1.

In breaking down the cost of the program State Secretary Dulles disclosed most of the funds will continue to go to build up North Atlantic Treaty allies.

But he said the new administration also would step up military and economic help to Communist-threatened Indo-China and Formosa, and provide money for weapons for Japan's internal security and defence.

About $400,000,000 is set aside for Indo-China, he said, to help the French thwart increasing Communist pressure in the southeast Asia nation.

"We must materially strengthen the effectiveness of Chinese forces on Formosa. Defence measures in Formosa are closely dependent on economic stability, and it is also important that we assist directly in improving economic conditions.

"If Formosa can be made militarily strong and economically healthy it may exercise a powerful attraction upon the enslaved peoples of Asia."

"We should not disguise from ourselves the fact that the international situation is critical," he said. "For example, all of southeast Asia is today in great peril and if Indo-China should be lost, there would be a chain reaction throughout the Far East and south Asia."

Dulles contended many countries which in the past were friendly toward the United States "are beginning to wonder whether the centre of power has not shifted from Washington to Moscow."

Ottawa Warned All Not Well Before Lunam Hurt

OTTAWA (CP)—A month before Harvey Lunam was injured in a car accident, the government began getting storm signals about the financial status of his construction firm in Regina, documents tabled Monday in the House of Commons indicated. They also showed that Mr. Lunam says the government itself is mainly to blame for this financial situation by tying him up for months through delays in delivering equipment for an Indian hospital he was building at Fort Qu'Appelle, Sask.

Works Minister Fournier told the Commons April 6 that until Mr. Lunam was injured Jan. 8, 1952, his department "never had received from anyone a claim" against the contractor. Monday's documents showed that on Jan. 5, 1952, Gustave Brault, chief architect in Mr. Fournier's department, wrote Mr. Lunam saying that his plumbing sub-contractors, Trail Plumbing and Heating Ltd., had complained of receiving no payments for their work and saying that they should be paid $9,324.

SIMILAR CLAIMS

A month earlier, the citizenship department's Indian affairs branch had started to get similar claims from sub-contractors on Lunam contracts which subsequently were cancelled in April 1952. These, however, were outside Mr. Fournier's department and outside the battle which has raged in the Commons concerning the responsibility of the government towards sub-contractors whom John Diefenbaker (PC—Lake Centre) says are owed $239,000 by Mr. Lunam.

Donald Fleming (PC—Toronto Eglinton) asked that the tabled documents be sent to the public accounts committee for study. Mr. Fournier said he has no objection.

The documents are the latest episode in a clash that has already led indirectly to the resignation of Austin Dewar as Liberal member of Parliament for the riding of Qu'Appelle. He said he exchanged cheques with Mr. Lunam but denied that he made any profit out of the contractor or the government. The clash originated over Mr. Diefenbaker's claims that the government should do something for the sub-contractors left holding the bag when the Lunam firm folded up on three government contracts with the public works department.

SATISFACTORY JOBS

The information tabled showed that the Lunam firm since 1948 has carried out one $8,000 contract for the health department and two $10,500 contracts for the agriculture department, apparently to their satisfaction.

The Indian affairs branch, however, cancelled four contracts in April, 1952, for failure to meet time schedules and to do satisfactory work. The original contracts for schools and houses on Saskatchewan reserves totalled $173,000 and Mr. Lunam was paid $141,000 on these. Outstanding claims by sub-contractors against him total $63,000. The Indian branch estimated it would cost $39,000 to complete the work.

It was on those contracts that the first storm signals started coming. On Dec. 8, 1951, a lumber company said it was owing $9,000 but this was eventually cleared up. Nine days later a plumbing and heating firm wrote that the Lunam company owed them $13,000.

The contracts with the public works department were originally eight in number. All but three—worth $689,000—the hospital at Fort Qu'Appelle and public buildings there and at Regina—were completed.

GETTING CLAIMS

On Jan. 30 the department was informed that Mr. Lunam had been in a car accident that would keep him in hospital for some months. On Feb. 20, the department told him it was constantly getting claims from sub-contractors and that no more payments would go forward to him until the claimants were satisfied.

Six days later Mr. Lunam wrote to say that he had had to shut down on the three projects because of his injury, his lack of finances and his inability to arrange for credit. The chief reason for his financial state, he said, was delay in finishing the hospital and "this was largely due to the failure of the Indian health services" to supply equipment. This delay had eventually reached eight months.

2nd Conviction Drunk Driving

Sylvester Delaire, 30, 467 Elm St., was sentenced to one month in jail today when he pleaded guilty to a second offence of drunk driving.

OPP Constable John Cawood gave evidence that when he was patrolling Highway 7, west of Peterborough, February 12 at 4 p.m., he noticed a car parked on the highway with three men in it.

He went over and asked Delaire, who was behind the wheel, if there was any trouble but before he could stop him Delaire drove on.

PC Cawood turned the cruiser around and followed the car which was weaving from side to side at between 15 and 20 miles an hour. A number of children returning from school ran from the highway into a lane to avoid being hit.

Magistrate W. R. Philp did not order impounding of the car which Delaire said belonged to a friend. Delaire admitted having no license.

Appoint William Dunn To Mediate Dispute

OSHAWA (CP)—William Dunn of Toronto has been appointed by the Ontario department of labor to mediate a dispute between Fittings Ltd. of Oshawa and Local 1817 of the United Steelworkers of America (CIO-CCL).

Mediation was ordered when the company and union were unable to reach agreement on a new contract after three meetings last month. The present wage contract expired April 30.

The company has offered to renew the present contract but union officials want the company to increase the basic wage rate to $1.50 an hour.

Eisenhower Saves U.S. Taxpayers $1,000

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Eisenhower will fly to New York Thursday night in a commercial airliner, saving U. S. taxpayers nearly $1,000.

He is doing this, the White House announced Monday, because his trip is purely political—to address two $100-a-plate Republican dinners the same night—and the President doesn't think it would be fair to travel in the taxpayers' plane, the Columbine.

No other president, as far as the White House knows, has flown on a commercial airline while in office.

Dock Leader Shot To Death On Waterfront

HOBOKEN, N.J. (AP)—A dock leader was shot to death Monday night in Hoboken's second waterfront slaying within two years.

A single bullet in the head proved fatal to Francis Kelly, who was to have started work today as a waterfront hiring boss at a newly-re-opened pier.

The shooting was another in a series of violent incidents on the New York-New Jersey waterfront, being investigated by a United States Senate committee.

Kelly, about 40, was found at a street intersection just around the corner from his home—a little more than two blocks from police headquarters.

TO BE HIRING BOSS

He belonged to local 867, International Longshoremen's Association (AFL) and was to have been hiring boss at the pier for the Jarka Corporation, one of the largest stevedoring firms in the world.

Police said Kelly had brushes with the law "a long time ago."

Two years ago, Nunzio Aluotto, a longshoreman, was shot to death in the doorway of local 867. Three brothers — William, Francis and Michael Murphy—have been indicted on murder charges in connection with the killing.

A few weeks before Aluotto was slain, a hand grenade was hurled into the Jersey City headquarters of ILA local 1247 on the eve of a union election. Five longshoremen were hurt.

Mau Mau Kills Two Policemen

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP)—Two native policemen seeking members of the anti-white Mau Mau society were killed Monday night as they surrounded a house here in which a suspect was hiding. A third policeman was wounded in the firing, which came from a neighboring house.

Police said the wanted man and all occupants of nearby houses were arrested.

The latest casualties brought to an estimated 679 the total of pro-British natives killed since a state of emergency was declared in the East African colony last October because of the Mau Mau terrorist campaign.

Thirteen whites also have been murdered, while the British-led troops and police claim to have killed at least 595 Mau Maus.

Dowling Charges Swift's Trying To Break Union

WINNIPEG (CP)—F. W. Dowling of Toronto, district director of the United Packinghouse Workers of America (CIO-CCL), said Monday Swift Canadian Company appears to be "determined to smash our organization."

He addressed about 100 delegates to the eighth Canadian conference of the UPWA.

Such tactics as "police violence, injunctions, court cases and. . . a threat to close (the Stratford, Ont., plant) and move to another community unless striking employees accept company terms" foreshadow "strong employer opposition to any improvements in our contracts this year," he said.

This is clearly underlined, Mr. Dowling said, by the present strikes at Stratford and at the Quaker Oats mills at Peterborough and Saskatoon.

NO GOOD REASON

"In none of these strikes is there any logical reason. The unions were only requesting the companies, who are among the most wealthy and powerful in the world, to meet conditions already established by their competitors."

At Stratford, said Mr. Dowling, Swift's refusal to accept a majority report of a conciliation board, "which thought they were recommending a settlement the company would accept without question, leads us to suspect the company is not anxious to get a reasonable settlement.

"The requested wage increase would have left the wages far below what is paid in the immediate community of Stratford."

Burleigh Youth

Pte. Spencley, one of 11 children, joined the army last August, and took his training at Kingston and Petawawa. He was home last, his father said, for a 10-day leave at Christmas.

Sometime early in January, he embarked for Korea, with the 3rd Battalion of the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry.

TRAINED IN JAPAN

After training in Japan for a time, Pte. Spencley went to Korea where he was held in a reserve area for a time, waiting rotation to the front. His father believes he moved up about the time the last group of veterans returned.

Before joining the army last August, Pte. Spencley worked in the Burleigh area at lumbering and other outside jobs. He attended Young's Point elementary school and completed Grade 8 work.

His mother, the former Grace Meek, died six years ago. Surviving are his father, seven brothers and three sisters: Mrs. Bernice Wagner, Apsley, Mrs. Emma Bolton of Burleigh, Mrs. Jean Bolton of Burleigh, William and Ernest at home, Fred of Peterborough, Gordon of Toronto, Albert of Leaside, George of Burleigh, and Earl in the RCAF at Camp Borden.

His father has worked for the past 30 years on the Burleigh Falls estate of Gordon K. Fraser, MP.

Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Gardiner, parents of Pte. Gardiner, first received news Monday night that their soldier son was missing in action, believed killed. Later, his death was confirmed.

OVERSEAS A YEAR

Pte. Gardiner has been overseas a year and was ready to come home. His unit, the 3rd Battalion RCRs, had only recently gone back into the line after being out on rest.

He was educated in Mount Pleasant and, after leaving schpol, he worked on a number of farms in the district. Before joining the Canadian Army he lived for a time in Peterborough and was employed by the Quaker Oats Co.

Pte. Gardiner, a bachelor, enlisted November 9, 1951, and after training in Canada he went to Korea in May, 1952. Recently he wrote a letter to his parents telling them he was going back into the line.

Because of his year-long service, Mr. and Mrs. Gardiner believed this would be his last action before coming home.

Besides his parents, he leaves a brother, Ronald, of 662 Elgin St., Peterborough, and two sisters, Mrs. Carmen Bell, of Bridgenorth, and Frances, at home.

HIS FIRST TRIP TO FRONT

The wounded man, Pte. Bradimore, joined the RCR in October, 1952. He left for Japan at the beginning of March and this action in which he was hit in the left knee and irght arm occurred during his first trip to front-line duty.

Pte. Bradimore was born and educated in Lindsay and he was a former employee of McMullen's Dairy, Regent Street.

It is building up on the top side of clouds, preventing them from losing heat as rapidly as they formerly did—thus causing small differences in temperature between the top and bottom layers of the clouds. Such small temperature diffferences prevent the formation of strong "convection currents" necessary for the onset of rainfal.

Less rainfall would come from such clouds and probably the averaged amount of cloud cover over the planet would also decrease.

Psychologist To Speak On Mental Health

This is mental health week in Canada.

To mark the occasion the Peterborough branch of the Canadian Mental Health Association have invited a guest speaker Wednesday night, Isabel M. Laird, professor of psychlogy, Queen's University.

The local branch, under the presidency of Dr. T. E. Currier, have only been in existence a few months. Their purpose is to educate the public in ways of life that will anticipate and prevent the "inner conflicts" and strains that lead to mental disorders.

The meeting of the Peterborough branch will be at 3 p.m. in Queen Mary auditorium. The public is invited.

Nearly four in every 1,000 Canadians are patients in a mental hospital, according to statistics published by the Canadian Mental Health Assocation who have designated May 3-9 as mental health week. Two more of the 1,000 should be in mental hospitals and are waiting to get in or have not been diagnosed, and another 60 of the 1,000 need psychiatric treatment.

1950 there were 66 mental hospitals in Canada to look after 44,981 patients. Actually, 55,358 — a surplus of nearly 11,000 patients —were crowded in the hospitals. Since the 1950 figures were published other hospitals have been opened but the problem of accommodation remains acute.

A shortage of nurses and other staff personnel for mental hospitals is also reported.

A principal reason for the increase of mental ailments in Canada is the stepped-up tempo of life involved in the change of Canada from an agricultural to an industrial economy. Overcrowding in cities, with the ensuing emotional and nervous strains, aggravate the situation.

Chinese were the only people above the ground to get hurt. He stopped the concentration of fire only when he could no longer hear the Chinese running about.

After the bombardment, Hollyer and other soldiers went out of the command post and started a tour of the area. They could find no other Canadians but themselves, a signaler and a medical assistant. They were ordered to withdraw.

The 81st field regiment, Royal Canadian Artillery, fired more than 5,000 shells in support of their besieged countrymen. Eyewitnesses reported the firing was superb, but that the gunners were not without casualties.

At first light, when the Chinese were retreating, the gunners sent up an observation plane that directed the fire of one battery.

After one particular bombardment of the retreating Communists, at least 12 bodies were counted.

NO TOTAL ESTIMATE

There was no total estimate of enemy losses. Reports indicated they were large. While the battle still was raging the Chinese were picking up their dead and wounded as soon as they were hit and getting them out of the way.

One report stated one of the trenches of the forward position of the Royal Canadian Regiment was filled to the top with moaning Chinese and that others were dragging them out and rolling them down the hill to waiting comrades. Canadian casualties are not yet fully confirmed.

During the night there were other probes on the Commonwealth fornt. The 3rd Battalion of the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry suffered casualties when the Chinese made a diversionary thrust at one of their positions. They were also subjected to heavy enemy fire.

Brig. Jean Allard, commander of the 25th brigade, said "splendid defensive fire support was given to the Royal Canadian Regiment by both the PPCLI and 1st battalion, the King's Regiment as well as the 81st field regiment and other Commonwealth artillery units."

"By standing firm and keeping the lines of communications open the Royal Canadian Regiment made possible much of the destruction of the enemy by artillery fire."

Watchman's Tip Leads To Arrest Of Wire Thief

Quick thinking on the part of Robert Wheeler, night watchman at the hydro generating plant on Water Street North resulted in the recovery of about $100 worth of stolen wire and apprehension of Arthur McGrath, 27, 887 McKellar Street, at Newtonville early today.

McGrath pleaded guilty to theft of the wire today and was sentenced to five months definite and three months indefinite in the Ontario Reformatory. He pleaded not guilty to a further charge of driving while his licence was suspended. Hearing of the second charge will take place Wednesday.

ASKED TO HELP

Detective D. J. Farthing gave evidence in police court today that Wheeler had found McGrath in the yard of the generating plant about 11:30 p.m. Monday. McGrath asked him to help lift a roll of wire into his car. He said he had bought the wire previously.

Wheeler noticed some other wire in the back of the car and, giving the excuse that he had other work to do, went in and called the police.

A province-wide alarm was sent out with a description of McGrath's car. As a result, McGrath was arrested at Newtonville by Provincial Police.

In his possession were three lengths of lead-covered conduit wire totalling 160 feet and valued at approximately $100.

McGrath has twice previously been convicted on theft. He was given suspended sentence for two years on November 3, 1949, and sentenced to 15 days in jail on February 4, 1952.

Court Dismisses Assault Charge

A charge of common assault against Glenn Varty, 22, RR 3, Havelock, was dismissed today.

Cyril Redcliffe, Belmont township truck driver, gave evidence that when Varty's motorcycle upset on the road from Havelock to Cordova Mines, Varty pulled him from the truck "used some awful bad language" and "said he was going to make me pay for the damage or take it out of my hide."

Varty's evidence was that, as he went to pass Redcliffe's truck, Redcliffe speeded up and pulled to the left, forcing the motorcycle over on to some large stones which threw it sideways. He got up and opened the door of Redcliffe's truck. An exchange of heated language ensued.

Magistrate W. R. Philp said he was inclined to agree with Crown Attorney John A. Bradshaw, QC, who termed the incident a petty one, but warned Varty that "while language may sometimes be aggravating it dosen't justify an assault."

Defence counsel W. B. Gordon described the incident as a "tempest in a tea-pot."

Panel Truck, Car Collide At Corner

Total damage amounted to approximately $450 when a pick-up truck driven by Edward Ballantyne, 25, RR1, Peterborough, was in collision with a car driven by Edward Dafoe, 43, 238 Barnado Ave., at Benson Ave. and Bennet Ave., at Benson Ave., and Bennett

Damage to the left front of the truck was estimated at $150 and to the letf frotn of the car $300.

Kept Girl, 15, From Family, Gets Probation

COBOURG— (ENS) — Thomas Annis, 20, of Bowmanville was allowed on suspended sentence for two years when he pleaded guilty yesterday to a charge of taking a 15-year-old girl from the possession of her mother.

Provincial Constable Arthur Watson of Bowmanville testified that he received a complaint from the parents of the girl that she had been missing from her home and that she had been keeping company with Thomas Annis. It was learned that Annis had gone to Toronto around that time in a rented car and police in that city were notified to pick Annis and the girl up. However, police found the pair in Bowmanville a few days later. She had disappeared on April 26. The constable said that she looked more like 18 than 15 and that from her statement she appeared to have been a willing party to the affair.

Defence Counsel Ross Strike of Bowmanville, pointed out that the section of the code under which Annis had been charged, was written during the time of Queen Victoria when such a thing as abduction was looked upon as a grave matter and the section did not give much latitude to an accused person. The girl's parents had not been aware as to what was going on and as the publicity of a court case would do neither party any good, his client desired to plead guilty.

"The way things are nowadays, young people mature more rapidly and I think the age limit in regard to juveniles should be lowered. I think the girl was a willing party. Sentence will be suspended for two years and during that time the accused is to stay away from this girl," said Magistrate R. B. Baxter.

Need Recreation For Full Life, Rotary Told

CAMPBELLFORD— (ENS) — The Rotary Club had Stan Wadlow, recreational director for East York as guest speaker Monday.

He said that the definition of the word "recreation" implies mental refreshment as provided by a multitude of interests or activities depending on the age, occupation and habits of the individual. For the most part, recreation presupposes play, though it includes hobbies or some mental relaxation from work. It is essential to the health structure of the individual that he have relaxation whether it be reading, palying games, watching games or making a hobby of some interesting phase of life.

The speaker said that Sir Winston Churchill provides an outstanding example of a man, who though carrying the weight of the nation's business at a most crucial period, still made time for his receration of painting and bricklaying.

Mr. Wadlow told that during the war he had trained recruits in both the navy and the air force to employ their leisure hours in sports and recreation generally. He had learned the broad benefits of a well-spent leisure in the armed services and upon his return to his own community as recreational director of East York had carried the principles into civilian life until literally thousands of people, both young and old, had been affected. In seven years the East York community has built an arena, a swimming pool, has organized a Rod and Gun Club, tap and ballet classes and adult recreation of all sorts.

He said that enough can not be said for the influence of community activities in discouraging juvenile delinquency in general and building good citizenship among all classes.

In addition to Mr. Wadlow's speech, a film, "The Boettger Story" was presented by Thomas R. Sherdidan of Toronto.

Principal E. E. Darling and several pupils of the high school were guests of the club.

By the adoption of the report of the committee of the whole, presented by Ald. P. J. Anglesey, appointed Alderman T. D. Miller Acting Mayor and Head of the Council during the absence of His Worship Mayor Waddell in May and June to attend the coronation of Queen Elizabeth.

Approved the options obtained by City Clerk Outram of land required for the extension of Borden Ave. easterly to Monaghan Road and westerly to Erskine Ave. for the construction of a main sewer. Borden, on the map, is parallel with Lansdowne St., and authorized purchase of the property.

Ottawa Fears 5-Day Week

WINNIPEG (CP)—The government is afraid of "political reaction" if all of Canada's civil servants got the five-day week, Harry Hlem of Kitchener, national president of the Amalgamated Civil Servants of Canada, told a weekend meeting of civil servants.

The government, he said, isn't concerned about the short week in the larger population centres, but is afraid of a reaction from smaller centres.

"Politics in the civil service is one of the hardest things we have to combat," said Mr. Hlem.

The policy on the five-day week, he said, "is just another example of the messy way the government sees fit to do things."

Mr. Hlem also was optimistic about increased pay for civil servants.

Canadian Officer Had Girl Help Him Steal Army Tank

LONDON (Reuters)—An enterprising canadian army officer, who had his English gir lfriend steal an army tank for him so he could convert it into a successful assault weapon, launched a claim Monday for recognition and payment.

John J. Denovan, 37, of Montreal said here that his "engineer tank," extensively produced after 1943, had saved thousands of lives by its ability to overcome anti-tank obstacles quickly during invasions.

It had also saved Britain millions of dollars because the type was converted from existing Churchill tanks and did not have to be built from scratch, he claimed.

Denovan's claim was heard by the royal commission on awards to inventors, a government body set up after the war to deal with claims for wartime developments.

NEEDED TO STEAL TANK

Then a lieutenant doing liaison duty with Britain's department of tank design, Denovan decided it was necessary to steal a tank rather than go through "proper channels" and risk defeat from the start through red tape, he said. Fortunately, he had a girl friend in the Women's Army Corps who could help.

He first saw the need for an assault vehicle when he studied reports of the Canadian-led raid on Dieppe, France, in 1942. "What was needed was something to bring in the engineers with the first wave of the assault, so they could dispose of obstacles which were holding up everyone else," he said.

He submitted a formal suggestion to the department but it came to nothing. Then he decided to do the job himself. "Tanks were scarce at that time, and if anyone had made a lot of difficulties, the project never would have started," he said.

GIRL FRIEND HELPED

"I had a girl friend who was transport officer in charge of armored vehicles. I borrowed a tank from her. Perhaps a better way to describe it is to say that we stole this tank.

"I took it out to a friend's unit where there was a work shop and I worked there on it in my spare time. It was as a result of this work that the Royal Engineers' assault vehicle was produced," he told the commission.

From 1943, the government produced 547 such tanks, using them in the Normandy invasion and every landing after that, and in most operations through France and Germany, his lawyer, John Whitford, added.

Rookie Policeman Forced To Kill Man

STOCKHOLM (AP)—If it's bread you want to buy in Stockholm today, you have to bake it yourself. As for meat—chicken or fish is the answer.

Not only bread and meat, but margarine, flour, yeast and many other items were missing from the shelves of food stores.

The depleted store stocks stemmed from a strike by 3,500 slaughtermen asking a 10-krona ($2) weekly wage increase and a subsequent lockout, starting today, of some 25,000 workers in bakeries, flour mills, margarine factories, curing plants and similar food processing establishments.

This touched off a buyers' rush Monday which cleaned out most Stockholm stores. Even foods unaffected by the strike-lockout—milk, for example—were in big demand.

Observers called the food shortage threat "the most severe since the general strike in 1903."

Hides Five Years In British Embassy

MOSCOW (AP)—George Bundock, who spent five years in Moscow's British embassy to escape a Soviet jail sentence, left by plane today for Britain.

Bundock, a British embassy employee, was sentenced in March, 1948, to 18 months in prison after a Soviet court found him guilty of infecting a Russian girl with a disease. Bundock stayed away from the trial on the embassy's advice and since had remained within the embassy to avoid serving the sentence.

The Kremlin April 30 extended the Soviet government's recent amnest for lesser non-political prisoners to include the Briton.

It took 15 mail bags to bring the evidence into court.

A Welcome Visitor

Peterborough welcomes into its midst today the Honourable the Secretary of State for External Affairs, His Excellency the President of the General Assembly of the United Nations, and an old Peterborough boy. These three distinctions are encompassed by the person of Mr. Lester B. Pearson, O.B.E., M.A., LL.D., Hon. Fellow of St. John's College, Oxford; M.P. for Algoma East. The third of his distinctions, his association with Peterborough, was fortuitous rather than earned. A son of the parsonage, his father was minister of George Street church when Mr. Pearson was a youth.

* * *

At dinner this evening many citizens will have an opportunity to see and hear what manner of person this is who is acclaimed in the chancelleries of the world. The dinner, sponsored by the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce, has been arranged in concert with the Outboard Marine and Manufacturing Company which is celebrating its twenty-fifth anniversary of Peterborough establishment. We take this opportunity to wish the company, its officers and employees, continued prosperity. The diversity of Peterborough manufacturies has in the past helped this city to weather economic storms. Continuing strength of the Johnson Sea Horse will do much to ensure that Peterborough rides over whatever rough passages may be in the future.

Seventh Music Festival

Today the Kiwanis Music Festival of Peterborough began the first of a crowded eight-day schedule. The entries in more than two hundred classes are numerous and representative of a wide area. There are contestants from the Lake shore, east to Kingston, west to Toronto and Hamilton. Entries have been made above it from Perth to Lindsay and beyond, and north to Kirkfield and Orillia. Thus the Peterborough Festival becomes not only a Peterborough district affair, but a central Ontario festival.

Being heard today are the contestants in the public speaking and drama classes; tomorrow the musical classes begin their long series, with many hundred of entrants, solo, ensemble, choir, and band. The city cannot avoid being aware of their presence, especially in the area of St. Peter's auditorium and Trinity Memorial Hall; and all over town next Tuesday when the rural school choirs converge on the city.

Visiting Peterborough as adjudicators are Miss Irene Fairclough of Hamilton who is judging the verse-speaking sections, and Mr. George Heath-Gracie and Mr. John Russell of England who will adjudicate in the musical sections.

This is the seventh annual music festival which the Peterborough Kiwanis Club has sponsored and managed with great success. We again congratulate the club on its enterprise and worthy effort and urge our readers to attend the festival for the sake of musical life in this area and to support the contestants and the Club.

Grim Picture

We have been publishing in the last few days some extraordinarily vivid accounts from the pen of Mr. Phillip Deane, Korean war correspondent for the London Observer. Mr. Deane was taken prisoner of war in Korea in June, 1950, while reporting the activities of the hard-pressed, retreating United States Cavalry Division. For nearly three years Mr. Deane was a prisoner of the North Koreans and Chinese. He was one of the first captives to be released last month, through China, Manchuria, Russia and Moscow.

Mr. Deane's reports have an authenticity which cannot be denied. In addition to stories of native kindness and some efforts to keep him and his fellow-prisoners from starvation and treat them according to the Geneva Convention, he relates experiences of forced marches, cruelty, wanton killing, and terrible hardship. Atrocities were committed, although Mr. Deane is more restrained in his relation of them than are some of the American reports that have been given wide circulation without substantiation.

Mr. Deane's accounts and those of trustworthy other released prisoners present a grim picture. All Red Cross missions were prevented from visiting the camps. There was never at any time a reliable list of prisoners. There were no postal arrangements. Some of the men who have just been released have for months been posted as "missing." The Chinese authorities had not bothered to say whether they were dead or alive.

All is not fair in love and war. Civilized people, even though engaged in such an uncivilized pursuit as killing each other, have demanded certain standards of decency and respect for their common humanity. Hence the Geneva Convention on the treatment of prisoners of war. Yet one of the troubles of a war involving Westerns and Orientals is that their concepts of decency are as divergent as their ways of living. Some of the returned prisoners have complained bitterly about the shacks them had to live in, the food they were given, the China tea they had to drink (unlike the Indian tea they were used to). By Korean and Chinese native standards, most of the huts, the food, the clothing and the tea were adequate; it was as good as or better than most Oriental peasants and soldiers have.

In saying this we do not seek to minimize the hardships which the prisoners underwent. We wish to point out that there are reasonable explanations for some of the treatment accorded them. But no one, not even a Chinese official, can condone the brutality and viciousness of some of the treatment. It was apparently as bad as the dastardly conduct of the worst Nazis. Every army has its brutal men; even the Canadian and American forces in Korea has some, as reports on conduct published in the last couple of years have shown. Nor where the U.S.A.-U.N. prison camps in South Korea entirely models of good administration and fair treatment of Red prisoners. We believe, however, that the tales the Red prisoners are taking back with them to North Korea and China are grossly exaggerated, and have less foundation in provable fact than the episodes which Mr. Deane relates.

Washing Its Hands Of Leaky Tanks

The Peterborough Utilities Commission has munificently and suddenly given over to its thousands of customers the hot-water tanks it installed during the last twenty years. An outright gift. Perhaps we should not look a gift horse in the face, but when it is about ready to spring a leak we may regret that the now-discontinued service charges which consumers paid year in and year out no longer cover repairs, reconditioning and replacement of tanks and accoutrements. Many users (and payers of the annual service charge) saw a Utitilities man only once since the war. That was when he or somebody like him insinuated himself into the basement on some pretext or other and secretively affixed a little gadget to the tank so that the Utilities could cut off the juice to the heaters any time the gentry in the main office felt the need of doing it.

Ah, well, the tanks and heating units in them are really your own, now, leaky or not, worn out or still oozing a bit of heat.

Clean-Up Time

The General Assembly of the United Nations has recessed, yet the great glass building on the East River in New York is a maze of activity: cleaners are on the job. There are five thousand, four hundred windows to be washed. The seventy-five-foot glass dome of the Assembly Hall has to be cleaned. Half a million square feet of flooring in the basements must be scrubbed with mop and pail. Six hundred thousand square feet of asphalt tiling in the rest of the building have to be polished. We expect that the cleaners will be at least as successful as the diplomats in producing a bright and pleasant atmosphere at U.N.

Local housewives busy with spring cleaning may pause for refreshment and relief before these figures of the job to be done at U.N. Beside it, their domestic spring chores are merely a drop in the bucket, a swish of the broom, a spit on the window-pane.

Saying Peace, Peace; When There Is No Peace

The dove of Korean peace has buzzard wings. A dozen miles from Panmunjom where the armistice talks are being held the Reds on Sunday mounted a sortie in force against Commonwealth Division positions. According to reports the fighting was close and fierce. In Indo-China, a Red invasion of Laos is in full sweep. These offensive tactics belie the Red words of peace which they have been pouring into western ears—and indeed, their own people's ears—for the last month.

NOTES AND COMMENT

We wonder what Mother Nature had in mind when she constructed man so that he can kick himself, but can't pat himself on the back?

T. D. F., the resident wag of the Ottawa Citizen remarks that style never created a problem for Eve, because she had only to turn over a new leaf.

The Church Of Kings

By JOHN GALE

WESTMINSTER ABBEY, where Queen Elizabeth the Second will be crowned in June, has been the scene of coronations for nine hundred years. Although not the cathedral church of London, nor even a cathedral at all, the Abbey has become over the centuries a national shrine, whose fabric and ornament are a record of English history.

Before the coming of the Norman invaders, British sovereigns were crowned elsewhere. But William the Conqueror wished to identify himself in the eyes of his newly-acquired Saxon subjects, with Edward the Confessor, their beloved king, who died in 1066. So he ordered that his coronation, which took place within a year of Edward's death, should be held in the Abbey Church of St. Peter's of Westminster. It was Edward who had built the church then standing and was himself buried there with great reverence.

◇ ◇ ◇

MUCH of the present Westminster Abbey was built in the middle of the thirteenth century under the direction of Henry the Third, a great patron of the arts. It was the third church to stand upon the site. No trace has ever been found of the earliest of these churches, but it is thought that it was built by Sebert, King of the East Saxons, who died in 616 A. D. Certainly, long before the Norman Conquest, a band of monks settled on what was then an island in the Thames— the Isle of Thorns - and built a church, which, according to legend, was miraculously consecrated by St. Peter himself.

◇ ◇ ◇

IT WAS THIS LEGEND that induced Edward the Confessor to replace the little Saxon church by a second, nobler building, which came to be linked with his name. To supervise its construction, he lived at Westminster, and the Abbey and the Palace grew together side by side.

It was the first cruciform church in England and magnificent for the period. The foundations were of massive block of stone, the towers of wood; the round arches, the giant piers and the small, round-headed windows were of Norman inspiration. To Edward, the completion of the Abbey Church was the fulfillment of a secred duty. But before its consecration, the King collapsed, dying soon afterwards. Yet the work was finished.

◇ ◇ ◇

TEN DAYS after the Abbey's consecration, the King was laid to rest within its walls. And in less than a year, William the Conquerer was to insist upon receiving the Crown of the realm within a few feet of his predecessor's hallowed remains. From that item onwards, Westminster Abbey was recognized as "the Head, Crown and Diadem of the Kingdom." And for 150 years or so it remained untouched.

◇ ◇ ◇

IN 1245, Henry the Third decided to pull it down and build the present church. He wished to provide a finer setting for a new shrine to contain the bones of the Confessor; he was probably also moved by his admiration for the great new French cathedrals of Rheims, Amiens and Charters. Twenty-four years were spent by Henry's builders in erecting the eastern end of the church, the transepts and five bays of the nave as they stand today. In 1269, in the presence of the peers of the realms, Henry and his sons bore the coffin of the Confessor to its new and splendid shrine to the east of the High Altar; the Chapel of Saint Edward became the most sacred spot in the Abbey, and round it were clustered the tombs of succeeding kings and queens.

◇ ◇ ◇

THIS CHURCH is still the base of the Abbey today; but a Londoner would scarcely recognize the outlines now familar to him in the building Henry loved. For then it lacked the chapel to the east, constructed by Henry the Seventh; it lacked the characteristic twin towers, erected by the famous architect Sir Christopher Wren (designer of St. Paul's Cathedral in the late seventeenth century), and it was without the north front, perhaps the best-known aspect of the Abbey, designed comparatively recently by Sir Gilbert Scott, the Gothic revivalist.

◇ ◇ ◇

UNDER HENRY THE THIRD, the Abbey was designed not only for use by monks, but also to serve as a coronation church. For this reason the choir and choir stalls were placed west of the central crossing, leaving a space between the choir and the steps leading up to the sanctuary and High Altar. It is in this central space, termed the "Theatre," that a raised stage is built, upon which most of the coronation takes place. Coronations, however, have not always been to the Abbey's advantage. Indeed, at the coronation of George the Third, workmen employed on the preparations boasted that they had "broken the noses and cut off the ears of a whole legion of angels." At a later date, the Coronation Chair itself was damaged.

◇ ◇ ◇

IT HAS BEEN SAID that if all the written works were to perish, historians a hundred years hence could piece together a comprehensive history of England from the Abbey's tombs and monuments, which range from that of Edward the Confessor to that of the Unknown Warrior (of the First World War), from those of scientists to those of poets. Macaulay, the historian, recorded his feelings in a famous passage: "Chatham (famous eighteenth century Prime Minister) sleeps near the northern door of the Church, in a spot which has ever since been appropriated to statemen, as the other end of the same transept has long been to poets; Mansfield rest there, and the second William Pitt, and Fox, and Grattan, and Canning and Wilberforce. In no other cemetery do so many great citizens lie within so narrow a space. High over those venerable graves towers the stately monument of Chatham, and from above, his effigy, graven by a cunning hand, seems still, with eagle face and outstretched arm, to bid England be of good cheer, and to hurl defiance at her foes."

◇ ◇ ◇

FOR THE CORONATION this year the dim, still interior of the Abbey will be transformed. A broad and carpeted way, flanked by galleries, will lead from the west door to the choir. In the centre, between the transepts, will stand the Throne and the historic Coronation Chair. From the floor to the great coloured windows will rise up tier upon tier of seats; the space between the pointed arches and the old stone walls will be filled with a sparkling magnificence. It will be a splendid setting. But a coronation is soon over. And the Abbey will then become again a place of prayer and memories, with another great occasion added to its history.

Punchestown

(By a Sporting Correspondent in 'Ireland Bulletin')

ONE OF THE stock jokes of the Irish countryside is about the parish priest who began his sermon "Dearly beloved this is the third Sunday after Punchestown . . ." Like many jokes it has a strong link with reality for Punchestown race meeting is one of the land marks of the Irish year. It is a landmark dividing winter from summer for two very important sections of the community —farmers and ladies of fashion.

Punchestown is really the farmers' meeting and holiday. Many of these hard working men who meet their friends here every year would never meet otherwise and Punchestown to them as well as being the race meeting and a carnival is an annual clearing house for essential news and gossip. Few Irish men haven't an uncle or a grandfather who though he mightn't go to two race meetings in the year regard missing Punchestown as some sort of national treason.

Punchestown is also the parade ground for fashion: ladies who have hunted through the wetness and the cold of an Irish winter, who have attended loyally their local point-to-point meetings which are frequently held on bitter days of February gales or March east winds now shed their chrysalis of tweeds and bootees and emerge in dazzling and diaphanous colours at the coaxing warmth of the sun. Royal Ascot and Longchamps have their fashion parades in high summer: in Punchestown fashion is more exciting for it is the very first gentle week of summer.

Maybe it is this that gives Punchestown its unique quality of magic. The leaves are only on the trees, not yet fully grown. The countryside is fully clothed for the first time since the previous summer. And everywhere on the drive through the counties of Dublin, Wicklow and Kildare, as the racegoers gather, is the breathtaking and almost unbelievable new green of the early Irish summer.

As a racemeeting Punchestown could be described as "the Point-to-Point to end all points-to-points." From the first of February each hunt committee in Ireland has held its point-to-point race meeting over typical hunting country—hedges, ditches and ploughed fields. The best winners from the point-to-points come to do battle at Punchestown with each other and with some of their more aristocratic brethren, the regular steeplechasers. It is frequently from Punchestown winners that the best Irish steeplechasers are recruited. Horses like Lovely Cottage who are good enough to win The Conyngham Cup over four miles of single and double banks, ditches, fences and stone walls can face the hazards of the Liverpool Grand National without any qualms.

Take the case of one of Ireland's greatest favourites—gallant little Lough Conn. This little horse—he wasn't much bigger than a pony—did his daily ploughing on his Ballina farm; on Saturdays he was hunted by his owner with the local pack; on Sunday he drew the family trap to Mass He proved to be very good at point-to-point racing so his owner was persuaded to let him take his chance at Punchestown. In 1944 there was no petrol to transport horse boxes, so Lough Conn covered the hundred and fifty miles from Ballina to Punchestown by a very simple method—he walked. Next day he came out in the Punchestown Cup—a three miles race. The stands rocked with amusement when the "little pony," as he looked compared with the other horses, dashed off as if the race were a five furlong sprint and was soon a field in front of his fellow competitors. Everyone waited with amusement for the little horse to ease up after a mile or so. But amusement changed to amazement when instead of the gap closing it seemed to lengthen and Lough Conn won the race with ridiculous ease. Next day he came out again in another three miles event, the coveted Ladies' Cup. Carrying 12 stone 8 lbs. he set off again in front and was never headed from that to the finish. He then walked home to Ballina. This way of treating a horse would cause most fashionable English or French trainers to turn pale but it is what has produced the tough Irish steeplechaser who has no peer.

On Tuesday and Wednesday of this week the usual crowds will flock to Punchestown for the usual reasons—to see or show the fashions, to meet friends, and to spot a Lough Conn or some other budding champion.

Bible Message

(From the Authorized Version)

Seek ye the Lord while he may be found, call ye upon him while he is near: let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts; and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon. For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, saith the Lord. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts. (Isa. 55:6-9.)

◇ ◇ ◇

Be sober, be vigilant; because your adversary the devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour: whom resist stedfast in the faith, knowing that the same afflictions are accomplished in your brethren that are in the world.

But the God of all grace, who hath called us unto his eternal glory by Christ Jesus, after that ye have suffered a while, make you perfect, stablish, strengthen, settle you. (I Pet. 5:8-10.)

Erwtensoep

The Dutch people live longer than any other people on earth. They don't cram themselves with vitamins or pills, they don't go on diets, and they don't try to keep up with their neighbours in the matter of cars, fur coats and refrigerators.

As far as diet is concerned, a favourite dish is erwtensoep, which is dried peas with fat pork and celery and sausages, sometimes washed down with gin and (not or) beer. And they don't use bathroom scales or read health magazines. If they're sick, they go to a doctor, who may prescribe a change of erwtensoep to zuurkool, which is sauerkraut, with mashed potatoes, sausage and lard. They don't even subscribe to the theory that life begins— to be a matter of anxiety— at 40.

All of this, gleaned from an Amsterdam dated article by an observant UP reporter, may be a trifle light hearted, but the serious conclusion is that Hollanders live a long time because they eat what they want to, rather than what the magazines tell them to, that they don't worry, and that they don't splash their money around for gadgets.

Many years ago, a reporter on this newspaper recalls being assigned within a month to interview two old lads each of whom was 86 years old. Neither was of Dutch race or descent, but neither possessed refrigerators, automobiles, or even geared can-openers. One of them had a white, saintly, grey beard and had lived the life of a saint, but without the anxiety or stimulus of the fiery stake or the roaring lion. The other had a grey beard, terrifically stained with tobacco. He offered the reporter a slug of gin, and told a story which in that more modest day was not strictly sewing circle. But both shared one quality with the long-lived Hollanders— neither of them had ever worried. And one of them had accepted at least one theory of Dutch diet.— Saskatoon Star-Phoenix.

Buffalo Quartet Made Members Of City Chapter

The SPEBSQSA was formed to preserve and encourage barber shop quartet singing and today there are hundreds of Peterborough residents who have discovered the society succeeded in its aim.

These hundreds filled PCVS auditorium Saturday night in expectations of a good night of music. They were not disappointed as barber shoppers from Peterborough, Oshawa, Toronto and Buffalo presented a really outstanding evening of music.

Featured on the program was a U.S. group, the Buffalo Bills. The quartet left no doubt in the minds of the audience why it is considered America's, and perhaps the world's, outstanding barber shop quartet.

During the evening, Master of Ceremonies Hal Coulson presented the quartet with honorary memberships to the Peterborough Chapter of the SPEBSQSA. The Bills are old friends in Peterborough, Saturday night being their fourth appearance here.

The singers, Vern Reid, Al Shea, Bill Spangenburg and Dick Grapes, showed their outstanding ability by rendering some traditionally barber shop numbers, and throwing in popular songs, a take-off on Rigoletto and climaxing their part of the program with "Ivy Halls," the school favourite.

In their first appearance, the Bills wore snow white beards and wigs, and white Western cavalry outfits complete with leg-length tan leather boots.

Sharing the spotlight were the Cowling brothers, of Toronto, whose singing and humorous ad-libbing kept the overflow crowd in high spirits.

WELL RECEIVED

The program opened with a few numbers by the Peterborough Chapter, Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barber Shop Quartet Singing in America, Chorus. Their rendition of "In the Evening By the Moonlight" was especially well received.

Peterborough's own Kawartha Four were on stage next. They performed well as did the Oshawa Dulci-Tones and the Oshawa Chapter of the SPEBSQSA Chorus.

Members of the Kawartha Four were Phil Chevalier, Doug Montgomery, Hal Coulson and George Mackay.

As the winale, the combined chapter choruses and quartets sang "My Country 'Tis of Thee" and "God Save the Queen."

More than 94,000 persons were treated at Red Cross hospitals and nursing stations during the last year, Dr. L. O. Bradley, chairman of the national outpost advisory committee of the Canadian Red Cross, said Monday.

Dr. Bradley said in a report this total was more than 4,600 more than last year. He said 14,632 persons were given hospital treatment, 26,645 attended out-patient clinics and 44,999 were examined in their own homes.

Bill On Secret Orders Given First Reading

OTTAWA (CP)—A private bill proposed by the CCF which would rule out any more secret orders-in-council being passed by the cabinet, was given first reading Monday by the House of Commons.

The measure, proposed by Stanley Knowles (CCF — Winnipeg North Centre) would end the cabinet's right to pass orders under the Emergency Powers Act and keep them secret. It would not affect the one secret order that now is known to exist.

With the House nearing a close and time for consideration of private legislation drastically curtailed, it is unlikely the bill will get further consideration at this session.

Olson Selected Best Player

NEW YORK (AP)—Eddie Olson, a United States-born hockey player who has never played for a Canadian team, has been selected as the most valuable player of the American Hockey League for the 1952-53 season.

The selection, made by the sports writers and broadcasters of the seven league cities, carries a $300 league bonus and the Leslie Cunningham Trophy.

The Cleveland forward polled 24 of a possible 35 points in the voting. Runner-up with 12 points was his teammate, goalie Johnny Bower.

Olson, a native of Hancock, Mich. learned to play hockey there and developed into a star with the Coast Guard Cutters of Baltimore, a wartime member of the Eastern Amateur League.

Olson played left wing most of the 1952-53 season and led the American League in scoring with 86 points.

35 Horses Still In Running For Queen's Plate

TORONTO (CP) — Thirty-five speedy three-year-olds are still in the books for the 94th running of the Queen's Plate, oldest continuously-run horse race in North America.

Owners of the Canadian-breds now training for the 1¼-mile event made the $50 May 1 payment to keep their entries eligible for the June 2 stakes, the Ontario Jockey Club announced Monday.

That payment cut the big field from 72 that were eligible after the Dec. 1 payment.

There were 178 Plate hopefuls originally nominated. More probably will be scratched by the time final declarations for the classic, to be run at Woodbine race track, are made just before post time.

CASUALTIES NOT SURPRISING

The number of casualties in the May payment was not surprising in view of the way Canadians, the even-money favorite, has been training. Owned by E. P. Taylor of Toronto, Canadiana has been working so fast that railbirds are just trying to figure out the second- and third-place finishers.

Canadiana's great rival from Western Canada, Virginia Fair, is still in the race. Her owner, James Charlesworth of Edmonton, made his payment a month before the May 1 deadline.

Most notable of those dropped was Gala Easter, owned by Attorney-General Lucien Maynard of Alberta.

The plate purse runs about $21,000 made up of pre-race payments and $15,000 added by the Jockey Club. The Queen donates the traditional 50 guineas, a custom started by Queen Victoria in 1860 with the first running.

Big 3 Pitchers Working Hard

NEW YORK (AP)—Steve O'Neill, veteran manager of Philadelphia Phillies, predicted earlier this spring that his big three of Robin Roberts, Curt Simmons and Karl Drews would pitch a combined total of 1,050 innings this season. That's 350 apiece.

So far it looks as though O'Neill wasn't talking through his hat.

With the 1953 campaign only three weeks old, his hard-working trio has accounted for an aggregate of 120 innings.

Figures compiled by The Associated Press through Monday night's games show that Roberts has hurled 50 innings, the most in the National League. Simmons has worked 45 frames and Drews 25. Roberts and Simmons each has won four games and lost one. Drews has a 2-1 record.

Jim Konstanty, the Phillies' other starter, has pitched 23 innings. He also has two victories and one setback.

Bucceroni Awarded Seventh-Round TKO

MILWAUKEE (AP)—Wes Bascom, eight-ranked light heavyweight from St. Louis, fell to his knees, beat his head on the canvas and burst into tears Monday night when referee Ted Jamieson stopped his fight with rugged Dan Bucceroni and gave Bucceroni a seventh-round technical knockout. The fight was slated for 10 rounds.

The booing was so loud after the fight was stopped that the time of the TKO couldn't be announced.

Bascom, who at 174 pounds gave away 17 to his harder-hitting foe from Philadelphia, was bleeding from the mouth when Jamieson stopped the bout after Bucceroni landed several good punches.

CONFIRMS SUSPENSION

WATERLOO (CP)—Bill Hanley, Ontario Hockey Association business manager, confirmed Monday the suspension of Bun Cooke, coach of Waterloo Siskins Junior B hockey finalists, for one year.

Hanley said the suspension was for "molesting" referee Jim Crombie of Bowmanville at Weston Arena April 25.

Manager Bob Noble will handle the Siskins tonight when they meet Weston Dukes here in the deciding game of the OHA Junior B final.

What are probably the last NHL and AHL bulletins of the season arrived the other day. The one from Montreal announced that the Hart Trophy was won for the second straight year by Gordie Howe of Detroit Red Wings. Being judged the player most valuable to his team earns the big winger a cheque from the NHL for $1,000, which may help solace him for the Stanley Cup final gravy he missed out on. The item from New York states that Eddie Olson, USA-born veteran left-winger of Cleveland Barons, won the Cunningham Trophy as most valuable to his team. It carries with it an award of $300. Teammate Johnny Bower was runner-up. In the NHL, Al Rollins and Red Kelly were runners-up to Howe, though polling but 25 points each to Gord's 58.

A piece from St. Thomas tells of a one-armed player trying out with Guelph Leafs of the Intercounty Baseball League. He is Pete Gray, 36-year-old outfielder there on a trial basis. According to the report, the guy is a fine fielder, covering a lot of ground, pulling in hard flies, dropping the mitt and flinging well in a hurry. He grabs the bat in his powerful left hand and cuffs a lot of liners over the infield, besides having a dandy drop bunt. Oldtimers here have told us how good the late one-armed Dan McCabe was in Peterborough back around the turn of the century, being a first-rate pitcher and a hard, consistent clouter at the plate. That's really something.

Arn A Playing Coach?

Bunny Morganson says that Arn Dugan has been hired by the Nanaimo, B. C., senior lacrosse club as playing coach. He hasn't yet received his transfer to play out west, as the OLA frowns on players leaving a club without receiving proper permission, but he may get the okay at the next meeting. Meantime, he's out there, along with Jim Heffernan of here and a few other Ontario players. Johnny Lumley moved out but has since offered to return for a bonus— which he won't get. Dugan played early last season for the Timbermen, quitting then to play ball for the Petes. He went to Brantford last winter with Jake Wade for hockey. He's a good lacrosse player, but we can't quite picture him as a coach.

Senior OLA schedule is in tonight as it affects the Petes. We open Saturday against Toronto West Yorks in Orillia, and Mimico comes here next week. Yorks, Brampton and Mimico each play the locals three times at home and thrice away in the schedule, while the Petes meet St. Kitts, Fergus and Hamilton in a double schedule, two here and two away each. Playoffs about August 10, top four clubs in best-of-seven group semi-finals. We have a lot of Friday frays at home again, and a number of Saturday ones on the road, which is a break for players, who otherwise must be on the job next morning. All games in Miller Bowl commence at 8.45, there being a fine for a club coming late.

Thorpe At Helm Again

Playing coach Bob Thorpe is working his charges hard these evenings to get 'em in shape for the grind ahead. He makes no predictions other than saying: "I think we'll have a pretty fair club again and hope the fans continue to support us." Bob has been with the Petes for four years, this being his second term as coach. Born in Port Dalhousie, he worked up through minor OLA ranks in St. Catharines and thence to Brampton seniors. Also played for Quebec. He was on the St. Kitts' 1944 Mann Cup team. His pro puck wanderings took him pretty much all over the States but he finally obtained an amateur hockey card the past spring. His brilliant play had much to do with ousting Toronto Yorks last OLA season in eastern finals.

A chap named Ernest Lowry, who claims he is specializing in research analyses of baseball flights and their optical effects, sends along his story in reply to points raised by J. V. McAree in the Globe and Mail on April 24. Mr. Lowry (no relation to Joe Lowry, who southpawed some neat slants for the Petes at times here, maintains that pitchers can't throw curves, but that these twirlers and the batters suffer from optical illusions when they think the ball is coming at the hitter but suddenly "breaks" outside the plate. Mayhap Mr. Lowry is a scientist and knows whereof he speaks, but he will find thousands of ball players from major leagues down who will scoff at his theory. We also think the man is away off base.

Walter Haba Scores TKO

TORONTO (CP)—Walter Haba of Toronto scored a technical knockout over Izzy Bennett of Buffalo in the main event of the Lions Club 31st annual boxing card at Maple Leaf Gardens Monday night.

Bennett was unable to answer the bell in the second round of the scheduled five-rounder. In the other bouts Buffalo and Detroit fighters copped most of the honors.

Profits, expected to reach $10,000, will go towards sending underprivileged children to the Club's summer camp on Georgian Bay.

Other fight results included:

118 pounds — Donny Churm, Brantford, won unanimous decision over Danny Saunders, Buffalo.

126 pounds—Gleason Leepeor, Detroit, won a split decision over Danny Williams, Oshawa.

No Curve Ball By Pitchers Writer States

By ERNEST LOWRY

The optical illusion of curve is a phenomenon inherent to all ball flights—when viewed from certain angles. Because the facts are shrouded in a maze of technical problems, it has been easy in the past for shrewd baseball leaders to seize the opportunity of selling the illusion as a real curve and a glorifying achievement of big-league pitchers. The irrefutable scientific fact, however, is that it is far beyond the capability of the unaided hand to impart sufficient rotational speed to cause a regulation baseball to deviate in flight. Fortunately, for the playability of the game itself, this is the case. Otherwise baseball could not be played due to spinning balls curving so uncontrollably, in the longer throws around the playing field, as to render all throwing accuracy—which is essential to the sport—utterly iimpossible.

A "trick" or "doctored" ball can be readily pitched to curve. As far back as 1870 baseball "Barnums" used to ballyhoo the "curve" pitch by erecting poles between the pitcher and plate and curving the fake ball past the middle pole. Ordinarily it would have been much simpler, to forego the poles and demonstrate their case far more convincingly, by pitching high and letting the curve continue past the catcher. But the erratic action of the ball, in the longer throw, would have exposed the ingenious trick to the keen-eyed fans — hence the stage-setting necessity of poles.

"SHEER QUACKERY"

Incidentally, any extension of a curve, which a reader might add to a sketch, would reveal the "curve" pitch as sheer quackery wearing its mask of science. That is the secret why books, published by prominent pitchers, show many pictures of how the "curve" is thrown, but cautiously avoid showing even one sketch of the path of the pitch itself. Upon reflection, readers will now recall how such sketches of "curve" pitches have been omitted and feel their intelligence has been under-rated.

Various influences have long-conditioned public thinking into accepting "curve" pitch propaganda as factual information. One is the general knowledge that golf and tennis balls curve considerably. But these deviate because of their lighter weights; their especially designed surfaces to create air turbulence along with the high-speed spins imparted by club and racket. They thus respond to a principle of physics and mathematicians. The pitched baseball, however, introduces different problems involving exhaustive study and research in various fields of science, and on a scale vastly greater than is generally realized.

OPTICAL ILLUSION

Another circumstance contributing to public acceptance of the "curve" pitch is that of the optical illusion of curve as seen by anyone throwing a ball. This illusion of lateral deviation is, in reality, merely the effect of gravity upon the ball; the angle at which the ball must enter the thrower's line of vision (either from the right or the left) and a visual characteristic known as "persistence of retinal impressions".

One of the new research discoveries has established the amazing fact that professional baseball's contention of the direction of curve, for a given direction of ball-spin, is in flat contradiction to the well-known curve-directions in golf and in tennis. A right-handed pitcher, throwing a side-arm "curve", spins the ball in the same direction as that imparted by a right-handed golfer in slicing a drive, which rotation spin (viewed from above) is, of course, clockwise.

ABOUT GOLFERS

There is no question in the minds of golfers about such drives curving to their right, which curve-direction is in precise accordance with the governing Bernoullian principle of physics. But, nevertheless, for generations organized baseball has ignored science and the factual experience of golfers and tennis players, by baseball leaders (including those who are ardent golfers) contending that such pitches curve to the first base side of the plate which is, of course, to the pitcher's left. Common sense, as well as science, tells us that the same spinning force which causes golf and tennis balls to curve to the right, certainly does not curve baseballs to the left.

Even more sensational are the research analyses of "curve" pitch fingering and deliveries which are so widely publicized in books by prominent figures in baseball. When this particular analytical finding is released to the public, the result could be a revolutionary revision of the general understanding of pitching delivery movements. The specific pitching instructions in question — which are so often bought out of penny-bank savings of young boys —are revealed as shamefully worthless teachings and are wholly impossible to be followed by even the big-league players themselves. Public opinion may require America's Baseball Commissioner to take steps to protect the public against players publishing and selling such false and misleading advice.

Curling News

By HERB MARTIN

With close to one hundred shareholders in attendance, the Peterborough Curling Rink Co. held its annual meeting in their Charlotte Street club parlors on Monday evening. It was one of the best annual meetings ever held by the company. The board of directors for 1952-1953 was returned for 1953-1954, with one exception—Ed Bickle replaces Dr. R. Clark, who retired from the board. The new board is:

H. Bradburn, F. Stenson, N. Hamley, T. Doughty, B. Grant, Dr. M. McCartney, B Harrison, O. Price, R. Payne, and E. Bickle.

President H. Bradburn's opening remarks were very brief. He oulined the season's activities and thanked all who had co-operated to make it a good season.

The election of a board of directors is usually the highlight of the annual meeting, but the proposed alterations over ices 6 and 7 was the real item on the agenda.

Dr. R. Morgan, chairman of the special building committee, in a well prepared report gave a clear outline of what the alterations included. Many of the shareholders spoke for and against the proposition, and after a lengthy discussion a vote was taken and the result was that it was defeated and laid aside for the time being. During the counting of ballots many suggestions were put forth for the consideration of the new board.

The newly elected board will meet shortly to choose a president and to name the different chairmen of committees.

Howe Winner Of Hart Trophy For Second Time

MONTREAL (CP)—Gordie Howe of Detroit Red Wings is winner for the second consecutive year of the Hart Trophy as the player most valuable to his team, the National Hockey League announced Monday night.

Howe had a total of 58 points of a possible 90. Closest were Al Rollins, Chicago goalie, and defenceman Red Kelly of Detroit, each with 25. Balloting was by 18 hockey writers and broadcasters in the six NHL cities. Points were awarded on the basis of five for first choice, three for second and one for third. Howe had nine firsts, Rollins three and Kelly two.

WON FOUR TIMES

Howe now has won the trophy four times. Only other consecutive two-year winners were Eddie Shore of Boston Bruins, 1934-35 and 1935-36, and the late Howie Morenz, Montreal Canadiens, 1930-31 and 1931-32.

The $1,000 that goes with the trophy gives Howe $4,500 in bonus money from the NHL this season—$1,000 as NHL top point-scorer, $1,000 as a member of the first-place Red Wings, $1,000 for all-star team choice and $500 as a member of a team eliminated in the Stanley Cup semi-finals.

Gordon A. Ford Dies Suddenly In Toronto

TORONTO (CP)—Gordon Alexander Ford, popular former trainer of many sports organizations in Toronto, died Monday night.

Outside the city, he was best known as trainer of the Balmy Beach club when it was one of the top-ranking clubs in Canadian senior football.

He also trained the old Tecumsehs Lacrosse Club and was associated with such other teams as Malvern Grads in football, Toronto Marlboros in hockey and the University of Toronto.

Brazil And Geohagen To Tackle Hermann And Mask In Team Bout

TIMOTHY GEOHAGEN

It will be Bobo Brazil and Timothy Geohagen against the Red Mask and Hans Hermann in the feature event at the Brock Arena Wednesday night. This will be a tag team match with four of the best grapplers in the game in action.

And there should be fireworks aplenty when Brazil and Hermann are in the ring together. Two weeks ago when Hermann was partnered with Brazil the big German refused time and again to help the sensational colored star, with the result that Brazil took quite a beating. Bobo should repay Hermann plenty Wednesday night.

The semi-final brings together popular Pat Flanagan and Jan Gotch, while the opener will feature big Bill Stack against the former Hamilton Tiger football star, Abe Zvonkin.

With top-flight matmen available, wrestling will continue at the Brock indefinitely.

Another Boston marathon, a truly amateur race that has come to be the most important of its kind in the world, attracting runners from many lands, passed into history, last month.

A great number of Canadians have won this gruelling battle over the full marathon distance: Jack Caffrey, twice, Johnny Miles twice, Gerard Cote, a cigar-smoking French Canadian, four times; Tom Longboat, Freddie Cameron, Jimmy Duffy, Dave Komonen, Edouard Fabre,—and a tall, slim young fellow named Walter Young, whose home was, and is, in the Montreal suburban city of Verdun.

We don't intend to make comparisons as to the courage, physical and mental, the joy of contest, the hope of fame, that activated all these, and all the other runners who flock from the world over to compete in this gruelling battle over the hills and slopes that finally, after agony of heart, lungs and muscles, pitch the runners into the cobbled streets of old Boston town, to finish the grind, and sink exhausted on the campbeds provided.

But we do say that seldom, if ever, did a Boston marathon winner possess a less inspiring background nor a more compelling urge to win, than Walter Young, when, in the autumn of 1936, he started training for the Boston marathon of 1937. For Walter Young was then on relief, in the late days of the Great Depression. He was a recipient of that form of national charity which contributed to each man, each family, enough to allow bare existence, to pay humble rental, to buy scantily of the cheapest of foods. In brief, to keep together body and soul.

It was a shameful way of life, and no one felt more bitter about his lot than jobless Walter Young, married with a wife, an infant son, and a mother to support. He had engaged in athletics, and he thought that, if he could enter, perhaps make a good showing, in such a race as the Boston marathon, it might lead to better times for himself, his wife, his little family.

He discussed this with a great professional runner, Pete Gavuzzi. Gavuzzi loved to run. He found a willing pupil in Young. Through the autumn, the winter, the early spring, these two ran, in preparation for the marathon. They ran 150 miles per week. They ran 1,700 miles in all before they decided Young was physically ready for the Boston test. Then they scraped up the money to ride a bus to Boston, with just enough left to feed and house them there.

Inspired by the possibility that victory could get him off the misery of relief rolls, Walter Young ran like a man possessed. He led 190 other runners from the world over, won by himself. And his great race was not in vain. Sporting Verdun gave him a job as a policeman. At least, he was off relief. He was working, at a man's job, earning a living. And he's a policeman still, though promoted from the lower ranks of the force.

Milwaukee Stops Brooklyn With 9-4 Decision

By BEN PHLEGAR, Associated Press Sports Writer

The folks down in Vinegar Bend, Ala., better start thumbing their St. Louis guidebooks. This appears to be a good year to go watch Wilmer pitch. Wilmer, as he is known to his grandma, is better known to baseball fans as Vinegar Bend Mizell, the 22-year-old plowboy who pitches for St. Louis Cardinals. Mizell looks as if he's on the victory track. Monday night at Pittsburgh Vinegar Bend mowed down the Pirates on two hits 5-0. He struck out nine and had a no-hitter until rookie Carlos Bernier broke through with a single in the sixth. Frank Thomas got the only other Pittsburgh hit, also a single, with two out in the ninth.

When Mizell was pitching for Houston of the Texas League in 1951 the entire population of Vinegar Bend—total 35—went over to see him work against Shreveport. Vinegar Bend, a village tucked against the Mississippi line, now has 39 inhabitants.

Since Wilmer has won two games and pitched one rain-shortened tie, this would seem an appropriate time for them to take another look at the local boy.

OTHERS BROKEN

While Mizell was ending the Pirates' five-game winning streak, two other streaks in the National League also were broken. Milwaukee Braves stopped Brooklyn at six straight with a 9-4 decision at Ebbets Field and Cincinnati Redlegs snapped their eight-game losing string at the expense of New York Giants 9-5 in the second game of a doubleheader after the Giants won the first 12-4.

Philadelphia Phillies took over first place in the National League by whipping Chicago 8-4.

In the only American league action Detroit Tigers conquered New York Yankees 10-8, knocking the Yanks into a tie for first place with Cleveland Indians. Boston at St. Louis was postponed because of wet grounds and the other four clubs were not scheduled.

The Braves' victory was a sweet one. Last season they bowed 18 times in 21 meetings with Brooklyn. After sending Preacher Roe to the showers in two innings the Braves exploded for five runs against Clem Labine in the sixth inning to get the decision.

FIVE RUNS

Del Ennis drove in five runs for the Phillies as Jim Konstanty picked up his second success against one loss.

Daryl Spencer, the Giants' rookie third baseman, smashed his first major league grand slam home run in New York's first-game triumph over the Redlegs.

Gus Bell matched Spencer's effort for Cincinnati in the nightcap. In all, Bell and Ted Kluszewski collected 10 hits and drove in 12 Cincinnati runs.

Detroit hammered Vic Raschi and three successors for 18 safeties including four doubles and two triples.

Chiefs Down Montreal 6-3, Leafs Victorious

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Syracuse's Duke Markell a 14-game winner last year for Toronto, this season is showing the Maple Leafs why they shouldn't have let him go.

The big veteran right-hander, a native of Paris, France, won his third game of the young International Baseball League season Monday night, giving up only five hits as the Chiefs downed Montreal Royals 6-3. It was the best performance of three scheduled games.

Markell had only one bad inning, the third, in which the Canadians bunched three hits with a walk and an error to score all their runs.

Markell's cause was helped by catcher Roy Partee, who hit safely three times in five trips to the plate, and right-fielder Johnny Blatnik, who blasted a two-run, fifth-inning round-tripper.

PERFECT CONTROL

Hurler Red Fahr, a hold-over, showed perfect control in his first start of the season in leading the Leafs to a 7-2 win over Baltimore Orioles and sole possession of first place over Montreal. The right-hander allowed seven hits and struck out four men.

Starter Bob Greewood, the first of three Baltimore pitchers, took the loss—his second in as many tries. Third-baseman Mike Goliat gave Fahr a hand with a three-run first-inning homer, his second of the season.

Lefty Freddie Hahn hurled a shutout in his first start for Rochester Red Wings, whitewashing the tail-end cubs only six hits, fanned seven and walked only two.

Ottawa at Buffalo and Springfield at Rochester are the only games scheduled today.

Cavarretta Begins 20th Active Season

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Manager Phil Cavarretta of Chicago Cubs officially has started his 20th season as an active major league player.

Cavarretta, who joined the Cubs in 1934, appeared for the first time this season in Monday night's game against the Phillies. He walked as a pinch-hitter for pitcher Sheldon Jones in the ninth inning.

The veteran has a lifetime batting mark of .292 with 1,921 hits.

Sedgman Victor

DENVER, Colo. (AP)—Australian star Frank Sedgman defeated Jack Kramer 10-12, 7-5, 6-3 Monday night to gain a notch in their cross-country professional tennis tour. Pancho Segura beat Ken McGregor, also from Australia, 6-2, 2-6, 6-2 in the second singles match.

Canadiens Upset Barrie 7-4 In First Win

By AL VICKERY

WINNIPEG (CP)—An all-out team effort gave St. Boniface Canadiens their first victory in four Memorial Cup games against the Barrie Flyers Monday night.

The Habs, facing elimination with another loss, remained in the running with a 7-4 triumph over the powerful Flyers.

And coach Bryan Hextall of the Habs thinks "it's going to be a tough series yet. We've still got a long way to go."

Fifth game of the best-of-seven Canadian Junior hockey final will be played here Wednesday night, with the sixth, if necessary, at Brandon, Friday night.

The St. Boniface victory halted a 12-game eastern winning streak in Memorial Cup play. Regina Pats' single win in the fourth game of the 1950 series against Montreal Canadiens was the last time the west had wound up on the long-end of the score.

STANDOUT GAME

Goalie Hal Dalkie played a standout game, especially after suffering a cut over his right eye late in the first period. The four defencemen — Syd White, Frank Holiday, Billy Short and Ron Heindl—never looked better as a unit in the series.

White, who is team captain, dashed from player to player after the game, banging them on the back, and exclaiming:

"If they can win three straight, we can take four in a row."

The whole St. Boniface crew was a tired but happy bunch.

Barrie's coach Hap Emms was anything but happy.

"I've seen some poor officiating, but that calling, especially in the first period, was the worst ever," said Emms.

BLAMES MANAGEMENT

He also levelled a blast at the rink management.

"The ice was horrible; that is if you could call it ice. . . It was just a pool of water. In fact, the whole setup at this barn is a disgrace."

Emms said the team missed the services of speedy little Tony Poeta who only took three turns on the ice—two in the first period, one in the second, and none in the third.

Poeta, a thorn in the Habs' side in the first three games, suffered a knee injury in the second period of Friday's third game, and it has failed to respond to treatment. He missed last Saturday's workout and has been hobbling around ever since. He is a doubtful starter Wednesday.

Skip Teal, with two, and Doug Mohns—from Barrie's first-string line—and defenceman Don Cherry bagged the losers' goals.

SEVEN GOALS

Canadiens' seven goals went to Leo Konyk, Bill Short, Barry Thorndycraft, Lou Marius, Gabe Pankhurst, Garry Blaine and Len Thornson.

St. Boniface ran up a 2-0 first-period lead, increased it 5-1 in the second, then were outscored 3-2 in the final frame.

Pankhurst scored the prettiest goal of the night when he dipsy-doodled through the Barrie defence, twice losing control of the puck momentarily, and then drew out goalie Marve Edwards to score.

1954 Ball Season Will Open April 13

NEW YORK (AP)—The National League has decided to open its 1954 season the second week in April—on April 13—as in the past, president Warren Giles said Monday night after an informal meeting of league directors.

"Because of so many postponements this year, there had been some suggestions that we should open a week later, April 20," Giles said, "but after discussing the matter we decided it wouldn't be any use trying to dodge the weather."

Giles said he and Will Harridge, president of the American League, had agreed on the April 13 date.

George Kell Top Hitter In Ball League

NEW YORK (AP)—George Kell, a sparkplug in the surprising early season showing of the fourth-place Boston Red Sox, has taken over as the American League's leading hitter.

The 30-year-old third baseman, who led the junior circuit in batting in 1949, has collected 27 hits in 65 at bats for a .415 mark. Kell has 12-for-27 (.444) last week and picked up 20 points as he shot past Gene Woodling of New York Yankees.

In the National League, Johnny Wyrostek of Philadelphia Phillies, although unable to maintain last week's .500 pace, still is the pacesetter, at .451. records include games played Sunday.

DROPS TO SECOND

Woodling, sidelined with an eye inflammation last week, dropped to second in the American League at .408. The Yankee flychaser had only three hits in 13 at bats.

Davey Philley of Philadelphia Athletics and Cleveland's Al Rosen are tied for third at .380. Philley had seven safeties in 24 trips and Rosen eight-for-22.

Cincinnati's Jim Greengrass zoomed into second place in the National League with .405. The rookie outfielder had 10-for-20 last week.

Duke Snider of Brooklyn Dodgers and Hank Sauer of Chicago are deadlocked for third with .371.

Second Vote Expected On Resources

OTTAWA (CP)—A second vote in two days on government policy on natural resources development appears in prospect for today.

The Commons defeated one CCF motion Monday night—a technical vote of confidence in the government—and today it was expected to deal with another from the Progressive Conservative party.

The vote Monday night was 118 to 17 to uphold the government's resources policy. The Progressive Conservatives voted with the Liberals against the CCF and the Social Credit parties.

The parties split up in unusual fashion on a CCF amendment to a Progressive Conservative motion on resources. The Progressive Conservative motion called for a "free enterprise" program on resources and set out some points specifically. The CCF adopted the whole motion, but without the "free enterprise" angle.

NOT CONDEMNING

The vote came after Prime Minister St. Laurent had defended government policy and suggested the government could accept the Progressive Conservative motion if it were changed to propose that the House suggest the government "continue" policies the official opposition thought should be in effect.

George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, declined to accept this course, but said his party's motion was not intended as one of "condemning" the government.

From his statement, it appeared the Progressive Conservative motion to be voted on later would not be regarded by his party as one of non-confidence, though the CCF amendment to it, was technically. No CCF member disclaimed this.

Two other proposals by the Progressive Conservatives — dealing with the CBC—were lost in the House. The two attempts were aimed at tightening control by Parliament on the tax-revenue money the publicly-owned corporation gets from the treasury.

Donald Fleming (PC—Toronto Eglinton) made both moves. One was to have Parliament give an annual scrutiny to revenues going to the CBC, under the last budget, from the 15-per-cent excise tax on sales of radio and television sets and television tubes.

The second proposal was that the estimated $12,000,000-a-year revenue from radio and television set sales be allocated evenly between both these operations.

The government opposed both these. The first was ruled out of order and the second was defeated on a voice vote.

Cheese Sessions Now Postponed

STRATFORD (CP)—Cheese exchange sessions have been postponed until provincial and federal governments announce a policy on supported floor prices.

Cecil Gill, Ingersoll, secretary of the Western Ontario exchange, said Monday that today's scheduled exchange session has been called off. No date has been set for a future session.

The Cheese Producers Association has been supporting cheese prices at a basic 30 cents a pound since government assistance was lifted last January, Mr. Gill said.

Since then bids on the Western Ontario exchange have never been below 30 cents a pound. At the last exchange session in Stratford all cheese sold at the minimum 30 cent price.

COLLECT $188,888.77

Police issued 1,603 parking tickets in March as compared with 536 a year ago and 350 in March 1951. Total receipts from the meters is moving up toward the $200,000 level. At the end of March street meters had yielded $168,563.11, and city square meters $20,325.66. The street parking meters will reach their sixth anniversary on May. It was on that date in 1947 that the curb machines began their coin collecting.

COMPANY-UNION TALKS

Today the joint negotiating committee (comprising UE locals in the CGE chain) are meeting in Toronto to iron out some details in the current contract negotiations. On Wednesday and again on Thursday the company and the UE are scheduled to resume bargaining on the outstanding issues with Louis Fine, Ontario's chief conciliation officer, sitting in on the talks. The joint committee represent some 7,000 production workers in the CGE plants in Peterborough and the five Toronto plants.

Seeding Still Stalled

In a 72 mile circuit of the county Monday afternoon, Melville Johnston saw only three farmers on the land. He visited the councils of Otonabee, Asphodel and Douro on weed control business. Naturally he was interested in signs of seasonal activity, following another week end of rain.

Council Delays Decision Against Peconi

Nick Peconi has not yet received the consent of the Ontario Department of Health to operate a horse meat (for dogs) processing plant in Otonabee township.

From their interview with Mr. Peconi a week ago, city council had understood that official approval had been given to his project of a horse slaughter house in the township. The information before the committee of the whole last night was that the council of Otonabee had forwarded the Peconi petition to the Department, and that no answer had yet been received as to government action.

ACTION DEFERRED

Further action on that Peconi petition for a garage extension permit was deferred last night for a week. It will come before the finance committee next Monday. This postponement was made in response to a request from Alex. L. Elliott, solicitor for Mr. Peconi.

One of the questions asked Monday night was whether Sanitary Inspector MacPherson had inspected the horsemeat freezer on the Peconi place west of Downer's Corners. The information is to the effect that Peterborough's health department has not visited the place and doesn't officially know of it. That was an intimation ten days ago from Dr. J. P. Wells, M.O.H.

Ald. Syd Black said last night that Mr. Elliott had told him the walk-in freezer converted garage had been visited by the Sanitary Inspector and "everything was nice and clean." The inference was that Mr. Elliott had been misinformed somewhere along the line.

As to the phrase "horse meat" for dog food, Ald. Harold Rehill put a little emphasis on the kind of meat included in that idea. The great percentage of it, he said, was from animals that had died, "dead horses" for example, that were trucked from fields to the processor.

City Engineer Chalmers said he had looked in at the Peconi premises on Lansdowne St. West. "He asked me to smell a truck that is used in his business. I didn't notice much about it. He says he keeps it clean."

The following clause in the board of works was deleted in view of the letter received from A. L. Elliott: "That the application of Nick Peconi for a build-

3,500 CONTESTANTS

This group is the first of a total of more than 3,500 contestants who will be taking part in the 1953 festival, May 5-12. An estimated 2,000 to 2,500 contestants will be coming to Peterborough from outside communities and districts during the festival week.

Sessions today will be made up completely of verse and choral speaking and drama classes. The music sessions will start Wednesday evening.

The festival committee has engaged two top English musical adjudicators, George Heath-Gracie and John Russell to judge the music classes. Both men are well-known musicians and have adjudicated at festivals throughout Great Britain. This is a return trip to Peterborough for Mr. Heath-Gracie.

This year, as last year, the evening sessions will take the form of a concert with senior classes, and classes believed to have the greatest public interest, scheduled.

Wednesday evening's session will include vocal solo, piano solo and accordion solo and band classes as well as girls' double and triple trio classes.

Cobourg Sea Cadet Bound For Coronation

COBOURG— (ENS) — Russell Lake, 11th Grade collegiate student here, who leaves soon to go over to England for the Coronation, was presented with a cheque by the Cobourg Collegiate Student Council yesterday. The presentation took place in the school auditorium where the 18-year-old Indian youth was congratulated by principal R. N. McKenzie for being chosen to be among the 12 sea cadets going to the Coronation. The cheque was presented by Bob Morris, president of the Student Council.

Son of Mr. and Mrs. Austen Lake, the youth is Chief Petty Officer in the Sea Cadet Corps, "Skeena," and is rated as a competent sea cadet. He left Monday afternoon for Halifax.

SEVERAL THOUSAND CANADA GEESE, a reported 13 flocks, rafted down onto Chemong Lake this morning. Perhaps they were some of the many flocks seen going north on Monday. The photographer chased them by canoe for two miles and only succeeded in getting a distant take-off picture but coming back to town a family of young killdeer were easier stalking. One well-camouflaged chick is shown in the long drab grass. Can you find it?

Site For Centre Not Identified, Hanging Fire

The property which the city "will buy", after discussion by the committee of the whole council with members of the building committee of the Memorial Community Centre was not identified at the meeting of the council Monday night.

A report from the committee of the whole, which was read by Ald. Pat Anglesey, comprised one clause. "That the Mayor be authorized to inform the owners of certain property located within the City of Peterborough, that the city will purchase this property, and that the Mayor also negotiate the details of purchase of this property."

Its adoption was moved by Ald. Anglesey and seconded by Ald. H. S. Longhurst. There was no opposition to it.

The preamble to the report was: "Your committee of the whole begs leave to report as follows: "Messrs. Jebson, Neal, Riley and Bradburn of the Memorial Centre Building committee met with your committee and discussed various aspects and made certain recommendations in connection with the Memorial Centre."

There was no press notice of any conference of representatives of the Centre building committee and the city council

NOTE FROM MAYOR

On the council's file Monday night was a note from Mayor Waddell that in view of the valuation reached by the assessment department on the Dominion Woollens property, he had not made further negotiations with regard to the purchase of this property." It was referred to the finance committee which meets next Monday night.

That removes any doubt that the property under consideration for purchase is the field at the northeast corner of Monaghan Road and McDonnel St., and west of and inclusive in the property of Dominion Woollen and Worsteds Ltd

The inference is that the city is contemplating the purchase of that vacant field for the site of the Community Centre.

Advocates of a Morrow Park site for the Centre have been stressing the grants which are obtainable from the federal and provincial governments on condition that the proposed Centre would be available for agricultural purposes, thereby enlarging the usefulness of Morrow Park itself in the interest of agriculture in this county and district, as specifically stipulated by the late H. A. Morrow.

That group who are interested in what they have been regarding and hoping for as possibilities stress the prospect of obtaining grants that would come close to settling the financial aspect of the building of the Centre.

In the information that is passed on to the public from Monday night's meeting and decision there is no definitive statement from the council as to the Morrow Park possibility in considering the Centre site.

The council of several years ago had talked of acquiring the Lock-Lansdowne corner of the park by expropriation, if need be, but that idea apparently folded up and passed out of the confused picture.

From several accounts, it is learned that Dominion Woollens are quite ready to sell their vacant field. In the news from the City Hall the only connection of the west end property with the Centre is the fact that of the conversations of its building committee with the committee of the council.

Coronation Day In 1937 A Celebration To Remember

Coronation Day—June 2—is four weeks away. Peterborough is waiting to hear whether it will be declared a holiday, whether there will be a parade, and wanting to hear what preparations have been made. The Coronation Day committee, a large one, has made a few steps, but they too are hampered by not knowing whether the day will be a holiday.

At present, the committee is making plans for an evening celebration having the feeling that a holiday will not be declared.

Coronation Day in 1937—May 12—was certainly a holiday. More than 15,000 lined the main streets of Peterborough to witness the parade that that year's coronation committee had organized.

GATHERED AT ARMOURIES

Before that a huge crowd had gathered in the Armouries to hear an assortment of speakers from laity and clergy point out the significance and purpose of the coronation. The celebrations of that 1937 day continued into the night.

At Burnham's Point, a massive fireworks display was touched off by members of the fire department. This display was climaxed by the firing of a signal rocket.

On Milburn's Hill—where the OPP radio tower now stands—a group of Boy Scouts waited to touch off a huge beacon, a link in a chain of beacons across the dominion that were being fired by Scouts as their part in the Coronation demonstrations. They fired it when the signal rocket burst.

Earlier in the day, on Armour Hill, a royal salute of 21 guns was fired by members of the 4th Battery of the Royal Canadian Artillery. Crowds journeyed from the Armouries to the heights to see and hear the salute fired.

MANY DECORATIONS

The city was ready for a coronation. Streets were decorated in profusion with evergreens, royal crests, flags, bunting, and evidence of patriotism was visible at every turn of the head.

Led by 200 veterans, the parade started shortly after the mass meeting in the Armouries. Two hundred and fifty members of the Prince of Wales Rangers, accompanied by their bugle band, followed the First World War veterans. Officers and men of the 4th Field Battery joined in, the fire and police departments, the collegiate cadet corps with its bugle band.

Local industries and businesses entered more than a dozen floats in he parade, all brightly decorative and symbolic of some aspect of the country's life or of the coronation itself.

After the parade ended, members of the Rangers put on a machine gun drill at Exhibition Park while three pursuit aircraft from the RCAF station at Trenton dived and zoomed and rolled overhead.

That was Coronation Day, 1937.

Those preparations took many weeks of work, more than the four that lie between today and Coronation Day, 1953.

Ready To Fly Pearson Here

About 500 people are expected tonight to hear the Hon. Lester B. Pearson speak at the dinner marking the 25th anniversary in Peterborough of Outboard Marine and Manufacturing Co.

Mr. Pearson, Minister for External Affairs, is busy in the House of Commons today as his department is presenting its budget to the house.

In Ottawa, an Outboard Marine aircraft, with vice-president Larry Tremblay aboard, waits for the house to adjourn for the day and free Mr. Pearson for his engagement here.

From Ottawa the plane will fly to Oshawa where a car will be in readiness, complete with an escort of provincial police cars.

The dinner is sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce and will be held at Club Aragon. Present will be persons prominent in industry, business and politics. The dinner, open to the public, is almost a complete sell-out, Chamber officials said today.

Store Elevator Falls Four Storeys; Elderly Man Fractures Both Knees

Caretaker Resting Comfortably In Hospital After 50-Foot Plunge Alone Helping Repairman Fixing Shaft Walls

Frederick Griffin, 1202 Kenneth Ave., 77-year-old caretaker at the Robert Fair Co. store on George St., fractured both knees, his wrist and heel shortly before 4 p.m. Monday when the store's elevator, which he was operating, plummeted four stories down to the main floor, a distance of between 50 and 60 feet. Mr. Griffin was reported in fair condition today at Civic Hospital where he was resting comfortably.

Police attributed the elevator's plunge to failure of one of the working parts of the machinery in the basement.

Just before the accident occurred, Mr. Griffin was inside the elevator car at the fourth floor where Earl Whitney of 17 James Street, Trenton, was repairing the inside walls of the elevator shaft from a position on top of the car.

DROPPED AFTER MOVE

Mr. Whitney got off the car and asked Mr. Griffin to move it down a short distance so that he could work more easily. When the car was moved, it dropped out of control to the main floor with Griffin inside.

Mr. Whitney rushed down to the main floor and arrived at the elevator at the same time as C. W. Collins, store manager, who had been in the basement and rushed upstairs when he heard the crash and the falling elevator. The two men lifted Mr. Grifiin out of the car and called police who immediately summoned a doctor and the Nesbitt ambulance which took Mr. Griffin to Civic Hospital after emergency medical treatment.

BREAK IN MACHINERY

PC Bert Howden, who investigated with PC Edward Stephen, said that a U-shaped casting in the elevator's machinery in the basement had broken in two places. The casting was attached to a shaft which worked a hydraulic cylinder and operated the wheels and cables of the elevator.

When the break occurred, the elevator was thrown out of control, allowing the car to plunge the 50 or 60 feet to the ground floor of the store.

Informatron was that the equipment is subject to government inspection at least every three months and had been inspected a short time ago. The breaks in the casting were new and not at a spot where it had previously been welded.

Dead Firecracker Explodes In Boy's Face

A 16-year-old Haldimand Township Collegiate student narrowly escaped being blinded late Monday afternoon when he bent over to examine a sputtering firecracker and it exploded in his face.

He is now in Civic Hospital with what Dr. A. R. Stevenson, oculist, has diagnosed as superficial burns. And he will likely be there for four or five days.

The injured youth is Arthur Reid, 16, son of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Reid of R R 5, Colborne. Arthur came home from Cobourg Collegiate on Monday afternoon and lit a firecracker in the back shed of the house.

The firecracker sputtered for a while and the burning wick seemed to fizzle out so Arthur bent over to examine it. As he examined it the firecracker exploded burning him about the eyes.

One of his sisters heard him cry out and she told his mother. He was then taken to Civic by a neighbor.

At the time he said he could not see out of his right eye and the left eye was also injured. Dr. Stevenson said today that he thought Arthur would be all right.

Captive In Korea

Indoctrination Lessons Commence

(Sixth in a Series)

By PHILIP DEANE,
Correspondent of The Observer, London

Walter Eltringham and Mgr. Thomas Quinlan lifted Father Paul Villemot and carried him out into the courtyard to do P.T: (physical training). The "Tiger" took his pistol away from Commissioner Lord's head. That afternoon, Paul Villemot died in the country he had refused to leave on retirement. Sister Mary Clare, the Anglican nun, was already dead. The other old priests were dying. Father Jules Gombert, aged seventy-four and a shadow of his former self, told me:—

"I know I am sinning, but I want to die, Monsieur Philip. I am giving the poor sisters so much trouble and I am disgusting, so smelly, so covered with lice that I cannot bear it. The good Lord is making me weaker. I do hope you will survive, my son." The old man, putting his arms around my neck, wept. The next morning I had to help carry him out for P.T. In the afternoon he died. Mgr. Quinlan, gaunt, his feet—misshapen by beri-beri and frostbite—stretching his Korean rubber slippers, buried them all, standing in the biting wind, his thin summer-weight soutane with the red piping blown about him, still smiling.

"Sure and they're in Heaven praying for us now," he said. And if any of us criticised any Korean in his presence:—

"Now, now, remember his mother loves him. He's just misguided, the poor lad."

The Yalu River was less than a mile away, but the guards would not allow water to be fetched more than once a day. There were G.I.'s I was told—this I could not check personally—who did not have water for five days and who died of thirst.

Walter Eltringham, the E.C.A. (American Economic Co-operation Administration) engineer, saw I had some water in a bottle.

"Pal," he said, "I'm dying, I mean it. I haven't had a drink in two days. Give me a gulp."

That night, because there had been a raid on the nearby town, Chung Kang Djin, we were moved to a neighbouring village called Ha Djang Nee. The population was turned out and their homes and the school were given over to us. On the way there Walter Eltringham collapsed. He died, without regaining consciousness, the next day. The "special group" of diplomats and journalists was kept waiting outside a house for three hours in the extreme cold while the other prisoners-of-war were being billeted. Then we were told to walk into the house before which we had stood all this time. During our stay at Ha Djang Nee from November 17, 1950, to February 2, 1951, we changed quarters three times. The average accommodation was seven people to a room nine feet by nine feet. The worst was during the month of January—ten to a room nine feet by nine. We stayed packed like that for a whole month. The wood supply was not sufficient to provide any heating. One of the officers told us that faggots had to be brought twenty miles, that there was no fuel any nearer in this denuded country. Food consisted of a quantity of grain a day—we were told it was 600 grams—and about one stringy Chinese cabbage per day for ten persons. There were some distributions of oil in very small quantities. Meat was issued in small quantities on a number of occasions. Sugar and white rice were given to the sick, but the issues were unpredictable. On January 1, 1951, there was a large meal of pork meat, rice and peanuts.

The special group of diplomats and and journalists were given canvas sacks filled with straw to use as mattresses. They had been given thin padded cotton clothes on December 15; the other internees did not receive warm clothing until the second week in January.

A barber was brought from Chung Kank Djin for the special group; he told us that the thermometer outside the lumber company office showed forty degrees below zero. And still we had no winter footwear. In sandals or rags, we had to attend food distributions, waiting sometimes three to four hours for our rations. When we returned to our billets, our co-inmates would crowd around us to help us warm up. It took a very long time. We also had to carry water from a well about 200 yards away. The well rope was frozen solid and stuck to our hands. The bucket leaked so much that we always brought it up half-empty. In that we we filled a twenty-five-gallon drum which had to be carried between two, slung on a pole.

"I always hated water," said Perruche, the French charge d'affaires from Seoul, nursing his fingers burnt by the frozen rope and somehow managing to smile, "but after this I'll even wash my teeth with wine."

Soon after our arrival in Ha Djang Nee, indoctrination and "education" were started. The Koreans said they were very anxious that the prisoners should not let themselves brood, that they should be happy, that they should organize themselves like the guards.

"Look", said the indoctrinator. "I've put a blackboard here. Now you must rid yourselves of the survivals of capitalism and become our brothers. We believe in criticism and self-criticism. I will start this self-criticism by telling you I have not always done all I could for you. I am sorry. I will do more in the future. And now criticism. The guard who is on duty now has behaved badly we shall punish him. Haven't any of you something to say? Please, won't someone confess? All right, perhaps you do not want to do it openly. Write it on the blackboard when I am gone."

Later that day he came back and looked at the blank blackboard. Then he brought out his flute and started playing for the benefit of the G.I.s in the freezing schoolroom.

"Please," said the indoctrinator, "won't those of you who are well let the sick come near the stove?"

Nobody moved. The sick were kept away from the stove by those who were well. Captivity and ill-treatment breed selfishness as well as self-sacrifice.

Former UFO Dies

ST. THOMAS (CP)—Michael McKnight, 80, United Farmers' organization member of the Ontario legislature about 30 years ago, died Monday. Born in Malahide township, Mr. McKnight was a former farmer and grocer in the Aylmer area. He served in the legislature during the UFO government under E. C. Drury.

HIDING HIS GUILT—Peter Bozzelli (left), here feigning grief as he meets his son, Marine Cpl. Robert Bozzelli, at a Philadelphia airport, later confessed that it was he who had killed his daughter, Gloria, 24. The body had been found in a duffel bag at Mays Landing, N.J., and the elder Bozzelli played the grief-stricken father role for several days before confessing. In the photo above, he was greeting Robert on the latter's return home for the funeral and hiding his grim secret well.

U.N. School Laboratory To Raise Living Standards

PATZCUARO—One of the most interesting laboratories in the world is operating here, the United Nations Educational Scientific and Cultural School better known as UNESCO or CREFAL. They deal not with test tubes, but with people. Twenty Tarascan villages with 10,000 people surrounding the town are used to test theories and programs to improve the standard of living.

Students from Bolivia, Haiti, Ecuador, Brazil, Costa Rica, El Salvador, Honduras, Guatemala, Peru, Mexico, Cuba, Venezuela, Panama, Paraguay, Uruguay, Colombia have attended or are attending this school. This year there will also be 10 from the United States and five from Siam.

The main purpose of the UNESCO school is fundamental education. This is to help people understand their immediate problems and to give them skills to solve them through their own efforts. It is an emergency solution designed to help masses of illiterate adults and children in countries where educational facilities have been inadequate. It is an attempt to salvage a generation by giving it the minimum of education needed to improve its way of life, its health, its social, economic and political organization.

The international school centres around La Erendira, a mansion donated by General Lazaro Cardenas, former president of Mexico, along with adjacent buildings and 16 acres of land. Mexico has played a large part in the establishment of the centre supplying land, buildings and local services. Throughout the whole program students are taught that they should expect help from no one but themselves. The officials say it is the only way because they will never have the money to hire outside help to do these jobs.

HAVE 164 STUDENTS

The school which opened May 9, 1951 had a group of 50 students. The course is 20 months, of which one month is vacation. The present group comprises 64 students and it is planned to keep adding more till an enrolment of 200 is reached. In April there will be 100 more students admitted making a total of 164.

The different governments select candidates for this training and then the United Nations makes its student selections from these groups. There is a quota system from the Latin American countries, 5 from each country but Mexico. But the scale is now flexible, some countries sending fewer candidates and others being allowed more.

Many of the people who come are already specialists in their own line. Some have been taeachers in rural areas, directors of normal schools or inspectors; there are agronomists, social workers and nurses.

The goal of the program is to train 5,000 fundamental education specialists. These graduates in turn will staff similar training centres organized on national and local lines. It is the latter centres which will train the teachers to work in the field. Upon completion of the course, these people are expected to work for their governments for at least three years.

WORK AS TEAM

Under the UNESCO plan, the students operate at the school and afterwards not as individuals, but as a team. A typical team studying at the centre may include an adult educator, a sanitary engineer, a nurse, a rural school teacher and an agricultural expert. Others who are specialists will be trained how to put their technical knowledge to work in undeveloped regions through basic education techniques.

A group which has just returned to Haiti is beginning a small project in the north like UNESCO. The whole team is working together. In Guatemala, one of the graduates has just gone to open a Fundamental Education department.

There are five members on each team and they work on such things as problems of health, better farming methods, etc. Each works in one or two communities and each member of the group does a different thing but has to have a little knowledge of the other jobs.

STRONG OPPOSITION

Some of the 20 communities used for experimental purposes are still opposed to the strangers. At first students had a very difficult time, officials said. The key which finally unlocked the door for them was recreation. The Tarascans had never learned how to play.

When the team first went in they had to play games by themselves. No one would show up. But they persevered and gradually boys began to sidle up and look on. Then the UNESCO people would toss a ball to someone on the sidelines. That was the beginning. As time passed, they visited the houses and finally a whole community became interested.

An Ecuador girl recalling those early days said: "It was so bad the people used to try and frighten us. They would even sick their dogs on us to chase us away."

"The people were afraid that we were out to change their religion and ways too much. But after a year's work on the island of La Pacanda, the results roused the envy of many of the other islands and they began asking the team to come and work with them," Miss Frieda Hernandez, a Mexican girl told me.

MUST WORK THEMSELVES

"We operate in a special way. We make them do the work themselves so that when the team goes they will be anxious to carry on on their own. Usually th first projects are latrines and water purification. One of the big things that gave us a break was an outbreak of cholera among the pigs. We had a vaccination campaign and offered our help. Ever since that we have been friends. Even though the people are very poor and have to buy their own vaccines, they were so impressed wit' the results that now they com voluntarily and ask for it."

In agriculture, UNESCO has been supplying six different kinds of wheat for the people to try. Now that they have seen the results, they are being taught to select seeds, use fertilizer and to plant vegetables for use in the homes. The Home Economics teacher is introducing the high stoves in the houses. The younger people use them, but many of the older women stick to the low ones they have used for generations.

Co-operatives are one of the newer projects being organized at present. They want to help the people sell their products. It takes a long time however, and they are only beginning.

A U.N. architect arrived in Patzcuaro only a month ago and his job is to help with the buildings. They are hoping to make a sample community. For two years team members have been preaching the use of windows. When they came to see the finished home of one man who had consulted them, there were no windows. When they asked why the man said "Oh, we just forgot them."

COMMUNITY SPIRIT

The UNESCO school has brought something new to these Indians—the feeling of neighborliness and a community spirit. The teams have become so popular in some places that it would make your heart ache, Miss Hernandez said. When one team was leaving to go home, everyone brought presents. The people were desperately poor but they brought what they had. One woman brought half a litre of milk, another gave bread, etc. It was the greatest tribute they could have given, she declared.

The recreation specialists have also been teaching groups to dance. At San Pedro there is a large group of men who have been doing traditional dances. The team taught them a new dance from another region and even when the instructors are no longer there the people get together of an evening for this new entertainment.

Another important phase is the literacy drive. Usually a group works in the social centre of the community which may be a school. They try to get the people together for recreation and co-operation; they have a mobile library and they print a small newspaper. There are night classes for adults to teach them to read and write. They use special books prepared by one section of the UNESCO staff. They use only words and drawings which will have a practical daily use to these people. Otherwise the adults would see no reason learning something which didn't touch their way of life.

CHEAP TEXT BOOKS

The Production Centre makes cheap posters and text books. Because their funds are limited they have developed an inexpensive printing without mimeographing, which costs almost nothing. There are requests even coming from Africa for the method because they have a similar problem.

For three months after they arrive the students have intensive courses and seminars. They are given ideas, projects and aims. The last week of that period they have discussions with specailists and they then go out on field work. The fundamental teachings are divided into five sections: health, economics, recreation, home economics and literacy and civic training.

The Director General of the UNESCO School is Professor Lucas Ortiz Benitez, who has been doing splendid work since the organization was founded. Professor Ortiz was a former head of rural education in Mexico.

INJURED IN TORNADO—An injured child is treated at an aid station in Warner Robins, Ga., after tornadoes ripped through the town and surrounding areas, killing 13 and injuring hundreds. The death toll brought to at least 25 the total number killed in the three-day rampage of a cyclonic front that swept to the Atlantic seaboard from Texas. Warner Robins was "completely desolated" by the twisters.

Big Project

MADRAS, India (CP)—Work has begun on the first stage of a project to expand the port of Madras. Plans for the second stage now are being examined, the entire scheme being estimated at about $10,000,000.

Charges Eviction Due To Complaints

TORONTO (CP)—Albert Haddrall 54, told a court Monday that he and his son were evicted from their wartime housing apartments because they had led a delegation to complain of living conditions

Haddrall was appearing in court to oppose eviction by real estate agent Harold Locke, who operates the West Toronto housing unit for the city.

Locke said he was evicting the family for "purely personal reasons."

Judge H. Barton confirmed the eviction order.

Ernest Hemingway Wins Pulitzer Prize

NEW YORK (AP)—Ernest Hemingway Monday won the first Pulitzer Prize in his 30-year career as a rugged, outdoor novelist for his vivid short novel, "The Old Man and The Sea."

The 1953 Pulitzer drama award went to William Inge, Kansas-born playwright, for his Broadway hit, "Picnic," a play with a mid-West setting. It opened here Feb. 19 and previously had won the New York Drama Critics Circle award and others as the season's best play.

There were two repeat winners in this year's lists of awards made by the trustees of Columbia University.

They were Archibald MacLeish in the field of poetry, and Don Whitehead of The Associated Press in the realm of national reporting. MacLeish last was honored in 1933 and Whitehead in 1951.

The New York Times won its second special Pulitzer citation, this time for its Sunday edition section, "Review of the Week."

Other Pulitzer awards announced were given for:

Meritorius public service by a newspaper—The Whiteville, N.C., News Reporter and the Tabor City, N.C., Tribune for their successful campaign against the Ku Klux Klan.

International reporting — Austin Wehrwein of the Milwaukee, Wis., Journal for a series of articles on Canada.

Kitchener Whips Penticton, Walloping Gillson 5-3

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP)—Bobbie Gillson was working again Monday night, but the Owen Sounder's efforts in Penticton Vs' net didn't stop Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen.

The Dutchmen swarmed over Gillson to defeat the western representatives in the Allan Cup finals 5-3 and take a 3-1 lead in games in the best-of-seven series.

Gillson was called in by the Vs Saturday night to replace the injured regular goalie Ivan McClelland and his efforts helped greatly to give the Vs their first series victory.

The Dutchmen filed an official protest with the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association over Gillson's presence. They claimed permission for his use wasn't gained from Owen Sound Mercurys with whom Gillson played during the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A series.

George Dudley, CAHA secretary-manager, said in Midland, Ont., that he had received a telegram from the Dutchmen, but he did not expect the official protest, sent by mail, to arrive until today. He said he would then have to order an airmail vote of the CAHA executive.

Gillson was forced to work harder than he did Saturday night. The agile netkeeper made 47 stops Monday night, compared to 44 his first night out. He stopped 17 in the first period when the teams battled to a 1-1 tie.

The Vs took a 3-2 lead in the second period, but in the third the Dutchmen launched a powerful attack and swept into the lead much to the delight of the 6,719 fans.

The series crowd total now stands at approximately 29,000.

The fifth game will be played here Wednesday night.

Kitchener opened the scoring when Clare Martin connected with Greig Hicks' pass at 2:23. But 25 seconds later Bill Warwick hit the corner for Penticton. Willie (Scrap Iron) Schmidt sent the Vs ahead mid-way in the second period when he sent home Doug Kilburn's passout.

Dutchmen knotted the count when Don Bauer scored on a pass from Art Hurst. Then Grant Warwick put the Vs ahead at 12:10.

The Dutchmen unleased their third-period assault when Doug Verity tied it up on Howie Lee's pass. Don Rope poked home Hicks' relay at 7:40 and then from the face-off Al Buchanan sent in a goal-mouth pass by Rope.

Penticton coach Bill Carse raging over the officiating, said after the game the Vs planned an immediate appeal to have referees Vic Lindquist and Lorne Linden of Winnipeg replaced, if possible, by National Hockey League officials for the fifth game.

Kitchener club officials also criticzed the refereeing.

"These guys have elephant ears" yelled Carse. "They're not capable of refereeing peewee games . . . They can't keep up with the play and don't even know how to face off properly."

OLSON, YOUNG TO MEET

NEW YORK (AP)—Bobo Olson of San Francisco and Honolulu, and Paddy Young, New York, agreed Monday to meet June 19 in Madison Square Garden for the U.S. middleweight championship. The winner probably will meet the European titleholder for the world crown. It will be a 15-round bout.

Indian Boxer Slugs Way To Montreal Win

MONTREAL (CP)—Wilf Desjarlais, the Indian boy from Regina whose punches land like the hind legs of a kicking mule, takes on a cagey veteran tonight in the semi-finals of the Canadian amateur boxing championships.

Fighting in the 139-pound class, Desjarlais runs up against Fred Daigle of Montreal, a member of Canada's 1948 Olympic Boxing team who came out of retirement this year.

The 18-year-old battler from Regina caught the fancy of the crowd at the opening of the three-day tournament Monday night when he slugged his way to a win over tough Gaspard Bourhard of Montreal, who believes in crowding in and throwing solid punches.

Desjarlais went into the fight with a jaw so sore from a bothersome wisdom tooth that even application of vaseline to his face before the bout was painful.

BEST OF 14 BOUTS

It was by far the best of the night's 14 lively bouts. More than half the battlers in tonight's semi-finals either had byes Monday night or their weight class was not on the card.

Daigle had a tough job getting by the preliminary round with a decision over Gerry Phelps of Montreal that was booed but his third-round finish with hard rights that brought blood from Phelps' nose appeared to give him the edge.

Danny Saunders of Hamilton, winner in the only bout that failed to go the three-round limit, meets Roman Moraresh of Montreal in the 147-pound class.

Saunders won by a technical knockout after 1:37 of the last round over Gene Powers of Toronto. The bout was stopped because of a deep cut over Powers' eye. Moraresh, using a right effectively, took the decision over Bob Hickie of Melville, Sask.

SCORES OVER SCOTT

Gale Kirwin of Ottawa won over Mike Scott of Montreal in the 125-pound class, scoring a knockdown in the second round for an automatic eight count. He meets Peter Kawulia of Winnipeg who had a bye in the preliminary card.

Ralph Hozak, a southpaw from Bar Head, Alta., and Lloyd Lawrence of Toronto qualified to meet in a 156-pound affair tonight.

Hozak decisioned Montreal's Marcel Durand with effective long lefts. Lawrence won an unpopular decision over Willie Durant of Montreal.

In the 165-pound class, Burke Emery of Montreal, who won by default over Richard Walton, Montreal, will meet Hamilton's Elmer Gelzins, who took a close decision from Pinkey Mitchell, Ottawa RCAF.

Brazilian Tractor Earnings Reported Increased Since '52

By FORBES RHUDE

TORONTO (CP)—Brazilian Traction, Light and Power Co., Ltd., Brazil's major public utility had net profit in 1952 of $42,169,630 (U. S.), or about 19 per cent above 1951's profit of $35,233,677.

The company's annual report, released today, along with the favorable earnings also indicates a problem.

Brazil's booming internal economy wants to buy more and more of the company's services; but Brazil's shortage of foreign exchange, resulting from an unfavorable balance of trade, makes it difficult to get the foreign currencies needed to pay for the portions of new facilities which must be imported.

Cash expenditures or expanded facilities by Brazilian's operating companies during the last three years were: $81,154,389 in 1952; $67,154,124 in 1951; and $56,000,389 in 1950. The report states:

LARGELY COMPLETED

"With the exception of the Forcacava underground power plant and its six generating units with a total installed capacity of 330,000 KW (in the Rio de Janeiro area), the construction program financed with the assistance of funds borrowed from the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development was largely completed by the end of 1952.

"Of the $90,000,000 loan agreed to be made by the company by the International Bank, $84,029,136 had been drawn down at Dec. 31."

Further programs are being lined up. One is a 160,000 KW steam-electric plant at Piratininga, on the outskirts of Sao Paulo, on which work has started and whose first unit is expected to be in service in the latter part of next year.

The joint Brazil-United States economic development commission and the Brazilian government have approved this project and discussions are in progress with the International Bank in regard to financing the amount of dollars needed, estimated at $18,900,000. Total cost of the project is estimated at the equivalent of $36,000,000.

Work has also started on a new underground hydro-electric station near the company's present plant at Cubatao, to serve the Sao Paulo system. Present plans call for four 65,000 KW units, of which the first two are scheduled to be brought into service in late 1955. Total cost of the undertaking, including provision of the additional water required, is estimated at the equivalent of $52,000,000.

TINDALL BACK AS COACH

KINGSTON (CP)—Frank Tindall, who recently resigned after six years as coach of athletics at Queen's University, has reconsidered his retirement plans and Monday accepted a new two-year contract.

Tindall, who coached the Golden Gaels in both senior football and basketball, submitted his original resignation in January. Last month the university's athletic board of control let it be known it was offering him a new contract.

A native of Syracuse, N.Y., and a former all-star lineman and line coach with Toronto Argonauts of the Big Four Football Union, Tindall came to Queen's in 1939. He returned to the U.S. the following year when Canadian college athletics were suspended during the war and came back to the Tricolor in 1948.

Tindall's acceptance of the new contract establishes a record at Queen's. Until Monday, Tindall and Ted Reeve, former Balmy Beach football player and well-known Toronto sports columnist, were tied in length of service with the Gaels, each serving six years.

However, Reeve coached the Tricolor to three intercollegiate gridiron titles during his six years at Queen's. The best Tindall has done was a second in 1939.

Finds Canadian Youth Talented Johnson Says

MONTREAL (CP) — Edward Johnson, former director of the New York Metropolitan Opera, said Monday Canada is wealthy in one of the most important natural resources of all—in the talents of her young people.

Addressing the annual luncheon of the women's committee of Les Concerts Symphoniques, he said if Canada takes the trouble to develop these talents, this country could very well become a leader in the world of music.

He urged that music be established as a regular subject in schools and said Canada would do well to get over her modesty and start organizing herself.

May Review Sentence Of Wm. Oatis

LONDON (Reuters)—The terms of an amnesty decree issued by the Communist government of Czechoslovakia Monday focussed attention on the case of William Oatis, Associated Press correspondent jailed as a "spy" by the Communists.

Oatis was sentenced to 10 years in Prague in July 1951. The court ruled that half this sentence would be remitted in the event of "good behavior."

The amnesty decreed by President Antonin Zapotocky frees at once all persons serving jail sentences of less than 12 months and youths and pregnant women sentenced to no more than two years.

REDUCES SENTENCES

It also reduces sentences in certain specified cases. While it does not apply automatically to "saboteurs, spies" and some other categories of prisoners, it does provide that the cases of those sentenced for espionage, sabotage and certain other offences may be reviewed and reductions recommended.

This clause opens the way for the United States government to make a fresh approach to the Czech government asking for a "review" of the sentence on Oatis.

Washington called the trial and conviction "a ludicrous travesty of justice."

Deifenbaker To Be Candidate

PRINCE ALBERT (CP)—Word was received here from Ottawa Monday that John Diefenbaker will stand for the Progressive Conservative nomination in the federal riding of Prince Albert.

The long-awaited statement from the fiery opposition member in the Commons ended a temporary lull in political activity here begun when Mr. Diefenbaker addressed a mass meeting organized by the "Diefenbaker club" movement almost two weeks ago.

This group, including members of all political parties, attempted to obtain Mr. Diefenbaker's nomination here, following drastic alterations in his former riding of Lake Centre.

The riding now is represented by Frank Helme, Liberal, who last year announced his intended retirement.

In the redistribution of seats following the 1951 census Mr. Diefenbaker's riding of Lake Centre was amalgamated with Moose Jaw represented by Ross Thatcher, CCF member.

City Clerk Reviews System Of City Voting On 'Vote-For-Four' Question

The following is the text of City Clerk Outram's report to the council about the circumstances of Peterborough's retreat from the ward system of electing members of the council. This review was prompted by resolutions from organized labor urging rescission of the "must vote for four" restriction, and on the other hand "return to the ward system."

"The Council knows the present procedure as set out in the Private Bill of the City of Peterborough passed by the Ontario Legislature in 1918 and which has been in operation since.

"The following are some facts that I have been able to accumulate giving the background in this matter. The Peterborough Examiner on December 4, 1917, reported a debate in city council on the matter of dispensing with the ward system and electing aldermen by general vote. On December 8th of the same year a synopsis of the proposed bylaw for a two-year term by general vote appeared in the Examiner and this same advertisement appeared regularly until election day of January 1, 1918. On December 10th in the Examiner there was an editorial stating that the change was asked for by Labor and the Examiner appealed to the voters to support the bylaw in order to secure a better quality of candidate for council. It quoted in part, 'It is undeniable that the general character of city council is improved in representative quality and executive ability when it owes its election to the approval of the general vote of the electorate.'

"Other editorials urging support appeared in the Examiner up to election day and the paper reported on January 2, 1918 that the bylaw favoring election by general vote with a two-year term had been passed by the majority of the electors.

"Carrying the matter further, particularly to establish when and why the council decided to require the electors to mark their ballots for four candidates or otherwise spoil their ballot, the following information was obtained by studying the then current copies of the Examiner.

"On February 1 and February 15, 1918, there appeared in the Peterborough Examiner a notice of application to the legislative assembly of the Province of Ontario, dated January 10, 1918, and signed by G. N. Gordon, city solicitor.

The following is an excerpt from this notice:

"In the case of the first election of all members of the council by general vote, the first candidates receiving the highest number of votes shall be elected for two years, and the five candidates receiving the next highest number of votes shall be elected for one year, and thereafter five members of the council shall be elected each year at the annual municipal elections, and each elector voting at the annual municipal election for aldermen shall vote for at least four candidates on his ballot, otherwise such ballot shall be declared spoiled.

"This private bill was passed by the legislative assembly on March 26, 1918.

"The following is an excerpt from the Peterborough Examiner dated December 14, 1918:

"There are certain cities where the provisions of the Municipal Act are varied by special acts. Peterborough is one of them. The Peterborough special act provides that each elector must vote for at least four candidates, otherwise the ballot is spoiled and is not counted.

'The following is an excerpt from an editorial in the Peterborough Examiner dated January 3, 1919, under the heading "Reforms Suggested."

"Another alteration that is being discussed and that is undoubtedly inspired by the success of labor candidates in Wednesday's election is that in the election of aldermen and members of the Board of Education the electors shall be required to vote for the exact number of candidates to be elected and that any ballot on which a lesser number has been voted for than is actually to be chosen shall be spoiled. The object of such a plan of course is to prevent voting by slates, and after all the only way to get the full opinion of the electorate on the merit of the different candidates is to require them to vote for the exact number that is to be elected. In the election for aldermen this year, the new regulations that at least four candidates should be voted for was tried for the first time and the labor organizations used it to great advantage. The Labor vote obviously went to the four Labor candidates and to no one else, and other bodies which endorsed slates backed their selections in the same manner, so that instead of single "plumpers" these were registered on a four man scale on this occasion."

"The following were the council members in 1919: Mayor, Geo. H. Duncan; aldermen, Robt. Morrison, J. J. Turner, Jas. Hamilton, H. Gainey, Jas. Garside, Alex Murray, John Edgar, H. Phelan, A. A. McIntyre, W. H. Taylor.

"The following were the council members in 1920: Mayor, A. A. McIntyre; aldermen, Robt. Morrison, J. J. Turner, Jas. Hamilton, H. Gainey, H. Phelan, G. N. Gordon, Joseph Crowe, F. Whitehouse, R. N. Jones, R. V. Copping.

"It is evident that Labor had a fairly large representation in the 1919 council which was the first election under the new system, and again in 1920. Both these councils were known as labor councils."

Yours sincerely,
(Sgd.) E. A. Outram,
City Clerk.

Navy Lowers Age Limit

57,000 Patients In Canadian Mental Hospitals

TORONTO (CP)—Sir Ellsworth Flavelle, president of the Ontario division of the Canadian Mental Health Association, said Monday night there are more than 57,000 patients in Canadian mental hospitals.

Addressing the division's first annual meeting, Sir Ellsworth said that in its first year of operation the division had collected $6,000 in its campaign to improve facilities for the treatment of mental cases in Ontario. It had organized groups in 16 cities and towns.

Ten Canadians from nine provinces were honored with CMHA awards.

ANNUAL AWARDS

The awards are presented annually to scientists and citizens in each of Canada's provinces for outstanding contributions to the progress of the mental health movement. Named from Ontario was Mrs. R. G. Purcell of Fort William.

Mrs. Purcell, an Ontario delegate to the triennial conference of the Associated Country Women of the World, is a member of many community projects at Fort William.

Approve Measure Outlaw Discrimination

OTTAWA (CP)—The House of Commons Monday approved a government measure to outlaw discrimination in employment and union membership by reason of race, national origin, color or religion.

The bill which would apply only in fields where the federal government has labor jurisdiction still must pass the Senate.

Spokesmen for all opposition groups—Progressive Conservatives, CCF and Social Credit—supported the bill but urged the government to undertake a program of education against discrimination as well.

Labor Minister Gregg said the bill contains a provision giving the government sufficient authority to carry out a program of education.

Fears TV May Force Ball From Under Arcs

NEW YORK (AP)—Warren Giles, president of the National League, said today television may force major league baseball from under the arcs back into the daylight.

"I think we will see a contraction rather than an increase in night games," he said, "and mainly because of television.

"Years ago people had a choice whether they'd go to a movie, the theatre or a ball game. Now they have these choices plus that of whether to stay at home and look at the screen.

"With attractive schedules beamed into their homes at night, many of them choose not to go out and baseball suffers. Maybe baseball will go back to the afternoon, when the TV competition is not so stiff."

From One Cook to Another

by Mary Blake
Carnation Home Service Director

ONCE IN A LONG, LONG TIME, a really new and wonderful dessert comes your way. I'm happy to have my share in telling folks about the latest such dessert — Frosted Fondant Pudding. Perhaps you've seen the color picture of Frosted Fondant Pudding at your grocer's, or in color advertising. The secret of its luxurious smoothness and heavenly-rich flavor, is that it uses double-rich Carnation Evaporated Milk in a new way with Jell-O Puddings. That does wonders for the puddings. And this new dessert combines two marvellous flavors of quick, thrifty and wholesome Jell-O Puddings, for a new taste delight. Maybe you already have your leaflet with Frosted Fondant Pudding and with other dessert recipes from your grocer. If not, until you do get it, here's

FROSTED FONDANT Pudding

1 package Jell-O Vanilla Pudding
1 package Jell-O Chocolate Pudding
3 cups Carnation Evaporated Milk
1 cup water

Prepare Jell-O Vanilla Pudding according to package directions, but using 1½ cups Carnation Milk and ½ cup water for the milk. Do the same with the Chocolate Pudding. Cool, but do not chill. "Frost" the edges of dessert glasses. Put the puddings by spoonfuls in the glasses, alternating flavors. With a small knife, cut through puddings in a zigzag course, to "marble". Chill. Serves 8.

To "Frost" Dessert Glasses: Dip rims of glasses in slightly-beaten egg white, then in fruit sugar. Let stand until set.

VEGETABLE VARIETY can do so much to make meals enjoyable. One way that I count on achieving variety is with interesting sauces. And among my favorite sauces, is a Mock Hollandaise that gives a real lift to vegetables. It achieves that smooth richness you look for in Hollandaise, by using double-rich Carnation undiluted . . . and it gets its piquancy from thick salad dressing.

MOCK HOLLANDAISE SAUCE
(4 servings)

1 tablespoon butter
1 tablespoon flour
½ cup Carnation Milk
½ cup water
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ cup thick salad dressing

Blend butter and flour in saucepan over low heat. Mix Carnation and water. Add gradually to butter mixture, stirring constantly; stir and cook until thickened. Add salt and salad dressing, and serve at once.

There is no better proof of Carnation's quality, than the fact that Carnation Milk is used and recommended more for baby feeding than all other brands of evaporated milk combined.

WANT A WHIPPED TOPPING to add the last perfect touch to Frosted Fondant Pudding — or to berry shortcakes? Couldn't be simpler — couldn't be thriftier. Use Whipped Carnation Topping. Here's how:

Chill undiluted Carnation in freezing tray of refrigerator until small crystals form around edges. Or chill unopened can several hours on ice. Chill bowl and beater. Whip rapidly. For each ½ cup Carnation used, add 1 tbsp. lemon juice after whipping to the foamy stage. Whip stiff — sweeten to taste. (For recipes that call for whipped cream folded in, omit lemon juice and sugar).

"from Contented Cows"

IT'S SMALL WONDER if housewives become confused by claims and counterclaims for food products. How can a person be sure which is best? Well, I can speak for milk, anyway. But I'm going to be different. I won't make any claims for Carnation. I'll just let these questions and answers speak for themselves:

1. What milk is double-concentrated for double usefulness — grand for milk purposes, and for cream purposes? CARNATION.
2. What evaporated milk is specially heat-refined for super-smooth cooking results? CARNATION.
3. What evaporated milk is extra rich-tasting, for richer flavor in cooking . . . in baking . . . in coffee? CARNATION.
4. What is the world's leading brand of evaporated milk? CARNATION.

Stratosphere Snapshots

ALUMINUM has been flying high in civil and military aircraft for a good many years. Recently Prof. Pierre Demers of the University of Montreal found a new use for this air-borne metal. He used aluminum to encase a camera which he sent aloft attached to a hydrogen-filled balloon in order to photograph cosmic rays, ten miles up in the cold and empty stratosphere.

From the luxurious interiors of modern transports to the white-hot heart of a jet turbine engine, aluminum is lending its lightness and strength to Canada's aircraft industry. Aluminum Company of Canada, Ltd. (Alcan).

Campaign Methods Told Conservative Women

Some methods of election campaigning and thoughts for talking ammunition of canvassers were given to the Conservative women Monday afternoon by Miss Elizabeth Janzen of Kitchener. Miss Janzen is a Federal candidate for Waterloo North riding in the forthcoming election and was a contender in the by-election held in May, 1952. She was guest speaker at the annual meeting of the Women's Progressive Association here which was attended by many out-of-town and out-of-riding Conservative women.

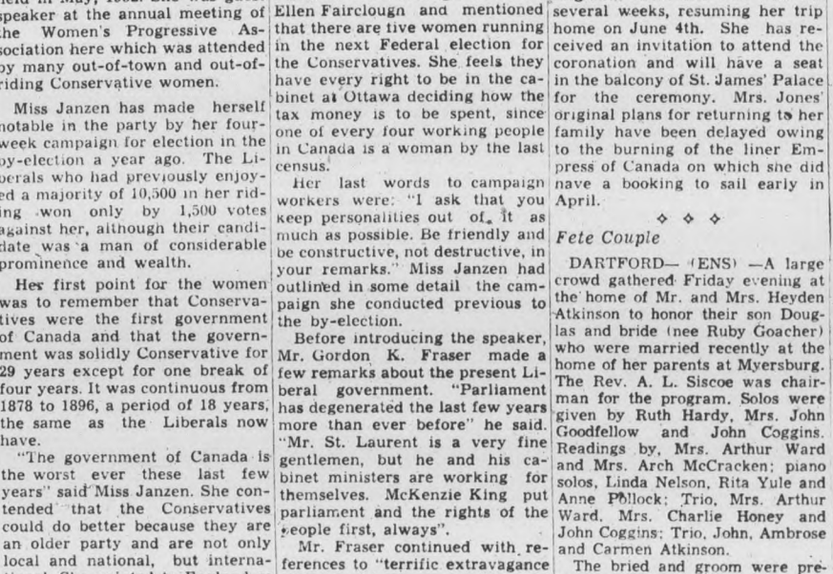
Miss Janzen has made herself notable in the party by her four-week campaign for election in the by-election a year ago. The Liberals who had previously enjoyed a majority of 10,500 in her riding won only by 1,500 votes against her, although their candidate was a man of considerable prominence and wealth.

Her first point for the women was to remember that Conservatives were the first government of Canada and that the government was solidly Conservative for 29 years except for one break of four years. It was continuous from 1878 to 1896, a period of 18 years, the same as the Liberals now have.

"The government of Canada is the worst ever these last few years" said Miss Janzen. She contended that the Conservatives could do better because they are an older party and are not only local and national, but international. She pointed to England as an example of good government.

Next she took up the matter of prejudices and propaganda being circulated concerning the Conservative leader George Drew. "I beg you to think twice before agreeing with any of these prejudices" Miss Janzen urged. "Drew is the greatest man we could have to lead our party and has the political foundations as well as the ability to be Canada's leading statesman" she asserted.

Unity of will to overcome this complex was further urged from the Conservative women by Miss Janzen's statement that "No other party gives the consideration to women that the Conservatives do." She pointed to Senator Iva Fallis of Peterborough and Mrs. Ellen Fairclough and mentioned that there are five women running in the next Federal election for the Conservatives. She feels they have every right to be in the cabinet at Ottawa deciding how the tax money is to be spent, since one of every four working people in Canada is a woman by the last census.



Her last words to campaign workers were: "I ask that you keep personalities out of it as much as possible. Be friendly and be constructive, not destructive, in your remarks." Miss Janzen had outlined in some detail the campaign she conducted previous to the by-election.

Before introducing the speaker, Mr. Gordon K. Fraser made a few remarks about the present Liberal government. "Parliament has degenerated the last few years more than ever before" he said. "Mr. St. Laurent is a very fine gentlemen, but he and his cabinet ministers are working for themselves. McKenzie King put parliament and the rights of the people first, always".

Mr. Fraser continued with references to "terrific extravagance and waste" by the present government and said "You can never expect lower taxes from that administration."

Mr. James Juby expressed the appreciation of meeting to Miss Janzen and presented her with a Peterborough-made travel alarm clock as a souvenir of her visit.

A social hour followed the meeting.

and if you want curls

IF your hair is not naturally curly . . . if you want hair that holds a curl, even in rainy weather . . . let me whisper something in your pink, shell-like ear. At night, when you go through the ritual of subdividing your hair into little sections, here's what you do. Rub a little Lanolin into the hair. Put a little on the scalp and a little on the hair surface. Then roll your hair up the way you usually do . . . using bobby pins, curlers, string, old typewriter ribbons, rubber bands or whatever appeals to you most. Then just before you crawl into bed, moisten the hair around each curler. It will dry into curls while you are asleep. In the morning, merely remove the hardware from your head, exercise the scalp and gently brush your hair. You've got a glorious surprise in store for you. Curls and waves that fall naturally into place, such as you've never dreamed possible. Your hair will be shiny with radiant highlights which will invite admiration and praise, aha . . . even romance.

DOROTHY DIX:

Girl, 21, Advised To End Affair With Married Man

DEAR MISS DIX: I am 21, and in love, "against my better judgment," with a married man six years older. My happiest moments are those spent with him. Nothing is too good for me as far as he's concerned. We enjoy "good, clean fun." We go dancing, dining, riding and walking together. He is the father of three children to whom he is devoted. His wife knows about our romance, but says she won't easily give in to his request for a divorce. He wants the custody of one daughter. We see each other two or three nights a week, though we are in daily contact by telephone. Am I wrong in dreaming of a future with him? When we're together I feel so sure about our future happiness, but when we're apart I think of all the stories I've heard and begin to worry.

MILLY A.

ANSWER: The quotes in the above letter are mine. "Good, clean fun" strikes me as being the prize euphemism for reprehensible intent, and to enter into such a relationship "against one's better judgment" is decidedly an understatement. There is, of course, nothing new with your problem, Milly, except your casual attitude towards it.

You assume that breaking a home is almost an everyday occurrence, fraught, perhaps, with just a touch of unpleasantness. You're provoked because the man's wife doesn't blithely accede to her husband's request for divorce and cheerfully turn one of her children over to a couple who clearly indicate their unfitness to care for the girl. I doubt if any court would award a child to a father who has so flagrantly flouted his marriage vows.

TEMPEST IN STORE

It would be admirable if your own moral sense dictated an end to the affair, and it would also save you future heartaches. For there is no future for you with your lover. There rarely is in a case like this. The man obviously enjoys gay times, and since a family of small children keeps his wife tied down, you have been elected as the companion for his recreational jaunts. Naturally, the furtiveness that surrounds the affair gives an added glamor to the situation that both of you are enjoying. Don't you realize that a mutual fondness for good times is scarcely a sound foundation for permanent happiness? Are you so carried away by dining and dancing that they represent to you, all there is to life? I certainly hope you wake up while you're still young enough to find a decent life partner. At 21, your "better judgment" should be sufficiently developed to guide you to the higher things of life, rather than to its back streets.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: What can a boy do or say when a girl calls on the telephone and gets romantic? She wants to know if I love her, and asks all sorts of intimate questions. Why don't mothers tell girls how to talk and act with boys? Some girls talk and laugh at things that would make us boys blush. Can you blame us for what we say to girls who make these ill-bred remarks?

WONDERING

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: You have a very good point on why so many girls fail to win or keep the attention of nice boys. Most girls don't mean anything by indiscreet speech; they just think it's a way to win a boy's favor. They couldn't be more wrong, as you point out so strongly. I do hope that many girls reading your letter will amend their ways and realize that ladylike behavior is much more appealing to young men.

It's extremely bad form, at any rate, for a girl to telephone a boy and indulge in long conversations, whether romantic or not. That sort of telephoning is the prerogative of the boy.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: In first term high I liked a boy who liked me. That is, he did until a few of my girl friends and I decided to play a joke on him. He didn't take it the way we intended, and has been angry with me ever since. Even though I apologized, it didn't do any good.

TERRY

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: Practical joking is in very poor taste, and never should be carried out unless one is absolutely sure that the object of the joke will take it in the proper spirit. Your apology should have been accepted, however, and the boy proves himself ungracious by turning it down. Better forget him, and profit by the incident.

MARY MOORE SAYS:

When Women Get Together

The lovely tulips and carnations have not wilted yet (but I have). By ten o'clock this morning the phone had rung fourteen times. It is only a few hours before deadline time,—but the Press Conference was a success and I'm happy.

Wouldn't you know they'd plan a Regional Conference just when I was president? Now I know what "Hoist on his own petard" means. I know it twice over. For I not only had to be on the conference planning committee and preside at meetings and dinners, but at one of the planning meetings we were so enthused we decided that dress at the head table should be formal, at the dinner at which Dr. Hugh Keenleyside was guest speaker.

That meant Mary had to buy a new gown—and buy a new gown she did. After four weeks of spasmodic shopping I had it . . . and harassed and all as I felt, they tell me I looked cool as a cucumber. I'm glad I bought that dress. I felt so elegant in it.

There are plenty of you in this audience who know girls who attended the Conference, such as Kay Hansula, Jean Bolton, Pamela Baker, Frances Flaherty (who won the Decorator Refrigerator — the most exciting prize at the whole affair), Jean Stenton, Jean Waldie, Pat Stevenson, Mary Hill, Marion Rogers, Gladys Arnold, Frances Baldwin . . . and an even hundred other gals famous in and out of the press world.

My, they are a stimulating crowd. It's fun wondering just how much you say is going to be quoted—I know for I do the same trick on them!

The Brunch Party on Sunday morning sponsored by the company whose slogan is "You can be sure . . . " certainly made sure that meal was novel and tops.

It was a full scale English Breakfast Party with grilled lambs' kidneys, grilled kippers, scrambled eggs, ham, bacon, muffins, sweet rolls, toast, orange juice, tomato juice, preserved figs, apples, oranges, bananas, jam, marmalade, jelly coffee . . . with second helpings too, if you could manage them.

The grilled lambs' kidneys and the preserved figs were standouts. I'm sure that Mary Louise Berteis, who is the company's head dietitian planned that menu with exacting care. For she knew that gals of such fame as Maud Kerr, and Marie Holmes, director of Chatelaine Institute were conference delegates.

Do you know how to grill a lamb's kidney? Do you use to advantage the tins of perfect ripe preserved figs we can now buy? They should be served icy cold—three or four to a serving, as a first course for breakfast or dessert for lunch or dinner.

GRILLED LAMB'S KIDNEYS

Split lambs kidneys open. This is one kidney where it is not necessary to remove veinous portion. Soak in cold water 30 minutes. Drain and dry. Brush with melted butter and broil 10 to 15 minutes under hot burner—time depends on size. Turn them once. When they are turned sprinkle with salt and pepper, and if you like ever so little dry mustard. Serve on hot platter or (as they did at the Conference) in silver chafing dish. If on platter, a garnish of lemon wedges and green pepper rings is pretty and makes a good flavor companion.

Actually I feel more than a little selfish giving you such bare details of the wonderful time we had. But if you want to write to me and have a little private chin wag about your friends who were there I'll be glad to answer.

Above I said the girls were famous "in and out of the press world". I said that because Alice Roger Collins, well-known Canadian pianist, is a press club member too, and she came, to the delight of all of us.

Adjudicator Very Critical Of First Play

VICTORIA (CP)—A performance of Shakespeare's Othello by the Edmonton Studio Group, opening the Dominion Drama Fertival here Monday night, drew sharp criticism from adjudicator Pierre Lefevre.

The adjudicator said the presentation was "more melodrama than tragedy." He said he admired the group's effort in "such a difficult piece of theatre" but added he was "very critical" of what he saw.

"Somehow for me the tragedy of Othello did not happen on the stage tonight."

The production featured Alan Hood as Othello and Rosemary Hood as Desdemona.

1,000 ATTEND

More than 1,000 persons attended the opening night performance of the eight-play festival. Tonight the Regina Little Theatre group will present John Steinbeck's "Burning Bright."

Also today, theatre people from across Canada take part in the theatre conference being held in conjunction with the festival. At the morning session six noted Canadian actors were to take part in a panel discussion on the relation of amateur and professional theatre in Canada.

In the afternoon Henry Schitzler of the department of theatre arts of the University of California will present a mid-century appraisal of world theatre.

TO PRESENT AWARDS

On Sunday Governor-General Vincent Massey will present awards to the winners of the Dominion and regional festivals.

Mr. Lefevre said the Edmonton group's performance was "melodrama verging on tragedy." It was not performed as the play was written, he said, nor was it "what the company wanted to achieve."

The adjudicator was critical of Robert Orchard's interpretation of the role of Iago. It was a "little too obvious" and Orchard failed to get across the "fake honesty" demanded by the part. Othello would have been an "imbecile" not to see through him.

Driver Arrested In Child's Death

PRESCOTT (CP)—Joseph Cullen, 28, was arrested Monday night in connection with the death of seven-year-old Sandra Harper who was struck by a car Monday on No. 2 highway, two miles west of here, while returning home from school.

Cullen was charged with dangerous driving and leaving the scene of an accident. He is due to appear in court later today.

Sandra was walking along the highway with Larry Ferguson, 8, when hit by the car. The Ferguson boy was also knocked down, but suffered only minor injuries.

Prescott is 12 miles east of Brockville.

Crippled Children's Fund Hits New High

TORONTO (CP)—The Ontario campaign for funds for crippled children to date has brought a total of $500,222, compared with $488,290 last year, it was announced today.

Treasurer Conn Smythe said the $500,000 mark has been passed for the first time in the history of the annual drive. Not all returns from the sale of Easter seals have been received by the Ontario Society for Crippled Children, but of 189 service clubs which took part, 171 have reported.

The target for the 1953 campaign was $475,000.

Returns from Toronto included $12,700 from the sportsmen's dinner plus another $12,700 from an anonymous donor who offered to match dollar for dollar the amount raised by the dinner.

Weapons Experts Tour U.S. Plants

WATERTOWN, Mass. (AP)—A group of North Atlantic Treaty Organization experts on "steel for weapons" visited the Watertown arsenal Monday in the first of a series of North American studies to pool techniques for cheaper and better manufacture of weapons.

Headed by Antoine J. G. Dupuis of Belgium, chairman of the group which has been in existence since 1949, the representatives of seven countries will visit several other places before concluding their tour with a two-day conference in New York, May 15 and 16.

Friday and Saturday they will see the Atlas Steel Co. in Welland, Ont.

Steelworkers To Seek Bargaining Works

TORONTO (CP)—C. H. Millard, Canadian director of the United Steelworkers of America (CIO), said Monday that some time in the future—the date is undetermined—his union will seek to take over bargaining rights at Port Colborne, Sudbury and Trail now held by the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers (Ind).

The steel union would seek certification at International Nickel at Sudbury and at Consolidated Smelters at Trail "at the proper time."

"We have no definite schedule," he said at a press conference. "We will evaluate the circumstances and move."

In addition to its contracts at Trail and Sudbury, the Mine-Mill union has a contract with International Nickel at Port Colborne.

Hurt In Fall From Car

GODERICH (CP)—When a door of his parents' car opened Sunday night, Gerald Ball, 2, of Owen Sound, fell from the car and suffered facial lacerations. He required 25 stitches. Gerald was taken to Alexander Marine General Hospital where his condition was reported satisfactory Monday. The accident occurred on Highway No. 21.

Singer Has Daughter

NEW YORK (AP) — Patrice Munsel, Metropolitan Opera soprano, gave birth to a daughter early today. The mother and the seven-pound, seven-ounce infant were reported "doing fine." It was the first child for the singer and her husband Robert Schuler, a television director.

Former Slave Dies

PRAIRIE HOME, Mo. (AP)—Mrs. Eller Patterson, who was believed to be 109 years old, is dead. The woman, who came to Missouri as a slave in 1850, died here Saturday at the home of a daughter. Family records indicate she was born at Louisville, Ky., in 1844. She and her husband had 21 children, nine of whom survive.

Too Much Government Will Smother Personal Freedom

"Government is not now regarded as an instrument to restrain men from injuring one another but as a sort of all purpose around-the-clock device to make men happy and secure from the cradle to the grave,' 'said R. I. Irwin, president of the Summerville Limited, London, Ont., Monday at the weekly meeting of the Rotary club in the Empress hotel.

Mr. Irwin went on to say that two or three hundred years ago in the middle ages people were freed from serfdom. The idea was born that people were entitled born that people were entiled to personal freedoms and it became a popular belief among many of the European countries.

Later at the turning of the 19th century the term capitalism became known and was branded an exploiter of child labour. Numerous industrial and social problems resulted from it.

At the turn of the 20th century Karl Marx and Frederick Engles broadcast the doctrine that sate rights were supreme and the indivadual's freedoms were secondary. But liberals of that time had a different idea. They believed personal freedoms came first; and the state second.

SOCIALISM FAILED

During the past eight years in Great Britain there has been an experiment going on in socialism out to be a miserable failure said Mr. Irwin.

Under socialism one loses all personal ambition and self-reliance and one depends more and more on the state for help.

Leaders in England today are urging their people to work harder and longer hours in order to pull their country out of financial bankruptcy. But many people in England have the conception that they do not have to work so hard, and in case of trouble, they can depend on the government to help them out.

Mr. Irwin went on to say what a tremendous job Great Britain is doing in the way of manufacturing jet aircraft and how they are so far ahead of any country in that field as yet.

But there is a strong feeling among the British people that if they fail, the government will step in and give them a hand, and Mr. Irwin commented on the different attitude in Sweden and Switzerland, where there is a 48 hour week, compared to the 35 to 40 hour week in Great Britain, Canada and the United States.

Today people are aware of the dangers of foreign aggressors. But we are blind to the threats against our own personal liberties which exist in our own country.

PERVERSION OF GOVERNMENT

Today government is looked on, not only as a means to protect individauls from one another, but to keep them happy and content. It is this perversion of government that now makes it both ridiculous and corrupt. Government does not create liberty. On the contrary, government is the one persisting danger to human liberty.

"This tendency to look to government to solve our problems has manifested itself in many ways There is, we believe no one group wholly responsible for the red-tape which hampers the operation of a free economy and will eventually smother it completely if enough of it is applied.

"But we will agree a long way ahead of that fact, for what is forgotten by those that appeal to government to interfere in matters beyond its normal function is that by so doing they are placig fetters upon all of society. Because teamwork is essential to the efficient operation of our economic cystem, obstacles placed in the way of capital or labor or management are bound to slow up the whole team and the interests of the public welfare are affected,' 'quoted Mr. Irwin from a speech given by Clarence Manion, Dean of the College of Law, Notre Dame University.

Doctors are aware of what state medicne has done to the medical profession. It has taken away their personal liberties and freedom to do what they want, said Mr. Irwin.

Unfortuntely said Mr. Irwin the government is not like business. It can well afford to make mistakes. Business cannot and if members in the government are criticized, they can accuse their criticizers of telling lies about them, and go happily on their way.

In closing Mr. Irwin compared the government to fire. For fire is essential to our everyday life. But if the fire gets out of control, it is a menace to all and "worldly goods are not very good with-and world has watched it turn out

Graham Ferguson introduced Mr. Irwin and he was thanked by Ken Dalrymple.

Most Beautiful Girl In World Weds Philippine Millionaire

By OLEN CLEMENTS

TOKYO (AP)—The bride's eyes were soft and moist; the bridegroom had a shiner.

She is Armi Kuusela of Finland proclaimed the most beautiful woman in the world when crowned Miss Universe last year.

He is Virgilio Hilario of the Philippines, possessor of plenty of pesos and a black eye he got in a fight the other night.

They were married in a litile Tokyo church Monday night and only three people went to their wedding.

They wanted it that way because Virgilio was a little shy about that shiner.

SHE'S WONDERFUL

"She's wonderful!" the 25-year-old millionaire Filipino beamed at his swank hotel suite today during a brief honeymoon in this land of cherry blossoms.

The happy bride beamed, too. She had a message from her mother in Finland wishing her happiness.

Wednesday they part. She is flying to Honolulu. He is going to Manila on business.

Then he will hurry to the Hawaiian Islands to rejoin her. From there they will tour the United States and Europe before going to the Philippines to live.

WHIRLWIND COURTSHIP

It was a whirlwind courtship. They met in March at a dance in Baguio, the cool, summer capital of the Philippines. "Miss Universe" had gone to the islands for the International Trade Exposition.

He had eyes only for her after that. They danced and dined in the tinkling capital until April 26.

That was the day the Finnish beauty left for Tokyo.

Virgilio came along, too, in another plane.

Armi, 18, said she was too young for romance.

But Virgilio said she had planned to go back to Finland to tell her parents of their planned wedding—on her birthday Aug. 27.

"But we just couldn't wait," said Virgilio.

Friday, Virgilio gave her a three-carat diamond engagement ring.

Armi wore a blue, nylon lace gown and carried a bouquet of roses when they were married in St. Ignatius Roman Catholic Church.

Now, says Virgilio, Armi's public career is over . . .

"She's going to lead a plain, quiet life in the Philippines."

Pleads Innocent To Smuggling

BUFFALO, N. Y. (AP)—Homer Mitilinellis, 38-year-old Toronto man accused of smuggling aliens into the United States, pleaded innocent Monday in federal court to a four-count indictment.

Judge John Knight adjourned trial until the court convenes in Rochester May 12.

Mitilinellis was picked up by immigration service authorities when, they said, he tried to smuggle Christina Bethikontzh, 31, across the border at Niagara Falls in a panel truck that had a false door.

Miss Bethikontzh, a Greek from Toronto, was indicted on a conspiracy count and also pleaded innocent. She, too, will be tried during the Rochester term of court.

To Hear Charges Of Irregularities

MATTAWA (CP)—Mayor Harry Smart said last night that charges of irregularities in the Mattawa police department made last week by Leo Valois, prominent Mattawa business man, will be heard at a meeting of the police commission some time next week.

He told town council he had received a letter from Mr. Valois which said he had evidence of irregularities.

Mr. Valois said last Saturday he had given information to Crown attorney E. A. Tilley of North Bay, 35 miles west of here. He said he understood provincial police were investigating.

Provincial police in North Bay and Toronto declined to comment on the charges.

Korean Battlefront Reported Very Quiet

SEOUL (AP)—The Korean battle front was so quiet today the sighting of a lone Communist soldier won official notice. But a U. S. naval force shelled and bombed the battered east coast port of Wonsan in the heaviest strike in months.

"Our men sighted one Chinese near an outpost and threw grenades. He went away," read the day's battle report of a U. S. division on the western front.

Some observers said the 155-mile line was quieter than at any time since the war began 34 months ago.

Four ships led by the battleship New Jersey bombarded Red gun positions ringing Wonsan harbor, while dive bombers and fighter-bombers bombed the city.

Council Delays

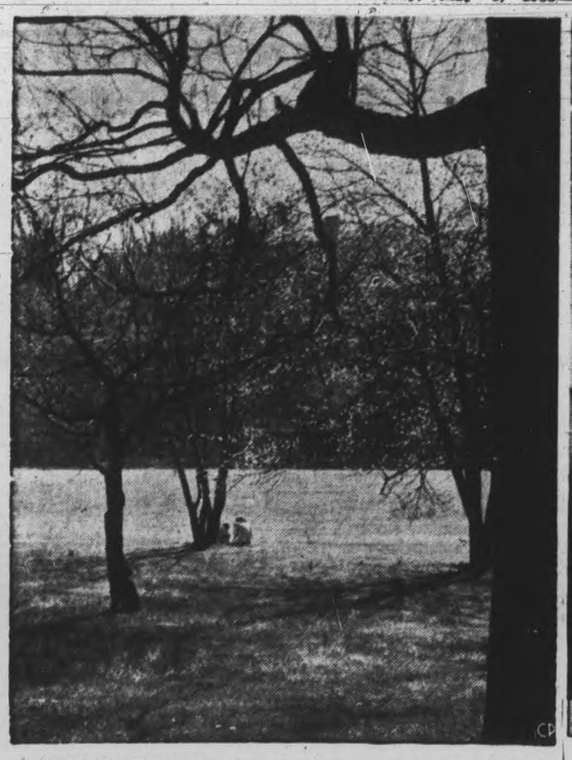
ing permit to convert an existing garage into a meat freezer building for animal food and to add an addition for a new garage, dated April 20, 1953, be not granted."

Two other clauses were carried through council in the report: "That City Solicitor Huycke be requested to take all necessary legal action forthwith in regard to the actions of Mr. Nick Peconi, in proceeding to alter a building on his property on Landowne St. east without a building permit, and in regard to his alleged operation on the same premises of a salvage yard without a license to operate such a business.

"That the Chief Constable be requested to investigate the alleged operation by Mr. Nick Peconi of a car salvage yard on his property on Lansdowne St. east without a license, and that if such operations are being carried on that he take steps under the provisions of the bylaw."



In a reference to Mr. Elliott's communication there appeared to be an intimation that the Lansdowne St. freezer was only a temporary location.

City Engineer Chalmers told the committee that Mr. Peconi had remarked to him that it was to be a temporary place.

"I asked him why he did not tell the committee that when he was here last week," Mr. Chalmers said. "His answer was that he was didn't think of it. He mentioned to me that when he had a place in Smith township there was quite a lot of local business, people calling for ten-pound lots of dog food, and it looked as if there would be an outlet to that trade on Lansdowne St."

The council has expressed indignation that Mr. Peconi had "flouted" its bylaws first in not taking out a permit to alter his garage, and second in "converting a used car sale lot into a wrecking yard" also without permission.

In the words of Ald. Dewart, ignorance of the law is no excuse.

Urge Abolition Of Double Taxes

TORONTO (CP) — Resolutions urging abolition of "double taxes" and the provision of free university education were approved here during the week-end at the annual convention of the Ontario Co-Operative Commonwealth Youth movement.

The two-day convention, attended by 46 young CCF members from across the province, rejected two-thirds of the 30 resolutions put before them.

Objecting to the present federal tax structure, the delegates recommended that the CCF national council press for elimination of all federal taxes except income, corporation, customs and succession duties.

Erle Neff of Hamilton won approval for his motion calling for university education on the same no-fee basis as provincial high schools.

Karen Mather of Toronto was elected president to succeed Elgin Blair of Toronto.

Will Use Scow In Search For Lost Tug

TIMAGAMI (CP)—A flat-bottomed scow is to be used today in the search for the lumber tug Bear, believed to have gone down in a wilderness lake last Thursday carrying four men to death.

Missing and feared drowned are Leslie Taske, 23, of Buckingham, Que., captain of the White Bear; Fred Kozik, 21, of Ottawa, woods foreman for the Gillies Brothers Lumber company; and lumberjacks Leonard Conroy, 19, of Buckingham, and Edward Hamilton, 61, of Timagami.

The scow is expected to provide firm footing for a magnetometer, an instrument normally used in hunting mineral deposits.

Searchers will also make soundings of Rabbit lake at the point 300 yards offshore where a large oil slick is thought to mark the spot that the diesel-driven tug made her fatal plunge with the four men and a steel boat she was towing.

RESULTS UNSATISFACTORY

The magnetometer was used Monday but results were unsatisfactory. It was impossible to read the instrument, because waves on the choppy lake 10 miles west of this Northern Ontario resort centre kept rocking the small boat in which it was carried.

Rangers in canoes spotted the oil slick. They expressed belief the oil was forced out of tanks of the sunken tug and steel boat.

Throughout the day, lumbermen in canoes cruised the lake in the hope the four men escaped and were wandering through the bush. Planes criss-crossed the area without finding any trace of the men.

ONE THEORY

One theory is that the four were driven inside the cabin of the White Bear by a snowstorm and were warming themselves around a stove when the vessel blew up and sank while on a trip up the lake to get a log boom.

Several oil drums and pikepoles, as well as the captain's shattered stool, were found floating on the lake Sunday.

If the tug is found in the 130-foot-deep water at the spot where the search is concentrated, it is expected divers will be brought from Timmins and the tug and the steel boat will be towed ashore.

This was her first marriage. Donat's first marriage in 1929 ended in divorce in December, 1948. He has three children.

Unemployment Benefits For Persons Becoming Sick

OTTAWA (CP)—Labor Minister Gregg Monday introduced legislation to provide unemployment insurance benefits to persons who become sick or injured after being laid off work for other reasons.

The principle of the legislation met approval from members of all parties in the House of Commons, though some opposition speakers said the government should have gone farther and covered workers against unemployment because of sickness.

Persons thrown out of work now receive insurance benefits only as long as they are available for work. The Unemployment Insurance Act amendment will extend benefits to those who become incapacitated after becoming unemployed.

PERIOD UNCHANGED

The period of benefit payments will be unchanged for each worker. Contributions to the unemployment insurance fund also will remain the same as now. Workers becoming unemployed because of illness will not be covered in the new legislation.

Mr. Gregg said he was unable to give a precise estimate of what the new provision will cost the unemployment insurance fund, now more than $800,000,000. But it was not felt it would add "materially" to the number of persons claiming benefits.

(Unofficial estimates of the yearly cost range between $2,000,000 and $5,000,000.)

Michael Starr (PC—Ontario), said he hopes the government move is the first step towards revamping the whole Unemployment Insurance Act.

60th Anniversary

CAS Years of Expansion

(Last of a Series of Three)

In 1915 the secretary of the Children's Aid Society reported that the work had trebled in the past few years and expressed the thought that "it was most unfortunate that the public could not be more fully informed regarding the numerous cases that come before them but as it is an established principle and one that works out well in practice, not to divulge any of the proceedings that go on behind the doors of a juvenile court, the world outside can form little idea of the depths of degradation touched by the Society which sometimes are beyond description." He stated that less than 5 per cent were lost to good citizenship.

In 1916, the society's silver jubilee was celebrated at a meeting in the Public Library. J. Hampden Burnham, as well as J. J. Kelso, was present.

The agent's report in 1919 referred to the aftermath of the Great War. "The work of your agent is broadening. All classes of people come to his office from the man who wants to know how to get his wife back again, to the woman with the wee baby of five months old who wants to get rid of it, and in one case the man and wife who wanted to turn their family of five children over to the Society."

Judge H. S. Mott, in speaking at the annual meeting in 1920 said, "Taken as a whole, the ideals of home life are not of as high a level as those of the previous generation. In the headlong rush for the dollar, we have not time to go home and think."

It was about this time too that it was recognized that the day of large institutions was over and that children should be given a chance to live in normal homes. In 1922, two acts. The Adoption Act and the Children of Unmarried Parents Act were passed. These were to influence the work of the Society to a great extent.

At the annual meeting of 1925, the secretary reported: "It would almost seem as though the children try to keep pace with the grown-ups. Whether it is because of the trying times we are passing through or the rapid pace at which the world is moving or because of the after effects of the Great War or whatever it may be, parents seem to take less interest in their children than in former years.

Then again we have many cases where children are taken to help out in busy seasons and when the rush is over they are returned to the Shelter. This is hardly fair for us or the children."

In 1927, the work had grown to the point that an office was needed and a room in the City Hall was provided. A typewriter was provided so that copies of letters sent out could be kept.

The presidents during this time were: E. A. Peck, Rev. Father C. J. Phelan, the Rev. F. E. Mallott, B. F. Ackerman, the Rev. R. C. Blagrave, the Rev. J. H. Sutcliffe.

The Agents were: C. A. G. Spence, G. W. Powell, J. Edgar.

Members of the Boards of this time still living in the city are: 1920-C. S. Cummer, 1925-Mrs. W. J. Oke, 1926-Jas. Dutton, 1928-Vincent Eastwood. Mrs. L. Yeotes, 1932 Ross Dobbin.

The secretaries were: Joseph Wearing, John Edgar, Miss M. Morrison.

The treasurers: H. W. Walker, C. S. Cummer.

1933-1953

In 1933 the society was incorporated and the officers elected were: President, the Rev. J. H. Sutcliffe; 1st vice-pres., Mrs. W. H. Gibbs; 2nd vice, Mrs. J. S. Fanning; Hon. sec., R. H. Parsons; treasurer, C. S. Cummer; Supt. and secr., John Edgar.

The work continued to increase, necessitating stenographic services and in 1936 Miss Muriel Morrison became the first stenographer, remaining with the society until 1950.

The Provincial Superintendent advised the board that trained social workers were necessary to improve and extend the field services and in 1938, Miss Rachael Young a graduate of the Department of Social Science of the University of Toronto became superintendent.

With the outbreak of war, new responsibilities were accepted. The Federal Government looked to the Society to make investigations and recommendations in regard to special grants to soldiers' dependents.

In 1940, the Society was again called on to give a special service. A plan to bring British child guests to Canada was met with a response from 264 homes opened up to receive these children. Only 8 guests arrived, six going to relatives. For various reasons the plan was discontinued as it was felt not to be in the best interests of children.

In 1947, the Society was again called upon, this time to make reports in regard to the use of Family Allowance, when requested by the Official Guardian in all divorces involving children under 16 years of age.

However, the change in emphasis of the type of service was perhaps the most important. Hitherto, the chief emphasis had been on the phyical needs of people but this has gradually changed until today when the emotional needs can be considered to be of prior importance.

A grading system was introduced by the Department of Welfare and from a D. grading in 1937, the Society has achieved the highest grading available— "A".

The presidents during this period have been: the Rev. J. H. Sutcliffe, the Rev. Dr. A. T. Barr, James Dutton, T. T. Rodger, Bruce Sargent.

Secretaries: Miss Muriel Morrison, Mrs. W. J. Wharry, T. T. Rodger, Mrs. C. Pilon.

Treasurers: C. Cummer, J. McKerchar, B. Bell.

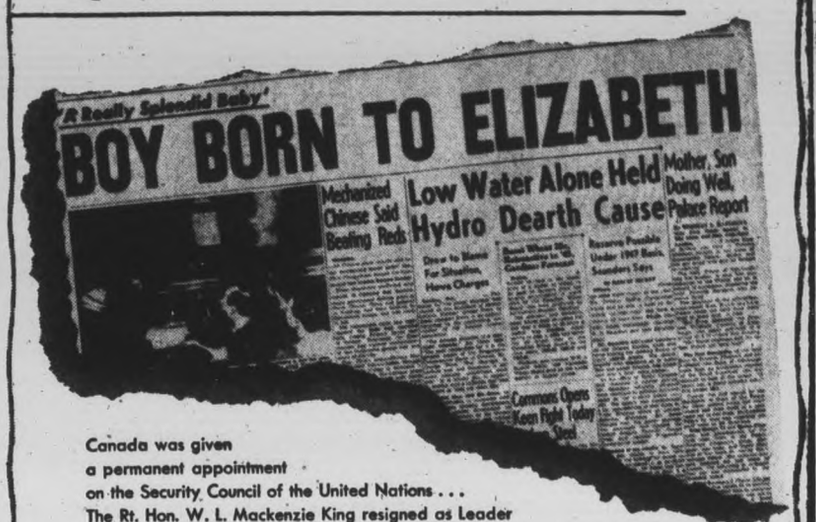
German General To Brief Canadian Group

BONN (CP)—Touring members of the Canadian National Defence College are to be briefed here next week by German General Adolf Heusinger on West Germany's role in European defence.

A Canadian spokesman said it will be the first time since the war that a German general has lectured before top Canadian military men.

General Heusinger, a high staff officer on the Russian front during the Second World War, is a member of the Bonn defence commission planning the 500,000-man German contribution to the European army.

The Canadians are also to be lectured by Bonn's secretary of state for foreign affairs, Professor Walter Hallstein, on West Germany's foreign policy.



The party of 17 is due to arrive in Hamburg from Brussels Tuesday.

They will tour Western Germany, visiting Allied forces and regional German officials, arriving in Bonn on May 12.

The students are making the annual tour to give them first-hand knowledge of conditions in other countries.

Members of the college on tour have been divided into two groups. The other group was in Jordan today and leaves Tuesday for the Suez canal zone.

"As long as I'm healthy and working and bringing home the money, my family and I are going to make out all right.

Ferry Sliced In Two Hundreds Aboard Saved

Minister Of Fisheries Speaks At Outboard Anniversary

Fish—not foreign relations—was the subject of an address to 450 civic leaders, businessmen, and interested Peterborough residents, who attended the Chamber of Commerce dinner Tuesday night marking the 25th anniversary of the Outboard, Marine and Manufacturing Co., in this city. The subject was an unusual one for the occasion of honoring Peterborough's second largest industry, but so were the circumstances. At the last minute the Hon. Lester B. Pearson, secretary of state for external affairs, was detained in Ottawa, and the guest speaker was the Hon. James Sinclair, minister of fisheries.

Mr. Pearson was too busy in the House of Commons defending the estimates of his department to be able to come to Peterborough. And to day he will fly to Washington with Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent for an important conference.

His substitute, Mr. Sinclair, was flown to Oshawa in an Outboard Marine Company plane and then rushed to the Club Aragon with provincial and city police escort.

DISAPPOINTMENT

No doubt about it, the absence of the secretary of state who is also president of the general assembly of the United Nations, was a disappointment. A table had been reserved for Peterborough UN-ers who felt that no amount of fishing facts could make up for Mr. Pearson's confidently-expected analysis of world affairs.

Their blue UN flag with the white markings, which was hung to the left of the speaker's dais, made a brave show under the circumstances. But at that it had to take second place to a three-foot framed portrait of Queen Elizabeth, behind the dais, and draped with the Union Jack.

Even though absent the popular secretary of state came near to stealing the show. In a letter to John Madden, sales manager of Outboard Marine, he apologized for his absence, and he said that the free world should be on its guard against relaxing, lulled by a false peace.

"If I had been with you," said Mr. Pearson, "I had hoped to tell

Won't Decide Election Date Till After Coronation

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister St. Laurent said Tuesday he won't decide the date of Canada's next general election until after the Coronation June 2. But in his comments on the subject in the Commons he did not rule out two dates widely accepted among observers — Monday, Aug. 10 or Monday, Aug. 17.

Mr. St. Laurent's statement was prompted by Donald Fleming (PC-Toronto Eglinton) who asked about the correctness of newspaper reports that the August dates had been selected as election targets.

Mr. Fleming said "tens of thousands" would be disfranchised in an August election because so many would be on holidays or busy with farm activities. He asked the government not to pick such a date.

NO TENTATIVE DECISION

Mr. St. Laurent replied: "I have purposely refrained from arriving at even a tentative decision about the next general election before the Coronation." He said he did not want the Coronation to be "dimmed or blurred or disturbed by political controversy."

The fact that the Aug. 10 date had been mentioned in newspapers would not deter him from picking it "if for other reasons it seems to be the most appropriate and convenient time to have an election." But that same face, he added, "is not going to be a reason for making the selection."

There has been no August election in Canada since Confederation in 1867.

Mr. St. Laurent disclosed some of the government's thinking on the subject of election timing when he discussed Mr. Fleming's argument that summer—a time for holidays and busy farm work—was no time for an election.

ENUMERATION ASPECT

He said an even more important aspect was that the enumeration of voters must be carried out at a time when there is the least likelihood of any names being left off. A start on preparing voters lists, he noted, must be made on the 49th day before polling day—always on a Monday.

"The matter must be carefully considered because if we are not to have an enumeration in July

Fear 3 Boys Met Foul Play

TORONTO (CP)—Police said today they were getting "uneasy" over the disappearance of three young brothers who vanished six days ago while on their way to buy some candy.

Missing are Paul Quigley, 5, Howard, 7, and Henry, 10.

Police said they had made a thorough search of the Dundas and Church streets district in mid-town Toronto without getting a lead. They now fear the boys may have met with foul play.

Inspector Sam Johnston, heading the search, said "every Toronto officer is watching for them. It seems impossible that they could still be on the streets."

Charles Won't Attend Mother's Coronation

LONDON (CP)—It seemed just about definite today that Prince Charles will not be present in Westminster Abbey for the Coronation ceremony June 2.

Earlier reports had suggested that the popular little Prince, who often appears in public, might witness part of his mother's Coronation. Today a Buckingham Palace spokesman, though declining to make an official announcement, says it seems unlikely he will be there.

Charles will be five in November. Princess Margaret was six when she attended the Coronation of the late King George VI in 1937.

Fly TV Coronation Films

RCAF To Bring Recordings For Use Same Day

OTTAWA (CP)—Three RAF Canberra aircraft and a Canadian fighter jet will fly television recordings of the Coronation to North America in time for afternoon and evening TV showings in Canada and the United States June 2, it was announced today.

The recordings will cross the Atlantic in three flights and each flight is expected to cover the 3,292 miles from North Weald, near London, to Montreal in approximately 7½ hours.

This would mean delivery times at Montreal at about 4 p. m., 5:30 p. m. and 8:30 p. m. EDT.

Details of the plans were disclosed in a joint announcement by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, which is sponsoring the flight, the RCAF, the BBC and the RAF.

The CBC will pay for the operation and has made subsidiary arrangements with five United States networks to share them.

"The material carried on these flights will include edited versions of the telerecordings of the procession to the abbey and the Coronation ceremony made by the BBC, and also full-length telerecordings of what will be seen on British television screens, made by the CBC and certain of the American organizations concerned," the announcement said.

U. S. networks participating in the scheme are the American Broadcasting Company, the Columbia Broadcasting System, the National Broadcasting Company Dumont and the Mutual Broadcasting System and one television news agency, U. P. Movietone.

French Patrols Fail To Make Contact Around Laos Capital

HANOI, Indo-China (AP)—French and Laotian patrols swept in a wide arc around the royal residence city of Luang Prabang in Laos today but failed to contact any Communist-led Vietminh troops.

The calm on the Laos invasion fronts indicated the Vietminh is awaiting fresh supplies and is regrouping its forces before making an onslaught on Luang Prabang or Vientiane, the official capital.

TAKE PRECAUTION

The Thais have begun moving 60,000 Viet Namese, mostly of fighting age, from along the northern border deep into west and northwestern Thailand as a precaution against Communist invasion.

The move was apparently aimed at preventing Vietnamese who fled into Thailand border areas at the start of the Indo-China war from being swept up and used by the Vietminh in the event Moscow-trained Ho Chi Minh's forces reach the Mekong and try to extend their "liberation" program and cross into Thailand.

French intelligence reports have disclosed that three generals and four colonels who received their military training in southern Communist China are masterminding the invasion of Laos.

CAHA Rejects Cup Protest

MIDLAND (CP)—George Dudley, secretary-manager of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, said today the CAHA had rejected a protest filed by Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen against the use of goaltender Bobby Gillson by Penticton V's as a replacement in their Allan Cup hockey playoff.

A mail vote of the CAHA executive gave Penticton the right to use Gillson in goal for the rest of the best-of-seven finals with the Dutchmen. Kitchener leads the series 3-1.

Penticton brought in Gillson for the third game of the series after the regular goalkeeper, Ivan McLelland, broke a bone in his right wrist. The Vs took the game for their only win of the series and Kitchener immediately protested Gillson's presence in the line-up.

The Kitchener management claimed Gillson had not received permission to play from Owen Sound Mercurys, the club he performed for during the regular Ontario Hockey Association senior A schedule.

City Athlete Dies

TORONTO (CP)—Albert Chard, athlete and coach in Toronto and Peterborough for many years although one of his legs was amputated when he was 19, died Tuesday. He played baseball, softball and football and coached Derby Aces, a Toronto softball team, in the early 1930s.

Phone Calls Plague Tragic Family

TORONTO (CP)—Police said today that the mother-in-law of Mrs. Adele Holmes is being plagued by telephone calls blaming her for the deaths of five persons Tuesday.

They said "morons" have telephoned Mrs. Mary Holmes continually since Adele killed herself and her four young children. The five were found gassed in their Toronto home by the father, William Holmes, 40, when he came home from work.

Some of the callers, police said, called the mother-in-law "murderer." Similar calls were received at police headquarters.

The 36-year-old mother was found dead with Nancy, 7, Irene, 6, Linda, 4, and Kenneth, 3.

WIFE UNBALANCED

A note beside the woman's body, addressed to her husband, said in part:

"Your mom struck me and I struck her back."

Mr. Holmes said today he thinks his wife was unbalanced.

"She would not have written such things had she been rational," he said. "As far as being in debt was concerned we are paying for our own house, a television set and a deep freeze. I believe they are just normal debts."

The mother-in-law said today that "Adele and I had the odd tiff. But they were nothing important."

Jets Dive Bomb 17 Dam Buildings

SEOUL (AP)—U. S. Thunderjets swept almost to the Yalu river boundary of North Korea today and dive bombed at least 17 major buildings at the abandoned Kangge dam.

Sabre jet fighters flew escort for the 36 Thunderjets in one of the war's deepest fighter-bomber penetrations of North Korea. The air force made no mention of opposition from Communist MiG jets based just across the Yalu in Manchuria.

The Thunderjets blasted buildings used by the Reds to store supplies and shot up a rail line but did not bomb the partially completed dam, on which work was abandoned when the war began, the air force said.

Kangge dam lies on the Tongno river about 20 miles upstream from giant Suiho reservoir which was wrecked in a massive strike by air force and navy planes last summer. The Tongno is a tributary of the Yalu.

U.S. Consults Allies On Laos Aid

Sees Japan, Burma Threatened By New Invasion

WASHINGTON (AP)—State Secretary Dulles said today the United States is consulting with several allies on a possible appeal to the United Nations for action in dealing with the Communist-led invasion of Laos.

Dulles noted that France, Thailand and the three associated states of Indo-China were involved in the new southeast Asia crisis.

"We are in conversation with all those countries with reference to possible United Nations actions," the secretary told the House of Representatives foreign affairs committee.

The attack on Laos, Dulles testified, "does not even pretend to be a revolutionary effort but is straight military aggression."

He testified that a successful extention of the attack gainst Thailand would mean a threat to Burma and Indonesia and might make the future of Japan "extremely precarious."

POSSIBLE DANGERS

Present plans to put Japan on a self-supporting basis, he said, contemplate development of Japanese trade with southeast Asia. Should that area succumb to aggression, he said, "we might have to permit Japanese trade with the Communist mainland," or else spend a great deal more money than now for Japanese economic support.

Thai and U. S. officials reported earlier today that Dulles has told Ambassador Pote Sarasin the U. S. would give "most sympathetic consideration" to a Thai request for

France To Stand By Indo-China

SAIGON, Indo-China (Reuters)—France Tuesday made a pledge not to abandon any of the associated states of Indo-China in the face of Communist Vietminh aggression.

Jean Letourneau, French minister to the associated states of Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia, said: "France will pursue her military efforts in Indo-China and increase them if necessary. The main strongholds of Indo-China will be defended."

He said France would step up efforts to defend Laos against Vietminh forces forging through its territory toward the Thailand border.

Letourneau added that the United States is increasing and speeding up aid to Indo-China, as a result of his recent talks with State Secretary John Foster Dulles in Paris.

Damaged Vessel Rescues British Passengers

HARWICH, England (AP)—Two American ships brought hundreds of passengers to safety today from a British channel ferry sliced through in a pre-dawn collision with an American transport in the North Sea. Survivors were landed here and at Dover after a quick transfer of passengers 40 miles off Harwich on England's east coast averted a major sea disaster. A woman and her baby were trapped for several hours in the listing ferry.

All of the passengers—most of them British Army families returning home from Germany—were from the 4,190-ton Duke of York.

The steamer and the 7,607-ton American transport Haiti Victory rammed into each other near Galloper light ship. The Duke of York had 438 passengers aboard and a crew of 70, officials said.

The Haiti Victory brought the bulk of the passengers ashore here despite a yawning eight-foot gash in her bows six feet above the water-line. She had the Duke of York in tow for a while but that task was taken over later by tugs at the scene.

4 SERIOUSLY HURT

The 10,687-ton American Merchant took 91 survivors aboard and hurried to Dover with them. Four were reported seriously injured.

Survivors crowded the decks of the Haiti Victory as she came slowly into the harbor at Harwich.

Her damage appeared superficial to that suffered by the Duke of York. Everything forward of the superstructure had disappeared on the Duke of York. Capt. R. B. Adams, her master, and a skeleton crew of 15 remained aboard to work the vessel, which was reported taking some water.

EMERGENCY CALL

Four hours after the collision the Duke of York, which had been making her overnight run from the Hook of Holland, flashed an emergency call for heavy lifting tackle when the trapped mother and baby were discovered. They were rescued an hour later. An RAF launch took them to the shore for medical treatment.

Diamond Fraud Tricks Germans

BONN, Germany (AP) — The prosecutor today filed formal charges of fraud and deceit against Hermann Meincke, 46-year-old German who directed an experiment to manufacture synthetic diamonds that ended in fiasco and heavy financial loss to investors.

Together with his 39-year-old wife, Meincke was accused of fraud, falsely using the title of "doctor" and instigating false testimony from witnesses. Meincke's brother, Wilhelm, and the latter's daughter were accused of being accessories. Their trial was set for late July.

Meincke obtained laboratory space from the federal economics ministry to conduct an experiment which he is alleged to have claimed would develop a process for manufacturing 2,000 carats of diamonds per week.

The West German government claimed it had invested no funds in the venture. The public prosecutor reported, however, that some 30 private investors had lost "hundreds of thousands of marks." Unofficial reports said investments amounted to about 800,000 marks ($190,400).

A claim that the Meincke process was successful caused a flurry last year in world industrial diamond circles.

Decide Christie To Stand Trial For 4 Murders

LONDON (AP)—John Christie, 55-year-old owl-eyed trucking clerk, was committed for trial today, charged with murdering four women in a shabby back-street London flat.

Christie, for 14 years tenant of the death house in Notting Hill district, pleaded innocent. He reserved his defence.

The hearing wound up with his lawyer suggesting that "two strangers" may have lived in the drab tenement which has known at least eight slayings in recent years.

Defence counsel Derek Curtis-Bennett harked back to the case of Timothy Evans, a young truck driver who was hanged for the death of his pregnant wife and baby daughter in 1949. They died in the same house where the remains of six women were found this year.

Ten minutes of cross-examination of the chief prosecution witness by Curtis-Bennett brought the Evans trial into the forefront of the courtroom drama.

TWO STRANGLERS

Evans went to the gallows protesting that Christie was the real slayer of his wife and child

Christie denied Evans' accusations.

Police Inspector Albert Griffin testified Evans apparently did not know of his daughter's death when he first confessed to killing his wife.

He agreed with Curtis-Bennett that Evans contended he got rid of his wife's body by putting her down a drain and this was obviously untrue.

Hunter Falls Into Wolf Den

FORT ERIE — A hunter in search of a wolf near Sharkston fell into a hole Tuesday afternoon and found himself in a wolf den, with four healthy, six-weeks-old wolf cubs as his companions. The den was only 15 miles from the Peace Bridge.

The hunter, Ed Shatzline, had been trying to track down a wolf which had been raiding chickens in the area, when he plunged into the hole on the farm of A. A. Holmes on Empire Beach Road.

He and a fellow-hunter, Alf Eberly, turned the cubs over to Game Warden Roy Muma of Chippawa, who is awaiting instructions from the Department of Game and Fisheries about their disposal.

Then Shatzline and Eberly returned to the den to see whether the female would show up. There have been reports, too, of an old male in the area

The hunters will receive a $60 bounty—$15 a head—for the cubs.

Vienna Still Waltzes

Music Transports Visitor to New World

This is the fourth in a series of articles by I. Norman Smith, of Ottawa, who is touring Europe and will cover the coronation for the Examiner.

BY I. NORMAN SMITH

VIENNA.—(By Air Mail)—Some idea of how confused things can get in Vienna may be judged from the fact that that rather curious looking spire over there is on the Greek Orthodox Church which stands within the walled property of the Russian Embassy, which in turn stands in the British Sector of Vienna, and geographically speaking all of Vienna is in the Russian Zone of Austria.

But Vienna has known mixture before. It is hard to decide what the Viennese look like. Many races have been washed up on Vienna during one wave or another of Austrian imperial expansion. You will find them tall and thin, short and dark, sour and sweet, raucous or mellow.

Another and greater surprise to the visitor raised on story-books is that the charming Vienna-on-Danube is a myth if you think of it in terms of Paris-on-Seine or London-on-Thames. Vienna's heart is four or five miles from the Danube and the river would be the last place you would erect a restaurant in honor of wine, women and song. The river is broad and sweeping but dull and muddy and its banks here are sand flats covered at high water and miserable the rest of the year. Now that the Russians have stifled commerce on it the Danube hasn't even the blessing of usefulness.

KEY NAMES FOR COFFEE

If that last paragraph was a little involved blame it on the fact I've been trying to straighten out in my mind a discussion a little while ago with the waiter who brought breakfast.

We asked him for a coffee not too strong and got in return a statement all written out that there are numerous different types of coffee you may order in a Viennese restaurant, each having its own key name.

By definition they are: Coffee with whipped cream, half coffee and half milk in a glass, more coffee than milk, milk with a little coffee added, milk with slightly more coffee added, slightly more coffee than milk, black coffee with whipped cream in a glass, all blends of black coffee.

And speaking of whipped cream, they'll serve it on cabbage or lather it on to the top of a rich chocolate cake. Cakes! Every second shop seems a pastry shop. My own hotel—Sacher's—gets its name from the pastry cook who pleased Metternich more than a century ago by giving him something new in cake. Sprinkled through Vienna are other favorite pastry shops, famous as the place to which one Emperor or another would eneak out and gorge himself in relief from the palace diet. Seems they had pastry cooks down a dark street instead of—or in addition to—lady friends.

BURIED IN SAME PLACE

And speaking of Emperors, this among other things must be said for the Hapsburgs: they have had the goodness to bury themselves all in the same Imperial Crypt and it is hidden away rather unimpressively under the old Capuchin Church built in 1622. There they lie in their massive metal boxes, 141 men, women and children all told, in 138 coffins.

The older ones ran in simple designs but there came flourishes and decorations and gruesome skeletons' heads bearing crowns at the coffins corners .It was cold as death down there and rather heavily oppressive, but you couldn't help but note that Austrians going through as we were paid closest attention to the guide and even corrected him occasionally on some minor branch of the Imperial lineage. Austrians now live in a republic of liberal socialist leanings, but they have an affection for their history and their history means the Hapsburgs who ruled it from 1273 to 1915.

The Vienna Opera House was greatly damaged towards the end of the war, allegedly by American flyers. This gives rise to the joke Austrians will tell you with a chuckle, of the American officer here a year or so ago who stopped an Austrian fraulein on the street and asked the way to the opera. "You were able to locate it during the war, my colonel," she said, "go ahead and find it again."

But another old opera house has been pressed into use and the traditions are wonderfully maintained. The Tales of Hoffman have to be done well for there is much of fantasy in them, but the presentation showed no fleeting moment of difficulty.

BIG ORCHESTRA PIT

The orchestra pit is twice the size of those one usually sees and the musicians set a spell over the place that passes description. The principal singers seemed not to be in opera but in life and when the chorus swelled so that the spine tingled, a baritone and soprano in particular rose even above all else. I have never heard such beautifully rounded mass and part singing and when the four tiers of galleries broke into applause for the baritone—which I am told is rare in the middle of the act—there was an exquisite feeling of having chanced to listen to one of the memorable music events of a lifetime.

Just two days earlier fortune had also smiled by presenting in the Vienna People's Opera House the

'Terrorist Ring' Broken

150 Arrested In Argentine Bomb Plots

BUENOS AIRES (AP)—Police claim a wave of arrests throughout Argentina has broken a ring that plotted to terrorize the Argentine people by bombings. One source estimated more than 150 persons had been taken into custody.

The roundup netted many opposition politicians—chiefly members of the Conservative party—once Argentina's strongest. Party headquarters in many provinces were raided and leaders arrested.

Some Communists were seized in the town of Eva Peron, formerly La Plata, the capital of Buenos Aires province. It was also reported that Dr. Alfredo Palacios, leader of the Socialist party, had been taken into custody.

President Juan D. Peron formally congratulated Gen. Miguel Gamboa, chief federal police inspector, "for the success of recent proceedings designed to eliminate traitors of the people, those who disturb order, and persons forming interests inimical to the new Argentina."

The president also gave one policeman 100,000 pesos (about $7,000) and another 50,000 pesos as rewards for breaking up the alleged ring.

Police claim the plotters were responsible for a wave of bombings that began here in March. Peron, himself, escaped injury April 15 when two bombs exploded in Buenos Aires' central Plaza de Mayo while the president was addressing a political rally there. Six persons were killed and 93 were injured in the blasts and subsequent stampede.

Say Gold Industry Facing Extinction Unless Price Raised

OTTAWA (CP)—The Canadian Metal Mining Association stated today in a brief to the Senate committee on Canadian trade relations that the gold mining industry is in danger of extinction unless the price of gold is increased. Pointing out that the price of gold is still at a pre-war level, the association brief said prices in international trade have doubled. The association blamed the pegging of the gold price at $35 an ounce by the United States for a decline in gold mining all over the world.

"The question is of vital concern to Canada as the world's second largest gold producer," the brief stated. "It is no exaggeration to say that Canada is in serious danger of losing completely an industry which in former years accounted for much prosperity and progress. . ."

GOLD PRODUCERS DROP

The brief noted that the number of gold producers in Canada has dropped from 140 in 1941 to 59 today.

The brief also advocated continuous negotiation for the removal of international trade restrictions —particularly for the removal of the United States tariff on nickel and zinc and copper rods. It stated that lower freight rates are essential for the expansion of the bulk mineral mining industry in Canada.

Talks On Suez Bogged Down

CAIRO (Reuters)—Anglo-Egyptian negotiations on the future of Britain's Suez canal base were adjourned today, bogged down by disagreement on the problems of British evacuation and maintenance of the base afterwards.

An official statement gave no date for the next meeting. When Lt.-Col. Abdel Nasser, one of the Egyptian negotiators, was asked if this meant the talks had broken down he snapped: "I hope not."

The adjournment came after diplomatic quarters here had indicated that "considerable progress" had been made since the talks began April 27.

Nasser, chief lieutenant to Prime Minister Mohamed Naguib, said: "The British side has found it necessary to consult its government before resuming the talks."

The talks arose from Egypt's demand for British evacuation of the canal zone base, which guards the great waterway linking East and West.

Allied Counter-Plans Studied By Russia

BERLIN (AP)—Russia today studied a series of Western counter-proposals for guaranteeing air safety over Germany. They said they would take them up with higher authorities.

The suggestions were given to the Russians Tuesday night at the fourth in a series of meetings with British, French and American experts.

Russia proposed the meetings after a Soviet jet fighter attack on a British bomber. Seven British airmen lost their lives in the attack near the East-West German border.

Details of the Allied proposals were not disclosed. A communique issued after the meeting said the Western powers had submitted their own ideas on air corridors for flying between Berlin and West Germany. The Russians have suggested a single wide corridor for all Allied planes flying between the West and Berlin.

Loans To Farmers Hit Peak In 1952

OTTAWA (CP)—Loans to Canadian farmers under the Farm Improvement Loans Act climbed to a peak of $98,259,000 in 1952, the annual report showed Tuesday.

This represents an increase of about $13,000,000 over the $85,300,000 loaned by the banks under the legislation's terms in 1951.

Under this legislation, the federal government guarantees 10 per cent of the amount loaned by the bank to farmers for purchase of machinery and for general improvement of farms.

The report, tabled in the Commons by Finance Minister Abbott, showed that farmers obtained 331,940 loans since the act came into force in 1945.

Ontario farmers last year borrowed $12,200,000.

Reds Reject PoW Proposal 'Zero Progress'

PANMUNJOM (AP)—A United Nations truce negotiator said today "zero" progress had been made toward a Korean armistice after the Reds rejected a proposal to free 32,000 North Korean prisoners who refuse to go home after a truce is signed.

The Reds again ignored the Allied nomination of Pakistan as neutral custodian of 48,500 prisoners who refuse to return to their Communist homelands.

Instead, Gen. Nam Il charged the Allied proposal was "void of reason" and "unworthy of refutation." He reiterated the Red demand that balking captives be shipped to a neutral country and that the functions of the neutral be ironed out before deciding anything else.

Lt.-Gen. William K. Harrison suggested that the 32,000 North Koreans be freed immediately after a truce is signed and that they be given civilian status so they could settle anywhere in Korea.

NO MENTION OF CHINESE

He made no mention of Chinese captives who refuse repatriation. Some observers speculated that the UN command might be willing to listen to a compromise plan which would send Chinese to the neutral custodian while leaving Koreans in Korea.

The Reds want all 48,500 sent bodily to the neutral state pending a decision as to their future. They insist that all will want to go home once their fears have been quieted by explanations.

The UN says the captives must remain in Korea under neutral supervision until they make up their minds where they want to go. Many PoWs have vowed to kill themselves rather than leave Korea, the Allies said.

After Harrison made his proposal, the Reds took a one-hour-and-48-minute recess. Nam returned and rejected it in angry tones.

The collision occurred in darkness about 4:50 a. m. (11;50 p. m. EDT Tuesday) on a calm sea east of the mouth of the Thames. There was no fog, though the sky was cloudy.

The Haiti Victory was alongside the York ready to take off passengers a few minutes after the crash was reported. About 45 minutes later nearly all had been rescued.

The bow of the Duke of York was torn off just forward of the bridge and sank. Twisted metal sagged into the sea. Cables ended in jagged curls.

LIKE GHOST SHIP

A reporter for the London Evening News who flew over the scene said:

"Five feet above the water line in the bows of the Haiti Victory was a clean slit as though cut by a giant cleaver. Around her the sea looked green as it washed back from her grey hull. . . .

"Through driving gusts of rain the Duke of York—what is left of it—seemed a ghost ship with only two of her crew to be seen on the deck.

"No smoke came from her dumpy funnel. Lifeboat davits hung slack, slapping against the hull as each wave straightened the few degree list before the ship rolled drunkenly back again."

The Haiti Victory is operated by the U. S. military sea transport service with a crew of 50 U. S. civil service personnel. She was bound from Bremerhaven, Germany, for an American port.

Ambassador Sarasin told reporters that Red invasion of Laos had endangered Asia and particularly his own country, which borders Laos on the west.

The ambassador said his country could mobilize "quite a large force of men" from its population of close to 20,000,000. The need, he said, is for arms and other military material.

Sarasin said his government has strengthened its border forces and is maintaining constant air patrol.

you about some of my recent experiences at the United Nations Assembly and at the North Atlantic Council meeting which ended in Paris a week ago.

"At that latter meeting, we had a very interesting exchange of views on recent Soviet moves and gestures, and it was this in particular that I was hoping to discuss tonight.

PROMISE OR THREAT

"Our feeling in Paris was that recent develpoments might be a promise or they might be a threat. We of the free world should be very careful not to take any action on the assumption that they were a promise of peace which would leave us weaker and more vulnerable if they turned out to be a threat."

Mr. Sinclair gave a broad survey of what the government is doing to encourage commercial fishing in Canada. And he predicted an increasingly great future for this industry because Canada fronts on the two greatest fishing grounds of the world—the Grand Banks off Newfoundland and the North Pacific grounds off British Columbia.

"Is there a future in the fishing industry? Yes, there is. Some of our industries seem to be dying. Even coal mining, for example, is suffering. It has the present competition of oil and gas and then there is the threat of the harnessing of atomic energy. The fishing industry isn't like that.

"Tonight more than half of the people of the world are going to go to bed hungry. The world population is increasing and almost all of the available land is "pretty well known". Granted better agriculture techniques can raise the production of food but they are limited.

"The only other source of food is from the sea. If fish is properly served, harvested and marketed, it is an industry which can increase as the years go by."

Mr. Sinclair also pointed to the "greatest market in the world"—the purchasing power of 170,000,000, the combined populations of the United States and Canada.

"We should eat more fish," said the minister flatly.

HEAVIEST EATERS

Canadians and Americans are the heaviest eaters in the world, averaging 1,500 pounds of food a year. But only 14 pounds of this amount is fish. The European countries consume more than 28 pounds per person, and Norway and Japan about 70 pounds.

The present commercial catch is roughly estimated at 2,000,000,000 pounds a year, valued at $200,000,000.

Mr. Sinclair proposed a simple solution to the economic problems facing the Canadian fishing industry:

"If we raise our consumption of fish by a pound per person per year the market problem of the fishing industry in Canada will be largely solved," he said.

Processing, marketing and sale of fish from either coast to the inland provinces is a difficulty still not solved, he said. But the federal government is co-operating with private industry to encourage a higher consumption of fish.

One difficulty is that fish is even more perishable than fresh milk so refrigeration and speedy shipping are musts. Another problem is the wide variety of foods that the inland city housewife has to choose from when she visits her favorite groceteria. Attractive packaging and good advertising sway the housewife in making her choice.

Despite her natural advantages, Canada is behind other ocean-bound nations in marine-biological research, said the minister. Every fishing vessel that puts out from Norway and Japan helps compile valuable statistics on the temperature of the water, the current and other data. Knowing where fish are likely to be found is of major importance.

Intensive research has boosted the salmon catch in British Columbia and this scientific approach to fishing is being followed up elsewhere.

MORE FOR LESS EFFORT

Better fishing craft and gear are aiding the catch in Newfoundland and the Maritimes. It has gone up 65 per cent in the last 20 years. More fish with less effort is the motto.

The Department of Fisheries are also spending money on research to determine how to get rid of parasites, for example, on the white fish.

Here in Ontario the No. 1 fishing problem is the sea lamprey which preys on the lake trout, sucking the blood from them and killing them. The catch of lake trout has now declined from 15,000,000 pounds a year to less than 1,000,000.

The lampreys, originally a sea creature, have come up the St. Lawrence River, penetrated Lake Ontario, spawned up fast-moving creeks, and they now infest Lake Erie and Lake Huron.

The Department are using three main methods of eradicating them putting lips on dams so the lampreys can't wiggle over the dam as they travel upstream; bag nets; and electrial gates that attract and kill lampreys while ordinary fish shy away.

HELP PRIVATE INDUSTRY

Mr. Sinclair said the object of the Department's research was to help private industry, not supplant it. Nor did they want to enter into competition with other food industries.

"Our aim is to assist the industry to do those things which they are unable to do themselves," he said. "There is perhaps no industry in Canada where government aid is more essential."

C. B. Neal, president and director of the Outboard Marine and Manufacturing Co. gave a brief history of the firm's history in Peterborough. Hugh Campbell, former Canadian president, and J. G. Rayniak, president of the Waukegan company, chose Peterborough after an inspection that followed the invitation of the mayor, the late Roland Denne.

Both Mr. Campbell and Mr Rayniak were at the Chamber of Commerce dinner and Mr. Rayniak recalled making the arrangements with Mayor Denne.

The Peterborough plant at first did only assembly operations but now manufactures all the lines that are manufactured in the United States. Employing some 800 workers it is now the second largest industry in the city.

Fisheries Minister Sinclair was introduced by an opponent in the House of Commons, Gordon K. Fraser, MP, and he was thanked by H. T. Cranford, vice-chairman of the Canadian Manufacturer's Association.

Before the minister left he was presented with the company's latest product: a rotary-cutting power lawnmower.

Defence Committee Split On Dealing With Report

OTTAWA (CP)—Liberal and Progressive Conservative members of the House of Commons defence committee split sharply Tuesday concerning the committee's final report. A majority report tabled by Col. David Croll (L-Toronto Spadina) expressed satisfaction with what the army has done about the Currie report's recommendations and with the huge defence construction program.

But the Progressive Conservatives, in what amounted to a minority report, said the Currie report's strong criticisms of the army works services still stand, that evidence before the committee disclosed "gross inefficiency" and an "extensive lack of a sense of responsibility" in expenditure of public funds by defence officials, that adequate inquiry by the committee was frustrated by the Liberal majority and that only independent and thorough investigation of the whole defence setup can produce satisfactory results.

NEED SECOND INQUIRY

The Conservatives said the findings of George Currie, Montreal accountant, of a "general breakdown" in accounting, supervision and administration of works services remain unchallenged. They said the fact that he found this situation in one army branch handling only one per cent of defence funds makes a further similar inquiry by an outside expert into the whole defence setup imperative.

The majority report, on the other hand, made no recommendations. It indicated that the Liberal members of the committee are satisfied with what is being done to put right things referred to in the Currie report.

It reiterated previous statements that only at Camp Petawawa were extensive irregularities found, that the total losses there were less than $36,000 and that the big bulk of the recommendations of Mr. Currie have been or are being implemented.

The report also referred to a long list of army accounting irregularities listed in the Currie report. It said none involved dishonesty by individuals and that the omissions largely resulted from the post-Korea urgency.

The report went on to the ninefold increase in the defence construction program between 1950 and 1952 and found that "the program, in the face of a number of difficulties, has been well conceived and carefully supervised and the public has received good value for its money."

The Conservative statement however, said all the evidence pointed to "inexcusable lack of a sense of responsibility in relation to the expenditure of public funds—a lack which, unfortunately, appears to have been all too extensive."

Strong Hand For St. Laurent

OTTAWA (CP)—The Commons today unanimously armed Prime Minister St. Laurent with a strong resolution to strengthen his stand in Washington for a lessening of American trade barriers.

The prime minister, on the eve of his departure for Washington, opened the way for an unusual expression of Common sentiment by all parties by agreeing not to treat a Progressive Conservative motion as one indicating lack of confidence in his government.

Mr. St. Laurent disclosed that he hopes to speak not only to President Eisenhower but to Senate and congressional leaders who are the real fathers of the trade barriers to which one Commons member after another today took indignant exception. He would overlook no part of the Canadian economy in making Canada's position clear about restrictions "that are causing serious concern and even embarrassment."

The motion itself came from Donald Fleming (PC—Toronto Eglinton) and it urged that vigorous efforts be made to end the U. S. restrictions that have hit Canadian dairy and other products.

and August we could not have one that would start earlier than Sept. 14—because it has to start on a Monday and the first Monday in September is Labor Day.

"An enumeration that started on Sept. 14 would bring an election in November. Well, November is an inconvenient time for an election."

The prime minister said there are two reasons why people do not vote.

One was that they cannot or will not go to the polls. That was a matter depending largely on the voter himself. The other reason is that their names do not get on the list. The prime minister agreed that a summer-time enumeration would likely mean that some persons would not be home when the enumerator called and would be left off.

Mr. St. Laurent's remarks left the issue wide open. But some observers assumed that he had left the way open for dissolution in time to start the enumeration about mid-June and have the voting Aug. 10.

MP Suggests Canada Give Indo-China Aid

OTTAWA (CP) — Parliament's first suggestions that Canada should help out in the French Indo-China war and that a profound change of attitude may have come over Moscow emerged Tuesday in a Commons debate on foreign affairs. External Affairs Minister Pearson didn't agree with either of them.

Opposition front-bencher Howard Green (PC — Vancouver-Quadra) suggested Canada might at least offer transport planes to the embattled French and native forces now in a "very serious" predicament in the face of Communist onslaughts.

To that he coupled a call for a realistic approach to the Far Eastern situation, Canada taking steps to help bring stability and guidance there by moving for a general Pacific alliance along the lines of NATO.

It might already be too late because the western powers had looked too long upon the scattered wars in that area as isolated conflicts rather than what they were —parts of a general Communist pattern of aggression.

TOO MUCH CAUTION

M. J. Caldwell, CCF leader, said it seems to him that the chief danger in Western diplomacy today "is that there will be, if anything, too much caution."

"Hesitation, delay and cautiousness may cause us to lose valuable opportunities for building peace," he said.

To him, the recent Russian overtures contained indications of a profound change in Russian outlook, if not in policy, a change such as had never appeared in all the long Stalin regime.

But it would be unrealistic to expect a complete reversal of the Russian position generally. It would be foolish, for instance, to expect the Russians to free their satellites overnight as President Eisenhower appeared to have asked.

A Korean armistice, offers to settle other Eastern problems, moves to reunite Germany, discussions of an Austrian peace treaty—those were the steps the West should take one by one.

NOT BEEN ASKED

Mr. Pearson replied Canada has not been asked to help the French in Indo-China and he has no reason to believe Canada will be until Indo-China becomes a member of the United Nations.

The government felt it would be unwise to take the initiative in trying to form a Pacific pact along the lines of NATO because the United States thinks such a move would be premature.

He was not inclined to agree either with Mr. Coldwell's view that the West is showing too much caution in dealing with Russia at this time. The official Canadian view was that "we should be very careful indeed.

Mr. Pearson threw little new light on developments or on the government's attitude. He said it is too early to tell whether truce talks at Panmunjom will be successful, but he did express the hope and the feeling that the United Nations' American negotiators wouldn't break off negotiations there without a chance first being given to Canada and other UN powers with troops in Korea to say what they think of such a step.

As for NATO, the recent meeting in Paris had decided it would be folly for the West to drop its guard at this time.

He said that while Russia may be softening her military approach, she simultaneously may be increasing efforts to break the West economically. The Russians were making new trade approaches, tempting to countries which must rely on trade to survive.

Health Unit Asks Dump Changes

CAMPBELLFORD (ENS)—May meeting of the town council was held on Monday evening. Mayor R. J. Locke presided and all members were present.

R. H. Wilson interviewed the council and requested that in order to facilitate the raising of funds for the proposed installation of artificial ice in the local arena, that the name of the arena be changed to the "Campbellford and Seymour Community Arena."

W. H. Carlton, director of the Northumberland Music Festival requested a grant for this purpose and the sum of $10 was allotted.

Dr. Horner of the Health Unit reported to council and suggested that better care be taken of the town dump, that fences be repaired and that the practice of burning the refuse there be discontinued. Councillor Burgess reported that these problems were being attended to.

A report was received from the department of highways that the town's request for a grant of $21,000 had been reduced to $13,000. Tenders were received for the levelling of the canal bank, as far south as the boundary, and these were left over for consideration.

Treasurer Ibey reported that it had been ascertained that the town employees could join the Blue Cross group.

The Public Utilities Commission asked council's permission to establish a sinking fund. This matter was left over till next meeting of the council when the chairman of the PUC will be present to explain the matter.

The matter of selling the parking lot on Front St. North to the IOOF was left over until legal advice could be obtained regarding the right-of-way through the property.

The resignation of Chief Constable Cargin was accepted and it was decided to advertise for applicants for the position. Chief Constable Cargin was granted the sum of $100 for the extra duties he had performed while the night constable's position was being filled.

The week of May 18-23 has been set aside as clean-up week. The council is co-operating with the Chamber of Commerce in this project.

The Hospital Board requested that the town's grant to the hospital be paid by May 15.

The question of the assessment of a garden lot on Market St. was left with the chairman of the property, finance and legal committee to see if some agreable solution couldt not be reached.

Start New School By Mid-June

LINDSAY (ENS) — A special meeting of St. Mary's Separate School Board was told last night that work on the new St. Mary's school for boys at the corner of St. Lawrence Street and Glenelg Street, will probably commence during the second week of June.

The architects of the new building, Servos and Carley of Toronto, were present and told the board that a drawing of the new school should be in their hands within a week. Several deails relative to the construction of the building were yet to be cleared up. They include the removal of a house and a building on the site.

One feature of the meeting that will interest the young people of Lindsay this year, is that instead of being demolished to make way for the building, the St. Mary's school for boys at the corner of St. Lawrence Street and Glenelg Street, will probably commence during the second week of June. This in face of the possibility that the Lindsay tennis club courts may be done away this year, gives at least another year of tennis for some of the town's players.

The start of the annual bishop's appeal in St. Mary's diocese Lindsay will be heralded next week by the appearance at a special dinner of the men of St. Mary's workers organization, of Bishop Gerald Berry, of Peterborough. The dinner meeting will be held Monday night and the campaign is to start on Thursday, May 14th. Several other speakers will take part in the program of the evening, including Msgr. J. V. McAuley, district chairman Vince Cole, of Lindsay, Mills and Joseph Murphy.

IODE Presents Final Concert

CAMPBELLFORD (ENS). — Final Sunday evening concert in a series sponsored by the Bemersyde Chapter IODE in co-operation with the Campbellford Citizens' Band, was held in the Aron Theatre on Sunday, with Mrs. Donald Bennett as mistress of ceremonies. The program opened with two selections by the band, "The Great Little Army" and "L'Eschediantina," followed by two piano duets "Polonaise Militaire" and Brahms' "Hungarian Rhapsody No. 5" were played by Marion Twigg and Buddy White. A male sextette composed of Paul Hendricks, Ken Ferguson, Ken McFarlane, Elmer Kelly, Gerald Ferguson, and Bill Hendricks, sang two groups of songs.

The second group of band selections was conducted by Assistant Bandmaster Peter Battman, "Father of Victory" and "A Waltz Dream." Two vocal selections by Mrs. F. G. DeCarrol and Mrs. J. O. Benor were much enjoyed, as was a violin solo by Bandmaster Don Bennett. Gerald Taylor, with the accordion played three selections.

Miss Dorothy Kingston, on behalf of the Bemersyde Chapter, thanked the artists and all who had helped to make the concert a success.

The final band selections were "Asleep in the Deep" and a novelty number "Comic Tattoo."

Acocmpanists for the evening were Miss Marion Twigg, Miss Irene Stephen, and Mrs. Donald Bennett.

Local Soldier In Thick Korea Fighting

A native of Peterborough whose mother lives in Campbellford was singled out for his part in the savage fighting in Korea over the weekend when Red Chinese attempted to run rough-shod over the Canadian troops.

The soldier, Pte. Keith Schweier is a son of Mrs. Alta Schweier of Campbellford who formerly lived in Peterborough. A brother Lionel and a sister Beverly live in Campbellford with their mother. Another sister is married, Mrs. Joan Hillis, 339 Aylmer St., Peterborough.

Pte. Schweier left his bunker during the heavy fighting to help a patrol that was picking up Canadian wounded. At the bottom of a valley he and Cpl. Bob Greenaway of Simcoe saw three Chinese and then the light of a flare showed them Chinese soldiers all around them.

They killed the three nearest and then began carrying a wounded man 250 yards up the line.

"A group of Chinese passed very close because we couldn't move very fast," Pte. Schweier said. "Greenaway challenged them because we weren't sure if they were members of the RoK army or not. The Chinese didn't fire when challenged, but just laughed and went past."

PTE. KEITH SCHWEIER

When Pte. Schweier returned to his gunpit, he found Chinese systematically looting the bunkers.

"I found one of them coming out of a bunker carrying my boots, so I shot him and took the boots back," he said.

While Schweier and Greenaway were looking for a bunker where they could dig in, they met two Chinese who hurled grenades at them. They were knocked down by the blasts, but they managed to kill the Chinese.

Gains Interest In District Co-op Housing Scheme

The co-operative housing policy which Father Frank A. Marrocco has been developing in Ottawa during the last year or more has moved into the central area of the province already with evidence that it has passed the tentative stage.

Groups in Peterborough and Lindsay are reported in organization and study of the co-operative plan, and in Cobourg some considerable interest has been expressed. It will likely lead to action.

The co-operative idea invites people to help one another in building houses for themselves and their families. It is directed at ownership and a sound place in the community, but, as reported in the Examiner some months ago, the first step is to study the principles of co-operation in the acquiring of homes. In that preparation nearly a year is spent in collective approach to the undertaking, partly to avoid mistakes which experience has marked for anticipation for those joining a new co-operative group.

Father Marrocco, son of a Peterborough home, has specialized in sociology, and is evidently projecting his work toward practical ends.

Recent information is to the effect that the Peterborough group has already made advance in studying of the subject, that Lindsay interest is keen, and that prospects point to a third group in Cobourg.

By this co-operative plan men obtain possession of houses for themselves. It emphasizes the family home, and in that objective they assist one another on a practical basis that is especially concerned about sound methods and a minimum of cost.

The Nation's Wealth For Nation's Health

If the Government at Ottawa announced a five-year plan for spending forty-two million dollars on rockets to go to the moon, or forty-two millions to put flags on all highways, there would be an uproar of interest. When it announced last Friday a five-year plan to to spend forty-two million dollars on public health, there was hardly a ripple of excitement. There should have been. The good health of a people is a country's most important asset; a plan to promote it is more useful, and even more idealistic, than shooting rockets to the moon and bedecking highways. And, as the Minister of Health the Hon. Paul Martin said in announcing the extended system of grants, "concern for the health of the citizen is one of the surest marks of an enlightened society."

• • •

Five years ago the late Prime Minister King announced a National Health Plan. Now, this month, another five-year plan, supplementary to the continuing 1948 program, is to be inaugurated. It is a plan involving grants for three sections of society and public health: child and maternal health; rehabilitation of handicapped persons; extension of laboratory and radiological services. Like the National Health Plan itself, the new grants are to be made effective and administered through co-operation with the Provinces. One of the notable achievements of the present Federal Government and the various Provincial governments is their harmony and co-operation in the matter of public health. In no other branch of Canadian public life and politics have there ever existed such close relations for the welfare of citizens.

• • •

The National Health Plan announced on May 14th, 1948, provided for the spending by the Provinces of $165,000,000 in federal funds for the following broad purposes: (1) to survey their own health programs and future needs, (2) to help overcome serious shortages in hospital accommodation, (3) to raise the level of training of health workers, and to encourage health research, (4) to improve public health facilities and services in rural and urban Canada, and (5) to intensify efforts to combat crippling conditions in children, venereal disease, mental illness, rheumatism and arthritis, tuberculosis and cancer. A hundred millions have already been spent, in accordance with the plan.

• • •

The results? They are not visibly spectacular, but every corner of Canada has witnessed new hospital building, and individuals throughout the country have felt the benefits of the Federal-Provincial co-operative efforts. Sixty per cent. of the entire population is now served by health units. Two million free chest X-rays are given each year. Five thousand health workers have been trained. Instead of seventeen, there are now seventy-seven mental health clinics. More than 25,000 T.B. patients have been provided with streptomycin and other drugs, free of charge. Five hundred thousand infants have been given B.C.G. protection against tuberculosis. Cancer diagnostic services have been provided to more than a hundred thousand persons.

• • •

What is the purpose of the new plan to spend $42,000,000 in the next five years? It is primarily to fill gaps in the service not covered by the National Health Program heretofore, and which have been noticed because of it. First, the Child and Maternal Health phase ($7,500,000). Mr. Martin summed it thus:

"At the pre ent time, the level of health services for mothers and children varies considerably from province to province and even within provinces. We want to see these essential services more uniformly developed across Canada. We want to make sure that, as far as possible, every Canadian mother can have access to proper health care before, during and after the birth of her child."

There can be no question that this sort of grant is substantially helpful. In 1947, before the National Health Plan there were 16,333 infant deaths. In 1951 there were 14,584—a total saving of ten thousand infant lives in the five-year period.

• • •

The grants for rehabilitation services ($4,500,000 in the next five years) are to help develop suitable services for handicapped persons not already provided for by government or voluntary agencies. Funds will thus, under co-ordinated plans, be made available for training of professional rehabilitation workers, for medical rehabilitation equipment, and for rehabilitation health services. Those suffering from many disabling conditions which can cripple the body and the human spirit as well, will benefit.

• • •

The third kind of Federal grant to the Provinces will be the largest, totalling thirty million dollars in five years. This will be for laboratory and radiological services which doctors need for diagnosis and treatment, and which may not be available to them and their patients now outside of big hospitals and clinical centres. There is no intention to duplicate present services, but rather to extend them. It is felt that by improving the facilities now available to present practitioners for diagnosing illness outside of hospitals, the need for additional hospital accommodation will be lessened, and that better distribution of doctors throughout the country may result.

• • •

The National Health Program is a far-reaching piece of social legislation. Its continuance and extension should do much to ensure the highest possible standard of health for all Canadians.

A New Pattern Of University Headship?

We are highly interested in a strong break with tradition which the University of Toronto has made. Its governing body has selected an educator as chancellor. Unlike his famous predecessors (excepting perhaps Canon Cody), unlike his immediate predecessor in office Governor-General Massey. Dr. Samuel Beatty is primarily a teacher and university official, and indeed is not well known outside his profession. He is a mathematician and was formerly Dean of the Faculty of Arts in Toronto.

We expect that the Governors have made an excellent choice but we cannot help remarking the sudden departure from a long and world-wide university tradition. That is, that the Chancellor should be a dignitary, bringing the world of affairs and state to the university and high chair of the chancellorship. Chancellors have generally been named (as at Oxford and Cambridge, London and Edinburgh, Queen's and McGill) who were men prominent in politics, state or business. They came to their positions independent of campus politics and not intimate with faculty chess. They gave to the university their great names (and sometimes some wealth), and the influence of their experience in finance, government, industry, the army or diplomacy. Chancellors have been the men of affairs; vice-chancellors, principals, or whatever the title of the active head of the university, have been the scholars, educators and academic administrators.

The change may be healthy. For many years now North American universities have increasingly tended to appoint presidents or principals who are not primarily educators, but who are business men, organizers with a flair for raising money, shaking hands and finding their ways around politics. Thus, if the president or principal is not a scholar and educator, it is well to have a chancellor who is. Further, if a university has two strong men of affairs at its top, clashes of wills and plans are likely to result.

President Sydney Smith of Toronto is happily both a man of affairs and an educator. But if the University of Toronto governors in naming the new Chancellor wished to establish a good counter-balancing trend, they have succeeded. Vice-Chancellor and President Smith is an extremely able, dextrous administrator, thoroughly versed in political conditions and power personalities. He walks with the great of business and state. Dr. Samuel Beatty, as Chancellor, is a mathematical scholar, a former professor, and an educator.

Greeted In Absentia

It was the Hon. James Sinclair, MP for Coast-Capilano, B.C., and Minister of Fisheries, who showed up at the Chamber of Commerce-Outboard Marine dinner last night. Mr. Lester Pearson, Minister of External Affairs, was too preoccupied with external affairs in internal government to leave the House of Commons. His department's estimates were under review, and Mr. Pearson has so often to be absent from the House because of diplomatic duties, that he could not come to Peterborough last night, a decision he had reluctantly to make at the last minute. Our welcome to him in this column yesterday was therefore given him in absentia.

We mention this now not because we would withdraw greetings to a visitor who did not arrive, but because we have not had the opportunity to welcome his able and interesting substitute and colleague. Mr. Sinclair was heartily received, his hosts were extremely grateful that he could come on such short notice, and his audience at the dinner was delighted and quickened by his address. Come again, Mr. Sinclair, next time with your own colours fully flying.

NOTE AND COMMENT

The saddest community in the British Isles today is the Scilly Isles. They have paid no income tax since Athelstan conquered them in 938. Chancellor Butler's budget last month ended this immunity. Ah, well, they've had one taxless millenium and the inhabitants shouldn't be as silly as to expect another.

Churchill And Malenkov?

By Sebastian Haffner

ONE SENTENCE in the British Prime Minister's foreign political statement in the House of Commons on April 20 has perhaps been given less attention than it deserves. It was the one in which Sir Winston Churchill—Mr. Churchill, as he then still was—expressed in carefully chosen words his hope for formal "or informal" contacts at the highest level between all "or some" of the Powers chiefly concerned in the great questions now under long-range discussion between Moscow, Washington and London.

❖ ❖ ❖

A FEW DAYS AGO, on April 29, in reply to a Parliamentary question, Sir Winston repeated his point, and this time the notion of a formal meeting had entirely faded out, while the prospect of an informal meeting seemed to have acquired a more discernible shape. "I should be very glad," Sir Winston said, "to learn that informal talks could be held at the highest level and that they would lead to 'serious businesslike discussions'." He did not repeat that these informal talks might be held by only "some" and not "all" of the Powers concerned. Nor did he need to. The point emerged automatically from the contrast between his stressed and repeated willingness to enter into such talks and the simultaneous statements from Washington that no meeting of heads of Government was under preparation or discussion, and that none would or could be held without thorough diplomatic preparation. In other words, insofar as a personal meeting of head of Government is considered not as the formal culmination, but as the informal forerunner of "serious businesslike discussion," President Eisenhower is not in the running for such a meeting; but Sir Winston Churchill definitely and avowedly is. If such a meeting should come about, it would be a Big Two, not a Big Three affair.

❖ ❖ ❖

THIS sends one's mind inevitably back into the past. During the war, too, there had been, half-way between the Teheran and Yalta Conference, a Big Two meeting: the Churchill-Stalin conference in Moscow in October, 1944, when an attempt was made—rather against the trend of the then prevailing American foreign policy of Roosevelt— to hammer out a division of spheres of interest between Russia and Britain for the impending period of liberation and armistice in Europe. Nor was the attempt entirely unsuccessful. Indeed, it is striking that while Roosevelt's idealistic attempt to make America and Russia run in harness, ordering a united world together, soon resulted in the cold war, the cold war itself has by now resulted in Europe at least, in a division of spheres of influence between Russia and the West very much on lines such as those agreed between Churchill and Stalin in October, 1944. The Churchill-Stalin settlement has somehow reasserted itself by sheer force of events, while the Rooseveltian vision has evaporated, and the policies of forcible ideological expansion, which might perhaps be associated with the names of Zhdanov and Dulles, have proved impracticable.

❖ ❖ ❖

CHURCHILL'S repeated hints that he might not be averse to an informal and exploratory tete-a-tete with Mr. Malenkov are entirely in keeping with his life-long views on the conduct and style of grand diplomacy. Churchill has been a life-long believer in direct and personal talks "at the highest levels," and in relegating formal diplomacy to the tidying-up of details rather than charging it with the preparation of basic agreements. He believes in a meeting of minds between the men who have to make the really big decisions, and he has never shied away from long journeys and personal exertions to bring it about. As late as in January of this year he acted on this belief when he tried to establish an informal "meeting of minds" with President elect Eisenhower (as he then was) even before his formal inauguration. Eisenhower does not seem to have responded well on that occasion, but Churchill has been taught by the experience of a long and rather glorious life-time to take the rough with the smooth and not to be discouraged by an occasional failure. By and large, his method has, over the decades, had more successes than failures, and it is not surprising that he should stick to it.

❖ ❖ ❖

THERE is a second reason which might make him wish to find out personally what is really in Malenkov's mind and how far he can get with him. This is the fact that in its approach to a possible detente and peace settlement the new Russian government has shown a line of reasoning which is rather more in keeping with the perennial British policy— a policy based on realism and moderation often summed up in the catch-phrase "the balance of power"— than with the all-or-nothing idealism of Roosevelt, now revived by President Eisenhower. British political thinking in general, and Churchillian thinking in particular, feels more at home with an approach which, on the face of it at least, seems to aim at a businesslike settlement of outstanding questions on a basis of honestly admitted differences of fundamental outlook and interests, than with an emotional and perfectionist pursuit of unattainable ideals of universal brotherhood— a pursuit which in case of failure always threatens to lead to friction, bitterness, and unavoidable war. Britain is traditionally the balancer of the world, and she has a habit of putting a limit both on her alliances and on her enmities. Churchill would only resume the main British diplomatic tradition by exploring how far Britain can still serve the stability and peace of the world in her accustomed manner in the conditions of our time.

❖ ❖ ❖

THIS does not mean a renunciation of the Atlantic Alliance, which is itself an important factor in the world balance of power. But the Atlantic Alliance will become operative only in case of war; and at the moment it is a question not of winning a war, but of averting it, and of ending a long period of unsettlement by a settled peace. In this task, British diplomacy may have an independent role to play.

A BIG QUESTION

"What," someone asked a parliamentary candidate, "will you do if you're elected?"

"Good gracious!" exclaimed the startled candidate. "What will I do if I'm not!"

THINGS ARE LOOKING UP

Labour And The Law

(MONTREAL STAR)

THE Supreme Court of Canada has sustained judgments of the Supreme Court of British Columbia, which fined trade union men for contempt of a court order. The court order was an injunction, a process organized labor dislikes but which the Supreme Court in effect holds to be a process of law open to anyone to use if he can establish that he is or is likely to be injured by someone else's act. A labor dispute is not different from any other dispute which may cause damage.

The International Woodworkers of America picketed a freighter loading lumber at Nanaimo. Ship owners obtained an injunction to restrain the union and a number of union members defied the court order. They were arrested and fined and a union leader was sent to jail for three months.

It is of course proper and legal to challenge the issuance of an injunction. It is a matter for the courts to decide whether it has been properly issued. The picketers did not await this process but defied the court. Their argument in appeal was that if they were guilty of anything it was civil contempt and not a criminal offence. Both the B.C. Supreme Court and the Supreme Court of Canada have now made it clear that to bring the administration of justice to scorn is a criminal offence. Moreover, as the final court of appeal held, the character of their conduct involved a public injury amounting to criminal contempt.

The point of this case is that where the criminal law is concerned there is not one law for the generality and another for persons involved in labor disputes. The issue is raised again in connection with Criminal Code revision now being carried out at Ottawa. The law makes it an offence to break a contract when the breach will hold up a public utility or common carrier. An addition in the revised code provides that there shall be no offence on the part of employees or unions in case of a legal strike. Some union groups would extend this protection to men engaged in illegal strikes. Mr. Garson is surely right in refusing to ask Parliament to condone an illegality.

Unconsidered Trifles

Pal: So what if your girl walked out on you? There are other fish in the sea!

Hal: Yeah, but she walked out with all my bait.

❖ ❖ ❖

On the day the World Series was to open, an office boy approached the boss.

"Oh, come, come now," snapped the boss. "You're not going to drag out that old fable about your grandmother having passed away."

"Oh, no, sir," responded the boy. "She's home on furlough."

❖ ❖ ❖

There had been a motor accident, and the landlord of an inn had carried the motorist into his pub. When the man recovered slightly, he asked what had happened.

"Well sir, you had a very bad smash," said the landlord, "but I managed to bring you to."

"Did you?" murmured the damaged one. "I don't remember. Do you mind bringing me two more?"

❖ ❖ ❖

Addressing the students in a school in a small town, a school board trustee said, "Children, I want to talk to you for a few moments about one of the most wonderful things in the whole world. What is it that throbs away, beats away, never stopping, never ceasing, whether you are awake or asleep, night or day, week in and week out, month in and month out, year in and year out, without any volition on your part, hidden away in the depths as it were, unseen by you, throbbing, throbbing, throbbing, rhythmically all your whole life?"

During the following pause for oratorical effect a small voice was heard from the rear of the classroom:

"I know, Mister! It's the gas meter!"

Little West Coast Ship

(Vancouver Sun)

Not much for size as even coast vessels go, the old Princess Maquinna will be remembered fondly by many thousands — especially those who live on the rugged West Coast of Vancouver Island.

Now she's in Vancouver to be made into an ore barge. She'll have some useful years yet plying the Inside Passage to Alaska — but what a comedown for the gallant old work horse of the C.P.R.'s coast fleet!

There are always chances of excitement and peril on any part of the B.C. coast for any ship — even for a barge. But how she'll miss the high purpose that attended her voyages on the stormy West Coast. For she was for many years the only link the people had with the "outside."

She brought their freight and took out their pulp and other products. She carried them when they travelled in or out. She brought them new friends.

Better Batteries

(Calgary Albertan)

In 40 to 50 below weather, the automobile storage battery has an efficiency of only 10 to 15 per cent of normal. The Defence Research Council at Ottawa is experimenting with methods of correcting that, according to an official of the council who is visiting the West.

In the same category is the news from Philadelphia that a large storage battery manufacturer has developed a battery that will last much longer than usual.

By mixing silver with the lead in the positive plates inside the battery, in very precise quantities and proportions, the usual deterioration has been avoided. Whereas the normal life is around 35,000 miles, one such trial battery is still in service after 150,000 miles. It outlasted two cars and is now in the third. It has never been recharged.

Bible Message

(From the Authorized Version)

Seeing then that we have a great high priest, that is passed into the heavens, Jesus the Son of God, let us hold fast our profession. For we have not an high priest which cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities; but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin. (Heb. 4:14, 15.)

❖ ❖ ❖

Though he were a Son, yet learned he obedience by the things which he suffered; and being made perfect, he became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him. (Heb. 5:8, 9.)

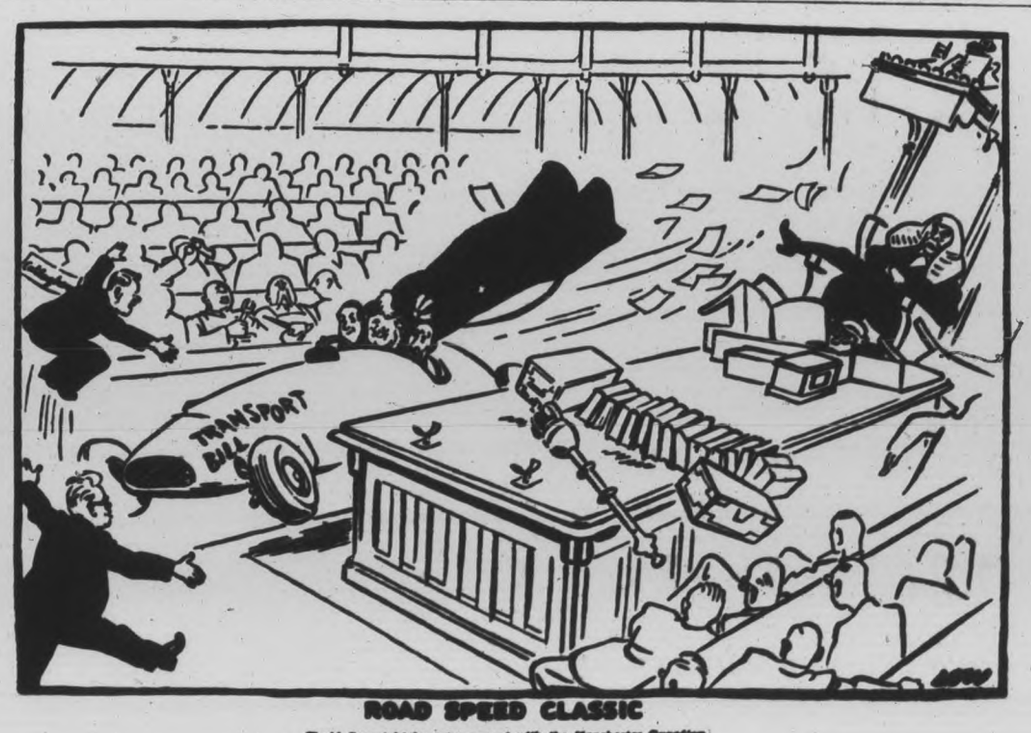
❖ ❖ ❖

Having, therefore, brethren, boldness to enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus, by a new and living way, which he hath consecrated for us, through the veil, that is to say, his flesh . . . Let us draw near with a true heart in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water. Let us hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering; (for he is faithful that promised.) (Heb. 10: 19, 20, 22, 23.)

Busybodies Begone!

(Brantford Expositor)

The current clamour in Ottawa and other good cities against the spate of supposedly "indecent" literature is not a new phenomenon. This sort of thing has been breaking out, periodically, for a great many years.



Frank Swinnerton, the noted author and editor, writing in the current issue of his paper, John O' London's Weekly, sketches something of the history of censorship and attempt at censorship in England since the early days of Hardy, Moore, Shaw and Wells.

There was, he points out, no official censorship of books (there was of plays), but there was a censorship self-imposed by the publishers, librarians and booksellers.

Mr. Swinnerton (who has had some of his own relatively inoffensive books banned from the Republic of Ireland, from the German prison camps for British prisoners during the Second World War and from Czechoslovakia when the Communists took over) is objective and even sympathetic toward censorship and censors. For the latter he feels much pity. But, while admitting some provocation and even seeming justification for it, censorship as such he finds intolerable.

It allows for no vision, he says. "In forbidding what it considers undesirable, it takes a mighty step towards forbidding everything new or creative . . . Dirty books are written by bores and read by cretins; and it is better to let bores and cretins fester together than subject all books, original, poor, tedious and flashing, to the control of restrictive busybodies, self-styled intellectuals, or that worst of current evils, people with fixed ideas.

With that we agree. We concede to nobody the right to tell us what we should or must or must not read. The over-zealous puritans or bigots are doubtless sincere in their desire to save mankind, but they would be less of a nuisance if they would kindly concentrate on saving themselves and leaving us to do the same—in our own way.

In Korea Two Years Unit Is Returning To Canada

By BILL BOSS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

IN KOREA (CP)—"The boys who keep the show on the road," the men of the 191st Canadian Infantry Workshop, have been relieved by the 23rd Canadian Infantry Workshop and are en route back to Petawawa, Ont., their old home.

All members belong to the Royal Canadian Electrical and Mechanical Engineers, the technicians who service the army's tanks, trucks, jeeps, guns and other weapons, the stoves, compasses, binoculars and almost everything else.

As a unit, 191 has been here longer than most others in the brigade—two years. Others have been rotated after a year here. However, that's not as bad as it sounds: rotation has been going steadily on a man-for-man basis.

FOUR COMMANDERS

The workshop has had four commanding officers in Korea—Majors Ed Hallam of Ottawa, who brought it over; R. C. Lane of Kingston, J. M. McLaughlin of Ottawa and Amherst, N.S., and Don Campbell of Springhill, N.S.

Campbell is not returning to Ottawa with the unit. He now is at headquarters, 1st commonwealth division, as second-in-command of all electrical and mechanical engineers in the division.

Capt. A. L. Macdonell of Vancouver is commanding en route to Petawawa, where Maj. H. H. E. Eerb of Ottawa takes over.

MUCH WORK DONE

The workshop's 187 technicians turned out a terrific volume of work.

They handled any job not requiring more than 30 hours' work to complete. They changed engines, installed transmissions and the like for anything from a jeep to a tank. Jobs requiring more work went back to United States Army base workshops.

They also had to estimate the cost of repairs needed on major items returned. Jeep jobs, for instance, costing less than $1,000 entitled Canada to free new equipment replacements. Jobs costing more meant Canada had to buy the replacing equipment at full value.

MONTH'S WORK

A typical month here saw 191 complete major repairs on 50 wheeled vehicles, seven tracked vehicles, 31 generators, 149 instruments, 126 small arms, three 25-pounder field guns, 92 stoves and 110 miscellaneous other items.

The workshop is on paddy and barley fields bulldozed and pounded by traffic into standings for shops and tents. But the bulldozing destroyed the drainage system worked out by hundreds of years of terrace farming, and during rains the area is a quagmire.

Barbed-wire fences controlled by three penitentiary-like watchtowers surround the shop. Two soldiers man each searchlight - eqquipped tower nightly to discourage thieves.

As technicians and able scroungers, workshop members rigged up creature comforts for themselves. They built their own eight-head showers, operated by Craftsman Roy Guindon of Charlottetown. They dammed a stream to get the water and mounted combined pump-and-heater on a trailer.

BUILT OWN CANTEEN
